STORIES OF THE "REPUBLIC" AND ITS ACHIEVEMENTS IN THE "GOOD OLD DAYS"

How Newspaper Scooped Hated Rival in a Famous Murder Case—They Had Beer and Sandwiches in the Editorial Rooms in Those Times.

ON a night in the early '80s a young man entered the office of Anton Huebler, Chief of Police of St. Louis. The Chief recognized his visitor as a reporter for the Republic. Anticipating a question he said: "No, we haven't any clew to the murderer of Billy Louderman." The reporter laughed. "That's what I came to see you about, Chief," he said. "We know who killed Billy Louderman. We know where he is and we know who his accomplices were and where they are. We've got the story all in type, names and everything."

The Chief reached for his hat. "Come on, let's go out and get them," he said.

"Not yet," said the reporter. "We want a scoop on this story. It's our story and we've got to beat the Globe-Democrat. We can't tell you now who and where these men are, but we'll tell you just before edition time and then you can go out and arrest them and let us know when you've done it. Then we can start the presses going and come out with the scoop."

The plan was carried out to the letter and the next morning the Republic was out with a detailed story of the solution of a murder mystery which had puzzled the police for six days.

On the same morning the Globe-Democrat carried a short item which said the Louderman murder was as much a mystery as ever and the police had little hope of solving it.

But the Republic will never duplicate that scoop. In the 112th year of its existence it was purchased and suppressed last Thursday by the Globe-Democrat.

Unusual Precautions Taken to Prevent Leak of Story.

Billy Louderman was a rich young man of prominent family. He was shot and killed at Sixth and Chestnut streets early one morning. Republic reporters ran down his slayer, Patsy Early, and his accomplices. Before the time set for his trial Early killed himself by leaping from a third-tier balcony in the city jail.

While the young reporter was arranging with the Chief to perfect the scoop there were mysterious goings-on in the Republic office. The outer doors of the editorial and mechanical departments were locked and no one was permitted to enter or depart. No chance was taken that news of the scoop would be carried to the alert ears of Globe-Democrat spies. There were no telephones in those days and it was arranged that a policeman on foot should hurry from headquarters to the newspaper office when the arrests had been made.

Press time approached and passed and still the messenger did not appear. Then another thought came to the scoop defenders. If lights were seen burning in the Republic office after press time the Globe-Democrat, which, like the night, had a thousand eyes, might become suspicious and ask the police what the Republic was holding back for. At the last minute the hated rival might spike the scoop. The lights in the Republic office were coal oil lamps. These were all put out and the guardians of the scoop, including editors, reporters, printers, stereotypers and pressmen waited in darkness until the rap of a policeman's club on the door told them the arrests had been made and the story was released. The scoop would have been on the street a few minutes sooner but for the necessity of re-lighting the coal oil lamps. The working up of the Louderman scoop was credited to William Vincent Byars, then a reporter for the Republic, though he received his original tip from Gaston Servier, a reporter for a German language newspaper.

Only One of Many Big News Beats of Golden Days

This was only one of the big news achievements of the Republic in its golden age and it was typical of comparatively early days in modern journalism when newspaper methods were much different from those of the present.

Facilities for news gathering were sadly deficient in those days. One former Republic reporter recalled that the first telephone used by the Republic was in the business office and was regarded as such a nuisance that the office clerk, who doubled as a nightwatchman, threatened to smash it with an ax. Another old timer remembered that when the first telephone was placed in the editorial room the editors and reporters would leave the receiver off the hook so that the bell would not bother them.

The use of the telepone as a time-saver in receiving news was not appreciated in those days. The "thing" was an innovation, just as typewriters were a few years later. It was a common practice for the reporter to go out and get a story and write it on the street car while returning to the office. Some of the copy turned in recorded bumpy street crossings with the accuracy of a seismograph.

In the gathering of exclusive news there was great dependence on the initiative and wide acquaintance of individual reporters. Police reports and records were not as accessible as now and it required more "digging" to get crime news, which in those days was considered the most interesting of newspaper reading.

One of the Republic's big scoops was landed by the late Frank R. O'Neil, who in time became editor of the Republic. This was no less an achievement than "bringing in" Frank James. Present-day accounts of this big scoop differ. One version is that O'Neil learned that Frank James, after the killing of his outlaw brother, Jesse James, had gone to Kentucky and was in hiding there. O'Neil, according to this account, went to Kentucky, interviewed James and induced him to return to Missouri and surrender to Gov. Crittenden, who pardoned him for all his outlawries and set him free.

Another version is that O'Neil learned through one of his lines of information at Jefferosn City that James had revealed his whereabouts to State officials and had signified his willingness to surrender. On this information O'Neil went to James, obtained a remarkable interview from him in which the bandit told the story of his life and crime. Returning to St. Louis O'Neil wrote the interview and released it the day of the outlaw's surrender.

Confession Obtained by Republic Reporter in Notable Murder Case.

William Vincent Byars scored a scoop which in those days was considered to be of first magnitude when he obtained a long written statement from Charles F. Kring, who was charged with having killed Dora Bremser. This was a famous case every development of which was printed at great length in the newspapers. All efforts to interview Kring had been futile until Byars induced him to write a statement. Kring later was freed by a Supreme Court ruling.

John Fay, now Chicago representative of a New York newspaper, was a Republic reporter in the days when O'Neil was city editor and managing editor, the days generally described by old newspapermen as the golden age of the Republic. Fay is also remembered for a scoop in being the first to learn of the mysterious disappearance of Zerelda Garrison, daughter of a wealthy St. Louis family. William Marion Reedy, now owner of Reedy's Mirror, came into reportorial prominence through the discovery that it was Kitty Mulcahy and no other who killed a man in front of the Second Presbyterian Church at Seventeenth and Locust streets.

Commenting on this preponderance of criminal news in the period when the Republic was at its best Reedy, the day after the paper's purchase by the Globe-Democrat, said the value of business news and most other news of a constructive character was not appreciated in those days. He recalled that he once went into the office with a story to the effect that a contract had been awarded to a prominent firm of contractors to build a new ornamental entrance to the Fair Grounds. Instead of being welcomed as the captor of a scoop, he said, he was very sharply asked how much he had been paid to try to get anything like that in the paper.

Reedy Tells How Business Items Were Suspicious.

"After you brought in a business item in those days the staff would watch you for a couple of weeks to see if you acquired a new hat," said Reedy. "Thus it was the reporter turned to criminal stories as the safest commodity to handle."

Of course crime alone did not monopolize the columns of the newspapers of those days, but other classes of news were handled under the direction of the owners of the paper and in a way to suit their purpose.

In the '80s the Republic, as Democratic organ and representative of certain business interests, had great power. It is credited with having dictated the location of the Eads Bridge after vigorously opposing the building of the bridge as a competitor of the Wiggins Ferry Co. It also dictated the location of the Merchants' Exchange Building, thereby greatly enhancing the value of its own property at Third and Chestnut streets. It dictated Democratic Federal appointments, the selection of national committeemen and the nomination of gubernatorial and senatorial candidates.

At various times in the old days of "personal journalism" it had tre-

TEN THOUSAND dollars will be the goal of the twentieth Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund, which annually provides Christmas cheer for the city's poor. The Executive Committee of the Festival Association, at its first meeting of the season last Tuesday, decided in favor of a larger Coliseum festival this year than ever before, in view of the fact that last year the poor children of the city were prevented from having their usual entertainment because of the influenza epidemic, their toys being delivered to their homes by messengers.

Nearly 1200 baskets were distributed among the destitute individuals and families of St. Louis last Christmas at an average cost of $2.89 per basket. Because of the unprecedented advance in the price of all foodstuffs, the Basket Committee estimates that it will cost approximately $4 to fill each basket this year—an increase of over 38 per cent over last year's cost.

Dr. George B. Mangold, chairman of the Basket List Committee, will have charge of the list of persons who are to receive baskets. The list will be closed about 10 days before Christmas, and the number to be distributed will not be definitely known until a few days later, when all investigations shall have been completed.

No Dinner for Homeless Men.

The Executive Committee decided again to omit the dinner formerly provided by the Festival Association for homeless men. The last dinner of this kind was given in 1916 at a cost of $1019.

The economy of organized buying, and of buying sufficiently in advance to avoid having to pay increased holiday prices is indicated by the prices at which this year's Christmas Festival gifts were purchased. Robert D. Corlett, chairman of the Gift-Purchasing and Distribution Committee, reported having to pay advanced prices for toys and children's gifts of all kinds, although he took the precaution to make his purchases as long ago as last June. Since then there have been further advances, averaging something like 66 per cent on some of the goods that he bought. Were he to buy his goods at the present time they would cost $1087.64 more than was paid last June—thus the children are the gainers by over $1000 worth of presents, for the gift chairman is not authorized to spend much more than the amount he did, and if he had done his buying later he would have got much less for his money.

A large variety of presents was purchased, totaling close to 40,000 in number, and a special effort was made to obtain toys and other articles to suit all ages.

Over 5000 Dolls Purchased.

Over 5000 dolls are on hand for the girls—enough to insure that no "little mother" will be disappointed on Christmas day.

Toques or skating caps are another staple which is in this year's list of gifts. Sixty-five hundred were purchased and both boys' and girls' kinds are included. Of course, Christmas won't be Christmas without a certain amount of noise, so there will be horns—6000 of them, and 1500 wood crickets and the same number of wood noisemakers. Another of the larger items is rubber balls, of which 6000 have been purchased.

One of the important features of the gifts this year will be books, which are frequently used by the Festival Committee, because they not only please the children, but have an educational value as well. This year's assortment is as large as that of last year, and the total number of volumes to be distributed is 5000.

The books alone have advanced 25 per cent in price since their purchase, which helps to prove again that early Christmas shopping pays.

For the younger children there are 1000 picture books. The remaining 4000 are for children from 8 to 14 years of age and there are so many different kinds that no child will be able to guess in advance what he or she is going to receive. The list comprises a number of the "Alger" books for boys, the "Campfire" books for girls, and "Peter Rabbit" and "Little Classics" are among the others.

Display at Festival Headquarters.

Within the next few days samples of all of this year's toys will be put on display at Christmas Festival headquarters, 1101-03 Olive street, where inspection of them is invited, not only by children, but by grownups, that they may have a better idea of what they are being asked to contribute their money for when they encounter a Christmas Festival contribution list.

Although food prices are sharply higher than a year ago, the deserving families which receive dinners from the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association this year probably will fare better than usual. There will be a disposition to tuck in a little extra in the way of provisions rather than to do any stinting, and the baskets will contain about the same menu as last year.

Ten Thousand Little Guests Expected.

Miss Sara E. Edwards, chairman of the Tiny Tim Society urges all the Tiny Tims to write their letters to Santa Claus as soon as possible. Address your letters in care of the Post-Dispatch and Miss Edwards will see that they reach Santa in time that he will provide gifts for all the lame children in St. Louis.

Christmas Basket Lists Must Be Submitted by Tuesday Evening, Dec. 16

THE list of persons to whom Christmas dinners will be sent in baskets by the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association will be closed at 6 o'clock the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 16.

This date was fixed because of the work required in checking the list and endeavoring to see that all who need it receive the Christmas hospitality. Organizations or individuals having names to submit should send them in writing to Dr. George B. Mangold, chairman of the Basket List Committee, 2221 Locust street.

Arrangements are well under way for the big annual entertainment at the Coliseum on Christmas day, which it is estimated will be attended by more than 10,000 children. The show, which will take about an hour, will commence at 10:30 a. m., with the doors open at 9 o'clock, and will be concluded in time for the children to be home for their Christmas dinners. Mere sightseers will be rigidly excluded, in order to make room for every child possible.

The distribution of Christmas Festival lists will begin Tuesday or Wednesday of this week. As many of the larger donations as it is possible to obtain will be needed, but because of the many demands there have been for money the Festival Commtitee will make an even stronger appeal than last year for small gifts—for quarters, dimes and nickels. This will also be in line with the end toward which the committee is working, that of making this great annual hospitality so widespread and popular that the fund for it will be made up chiefly of small contributions.

Entirely new lists of offices and business places have been made up from the latest telephone and business directories and it will be the aim to place a contribution list in every place of business, large or small, in the city. Between 15,000 and 16,000 lists will be sent out.

How Lists Will Be Distributed.

The distribution of the lists will be in two ways. Young women workers will place them in the downtown district, and some of the distrib-

SUGAR TO GO UP AND HOGS DOWN, SAYS HOOVER, IN TALK ON FOOD AND BOLSHEVISM

Concerning Presidency, He Says He Would Like to "Assassinate" Man Suggesting Him as Candidate.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.

IN an interview today Herbert Hoover, late Food Administrator of the United States, and virtual food dictator of Europe, now here as a member of the President's second industrial conference, talked in the crisp, concise, rapid-fire Hoover way about sugar, hogs, Bolshevism and his attitude toward the presidency.

Sugar will go up, said Hoover; hogs will go down; Bolshevism will be eventually cracked. As for the presidency, said Hoover, "if anyone wants to make a candidate out of me let him put on his best suit of armor, for I'll assassinate him, if I can."

Hoover has facts, figures and the philosophy of food prices at his tongue's tip.

If he pauses, it is to make a rapid mental calculation; to multiply, say, a billion pounds or gallons or bushels of some commodity by a fractional increase of price in order to show the aggregate effect on the buying public.

Views on Sugar.

Take sugar, for instance, sugar in war time, under the regime of the Food Administration, sold at 11 cents a pound. It is now selling at 20 cents.

"Every cent of increase in the price of sugar means an additional bill of $80,000,000 to the American people," said Hoover. "The increase to date means a total bill of $720,000,000.

"It would be better to stop that increase than to bend all our energies toward keeping the corner grocer from profiteering."

The prospect of soaring sugar prices, according to Hoover, has been brought about by the failure of Washington to act on the recommendation of the Sugar Equalization Board, last summer, that the Cuban crop of 1919-20 be purchased as the crop of the preceding year had been. That crop was bought by the Government at 5½ cents a pound. The Cuban sugar producers offered to so sell this year at 6 cents. Two letters from the Equalization Board to Washington brought no results, and the Cuban producers withdrew their offer and threw open the crop to the world.

Price Began to Rise.

Not till October, said Hoover, did the Cuban producers seem to wake up to the true facts of the world's sugar shortage. Then the price of Cuban sugar began to rise. It is now at 15 to 16 cents, which means 20-cent sugar to the consumer. To get the Cuban sugar the United States must bid against foreign buyers.

"Now that the Department of Justice has abandoned its announced intention of controlling sugar, what is the solution?" Hoover was asked.

"The only solution," he replied, "would be for some agency of the Government to take the situation in hand, ration sugar to the consumer and cut down the supplies to candy and soft drink manufacturers.

"Sugar, as the Food Administration proved, is the easiest thing in the world to ration. We cut the consumption from a high level pre-war per capita of 84 pounds annually down to about 70 pounds. The consumption is now 94 pounds.

"Rationing would have a tendency to stop speculation and bring down prices; for the speculator would never know to what extent the rationing might reduce the market. Rationing, by bringing our consumption down to the level of our available supplies, would tend to decrease the price in the Cuban market. Then the Government, given the proper powers, could go in there and buy at a reasonable figure."

"Sugar," went on Hoover, "is both a luxury commodity and an essential commodity. The luxury end of the business, willing to pay any price to meet its needs, bids against the other end and runs up the price. It makes little difference to the candy manufacturer at what price sugar is sold; he will buy it at any price and continue to find a market for his product.

"It is essential in any scheme of regulation that the supplies to non-essential manufacturers be curtailed. No great hardship would result and the public interest would be served. Even with limited supplies, the candy makers will continue to make candy; they can use syrups, as they did during the war."

The certain fact that Hoover sees in the present chaotic sugar situation with wartime restrictions removed, with a sugar famine in prospect and with the Sugar Equalization Board about to go out of business, is that prices will go up. Twenty-cent sugar is not the limit.

Meantime, though Hoover didn't say so, Congress fights its partisan battles and the one thing most needed to restore the world to its normal equilibrium, ratification of the peace treaty by the United States, is indefinitely postponed.

Hoover did not connect the failure of the Congress to act on the treaty with the sugar shortage; he did mention the treaty in talking about hogs.

Hogs Not Fascinating.

The subject of hogs has not the same fascination for the housewife as that of sugar, but it has a deep and abiding interest for the Middle Western farmer. Some day the full story of the part played by the American hog in the diplomacy of the allies will be told. That, said Hoover, had better wait for a year or two.

What Hoover felt at liberty to tell was this: That the farmers of Missouri and Kansas are faced with an uncertain prospect. In wartime it became necessary, in order that the allies be supplied with fats, that swine production in this country be tremendously increased. By appealing to the patriotism of the farmers, by fixing the price at $17.50 a hundred and by securing from the allies a moral undertaking that they would protect the farmers, the desired production was secured. The normal export of pork had been 600,000,000 pounds; this was raised under the war stimulus to 3,000,000,000. Hoover described this accomplishment as the outstanding achievement—the real miracle of the Food Administration.

Now this production, this "intensification of the hog," has been maintained this year. The surplus must be marketed in Europe at a fair price if the farmer is not to suffer.

But Europe is organized for collective buying. England, Italy and France are in the combine and they have invited the neutrals to join them.

No Obligation to U. S. Farmer.

"The war is over," these countries are saying in effect. "Our credits in the United States have been stopped. We owe no further obligation to the American farmer. Therefore we will pay for the American hog only what we have to pay." It is not so brutal as that, but that is what it comes to.

During the war the farmer was aided by collective selling; now he is up against collective buying, and his collective selling organization is gone.

Hence, Hoover reasons, the price of hogs is due to drop. Will the American consumer profit? No, for although the price of hogs has already declined, the price of meat to the consumer has not gone down in proportion. There will be no material decrease in food prices, Hoover thinks, as long as there is in this country the present inflation of credits. With this inflation, there is bound to be speculation.

He cites a striking instance of how this works out that came under his notice the other day. On a contract for the sale of a parcel of beans, there were 44 indorsements. Prior to the war 14 would have been a high total, and during the war, under the Food Administration, four was the total allowed.

"That was the most possible," said Hoover, "without somebody going to jail for it."

Returning to hogs, Hoover said that the remedy would be for the Government, if and when it extends additional credits to Europe, to tie a string to them in the interest of the farmer, lest he suffer for having loyally performed a patriotic duty. The Government could make it a condition of granting the credit that the farmer be paid a price for his pork that would save him from loss.

More Pork Than Needed.

Unless something like this is done, Hoover believes, the price of pork will be beaten down. The pork is here in a quantity vastly in excess of domestic needs; it must be exported in the short space of four months beginning in December; it must be exported to Europe. Europe is plainly in a position to retaliate upon the United States for real or fancied grievances, and signs are not wanting that she intends to do it.

Failing action by the Government, the only thing left for the farmer to do is to organize and fight collective buying with collective selling. Hoover's advice to the swine growing associations of the country is to get together.

The treaty reference? Hoover said that when the Senate defeated the amendments, the price of hogs on the Chicago exchange immediately went up. Buyers reasoned that this action presaged the early coming of peace, extension of credits for world trade, general stabilization. Their hope was made vain by the later action of the Senate in failing to ratify.

Extension of credits to Europe so that the war torn countries can get on their feet commercially, that is

To Avoid Conscription.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have given a good deal of thought to the question of this country's military needs and my idea is that the following in a general way would be a good program for the Government to adopt:

That the United States should have a standing army limited to 250,000 well-trained men, who are willing to make a military career their regular profession and devote themselves entirely to this kind of service.

In addition I would have a national militia made up of voluntary enlistments, but once anyone enters this organization it would then become compulsory upon him to abide by its rules and regulations, and this of course should be made fully understood in advance. The states should co-operate with the Federal Government in the establishment and conduct of the national militia, but its management and control should be vested in the Federal Government. One of the best and ablest Generals should be appointed as its head to organize it in a thorough, business-like manner; everyone to be treated alike on his merits; uniforms to be furnished free by the Government with the condition that they shall only be used while the men are in service; appointments of officers and promotions from a lower to a higher rank to be made strictly upon merit. The duties of those enrolled in the national militia should be widely published, so that all would understand. It should be provided that the service demanded of the militia by the Government shall be accepted by employers as Government service, and that they will not be allowed to discharge an employe or make deductions from his salary or wages on account of absence while in the performance of such service.

In this way we could have a very large number of men trained and ready for service when needed, and yet not force anyone to serve in the army or do military duty against his will. In other words, it would obviate conscription, while the military needs of the Government would be supplied by an efficient and well-trained organization of willing enlisted men.

I am also in favor of including in the curriculum of the schools and colleges athletic exercises for the students, but these athletic exercises to be non-military in character. ADOLPH LEWISOHN.

German Downfall Prophesied in 1885.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

On July 16, 1885, the New York World printed the following squib on its editorial page, quoting from the Post-Dispatch:

THE ONLY CRANKS.
(From the Post-Dispatch.)

"Thus will the empire break," said a poor German the other day as he flung a fragile flower pot at the Emperor's carriage. He was arrested as a crazy man, but he may yet be quoted as a prophet. The real cranks of Germany are those who cling to the superstition that Emperors. Kings and Princes only are capable of ruling wisely and well."

It turned out to be "some prophecy."

Freight Rates on Clothing.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Advance in freight rates is a live subject just now, and it might be well for us to get a look in on what it will mean to us consumers. We will try a few articles of clothing. The rates from Boston, Mass., are the highest from the eastern territory and we will use that basis. First class rate applies on all articles of wearing apparel, and it is 1.31.5 per hundred pounds. Taking 25 men's suits to the hundred pounds, the freight would be 5.3-10 cents per suit; the same amount would pay the freight on an entire ladies' outfit from hat to shoes. There are about 400 men's hats to the hundred pounds, this would mean the exorbitant amount of 3.3-10 mills per hat. There are about 50 pairs of shoes to the hundred, the freight on each pair would be 2.7-10 cents. There are about 15 pairs of ladies' silk hose to the pound, or 1500 pairs to the hundred pounds, this would mean 8.7-10 cents per hundred pair for the railroads; some pickings for a haul of 1200 miles. Now advance the amounts represented by freight on each article 25 or say even 50 per cent, and see how infinitesmal is the freight cost to each article. The only danger from the proposed advance is that the merchant will put up the cry that he must advance his selling prices 25 or 50 per cent to cover the advance on freight rates. It's all "camel fudge," but they will get away with it, unless we can get better action from our public officials.

Imagine the profits in an advance of 25 per cent on 25 suits of clothes selling at from $30 to $125; 400 men's hats selling from $2 to $6; 50 pairs of shoes at from $4 to $15; or 1500 pairs of ladies' hose at from $2 to $10.

Of course, to take all the tonnage in the country, and aggregate the increases, the amount would stagger us; but that's an old army game, they did that when they gave the railroad men their advances and the amount in total put us to sleep; but take each man's share and it looks like 30 cents.

I don't think the rate increase need scare anybody silly. Keep this in your [illegible]. A RATE MAN AND CONSUMER.

IMPERATIVE WATERWAY NEEDS.

The strongest delegation that has ever gone to Washington to ask governmental action in behalf of the Mississippi Valley will be there this week. It represents the entire valley. It includes representatives, selected with the co-operation of the Governors of 22 states, the Mayors of all the larger cities, the officers of the Mississippi Valley Association, which embraces all the interests of the valley, and of the nine zones into which it is divided. In addition are representative business men from every part of the valley.

The program of the delegation, which will not be completed until the conference is held in Washington embraces four vital points:

1. The authorizing by the Director of Railroads of joint rail and river rates to all points of the valley reached by rail and river, in order that the full value of the waterways may be utilized for the benefit of industry and commerce.

2. The adoption of the Newton bill providing for the completion of river improvement projects already approved and begun, but not yet finished by the Government.

3. The approval by the Secretary of War of the plan to connect the Chicago Drainage Canal with the Illinois River and thus provide a navigable channel from the lakes to the gulf.

4. A larger proportion of the nation's merchant shipping to gulf and South Atlantic ports for the development of direct foreign trade facilities.

All these demands embody legitimate and necessary steps taken to develop the full usefulness of the waterways of the valley for the service, not alone of the people of the valley, but of the entire country. Every advance made in transportation which offers additional facilities for carrying the products of the greatest producing territory of the country to market is a benefit to the entire country.

The railroads of the country are wholly inadequate to the task of handling its producing capacity. Delays, congestion and enormous waste of unshipped products needed by the country and by the world at large are constant factors in business, with the result that industry lags, commerce stagnates and invaluable resources in raw materials and labor are unutilized. The whole country suffers from inadequate transportation and the great waterways which might, in connection with railroads, vastly increase profitable business activities, are idle or only partly utilized.

While the delegation in Washington represents the valley, its mission is in the interest of the United States. Concession to its demands will benefit all the people of the country. It will contribute incalculably to production and to profitable business activities.

All the demands are in line with a policy which the Government has approved and has attempted to carry out in a half-hearted way. Now we insist upon thoroughgoing work—work that will accomplish in the shortest possible time the ends we are seeking. This is the only work that counts for economy, efficiency and satisfactory results.

The first demand is fair and cannot be denied with good faith on the part of the Government. Why start a barge line on the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans, and deny it the rights and privileges necessary to all lines of transportation? Director Hines has said that joint rail and river rates are necessary and that they ought to be authorized before the railroads are returned to their owners. How can he refuse them?

The second demand merely embodies a petition that the Government complete projects it has approved and begun? How can the Government, with ordinary judgment and good faith, do less?

The third demand calls for nothing more than approval of a project to connect the lakes with the gulf, beneficial to the whole country, without cost to the Government.

The fourth embodies a right of the people of the valley to Government shipping facilities, the supplying of which will relieve congestion at North Atlantic ports and help all foreign commerce. Its denial would benefit none but special, profiteering interests.

Not only should the delegation have a hearing—that goes without saying—but it should obtain prompt action. Not only should it have the support of all the Congressmen from the Mississippi Valley states, but the support of Congressmen from other states—the support of all statesmen from the President down, who realize the necessity of the development of all the country's resources and can comprehend its needs and possibilities.

The time has come for comprehensive and efficient action that will put the great waterways into the service of the country.

LAND FOR RETURNED SOLDIERS.

The President again calls attention, in his message to Congress, to the duty of aiding the returned soldiers, not only by placing them in wage-earning positions through the co-operation of the public employment bureaus, but by enabling those of them who desire to obtain land for farming to do so. He urges that Secretary Lane's plan, embodied in the Mondell bill, be carried out.

A great deal of opposition has arisen to this plan, Senator Wadsworth, especially, insisting that it is impractical. He himself suggests a commission, with power to inquire into and report on the whole subject. But with something like 100,000 returned soldiers expressing their desire to get land, a commission, probably taking many months in its investigations and spending much money in jaunts and incidentals, would seem rather a mockery to the boys who want to begin work on land. By the time it got through its work, the enthusiasm for doing something for the soldiers would have largely subsided.

The thing to do now is to pass a reasonable law, with practical powers, and get to work. The Interior Department already has a vast amount of land listed, and that organization, with such aid as might be needed from the Agricultural Department, could soon make a beginning.

There is also the plan for loaning money to soldiers, embodied in the bill introduced by Representative Morgan of Oklahoma. Under this bill, it is proposed to loan each man $4000 at 3 1-2 per cent interest. Repayment, under an amortization scheme, was to cover 60 years, which is perhaps too long a period. Under Government supervision, the borrower could then buy land near his own home, or wherever he found a farm for sale. He would not be required to go to a distant part of the country and join a colony.

Whatever is done should be done this winter. The settlement of able-bodied men on land is not a speculation or a waste of public money. Every dollar would be secured by the increasing value of the land itself. And the hundreds or thousands of new homes created, with increased production from these farms, would be public assets.

HEREDITARY PROSCRIPTION FOR ASIATICS.

Senator Jones of Washington proposes an amendment which would deny citizenship to persons born in this country when their parents are themselves ineligible to citizenship. That such an amendment could receive the assent of three-fourths of the states, even to withhold civic rights from American-born Chinese and Japanese, is unimaginable. The only hereditary condition ever recognized under the American system was that of slavery, and that was wiped out long ago. Even the attempt of some Southern states to confer certain preferential rights under the so-called "grandfather clause" was shortlived. That it matters very little what a man's father was, but that it matters a great deal what a man is himself, is an American principle that means a great deal more than may be apparent at the first glance. This is no time for modifying it, even in a small way.

If the children born in this country of Chinese or Japanese parents are not what they ought to be, the fault is very largely our own. They are excellent subjects to which to apply the effective agencies of Americanization.

TEXAS MUST OPEN HER PURSE.

What with bumper crops of cotton, wheat, turkeys and potatoes, all commanding bumper prices, and at the same time swiftly swinging along towards the leadership in oil production, Texas is, nevertheless, confronted by the fact that 1200 of her rural schools are now closed for lack of teachers. The reason, of course, for this shortage of teachers is the low wage paid. The seriousness of the rural school situation is realized by the press of Texas which is facing the condition frankly and prescribing an effective, if not palatable, remedy. The remedy is to be found in the citizen's pocketbook. He has got to provide the money for the proper maintenance of schools, and other institutions, if the State is to go forward.

For years their low tax rate has been the boast of Texans and Texas administrations. It is a fact and a boast which Texas should get rid of. Such is the position of the Houston Post, which recently made a detailed comparison between the costs of government in New York and Texas. The New York budget for the coming year totals $138,000,000, which is almost ten times as large as that of Texas. That there may be waste and extravagance in New York is conceded, but the fact remains that the government of that other "Empire State" is rendering a broad service of high standard to the people. It maintains a public school system, the Houston paper points out, which Texas should be ambitious to equal, and it is building a system of good roads which Texas should duplicate.

Instead of a penny wise, pound foolish practice Texas is being urged by her press to adopt the policy of liberally supporting an upbuilding, progressive State government. Texans can afford to do it. They have the money.

KINDNESS.

THE best investment one can make.
Is kindness just for kindness' sake.

Its dividends are never passed,
And one enjoys them to the last.

They may not be as big as some,
But still continuously come.

It matters not what times are like—
The folk behind it never strike.

You never have the luck to drop
Your ante in a bucketshop.

Nobody yet has ever sought
To make you cover what you bought.

You never lay your stock away
Against a more auspicious day.

Just try it once—a kindly tip:
You always have coupons to clip.

The best investment one can make
Is kindness just for kindness' sake.

THE PROBLEM OF EVIL.

IF there is no Divine Progenitor and Sustainer of the universe, there is no problem of evil. Evil is inherent in the chaos of matter and life. There being no law giver, neither is there any law.

But we know there is a universe, subject to law—not a chaos. Then there must be a law giver. Imposing law upon physical things which they cannot break and which makes the universe a perfect machine, why does not the Law Giver restrain us from evil? If "it is He that hath made us and not we ourselves," why does He permit us to run headlong into hell and drag others with us? Why was the war permitted? Why were the Turks and Kurds not restrained in their diabolical work on the Armenians?

When John Hay wrote his splendid apostrophe to Liberty, and said:

For always in thine eyes, O Liberty,
Shines that high light whereby the world is saved,
And though thou slay us, we will trust in thee, he had in mind human liberty as related to human acts and human laws. But Liberty is also essential to man in his relation to whatever higher or celestial powers there be.

We, being part of the universe, are sustained from moment to moment by the same life which sustains the rest of the creation.

But not as puppets, not as a mere part of the rest of the machine. In order that we may be men and women, we must be left free. If what we know as evil is to be prevented, no human being can be left free to do as he pleases. He must be interfered with from the cradle to the grave. Providence must prevent the child from burning its fingers as well as the murderer from getting at his victim. So we should be a race of puppets, moved by an unseen power, automata and not free men.

A world of real men and women is not conceivable unless they are endowed with freedom. But, given freedom, error is inevitable. Better error, however, than slavery, even to a Creator.

The Creator Himself is pictured as saying: "Lo, I have set before thee this day life and the good, and death and the evil. Therefore choose."

And would you rather have been left in the limbo of the uncreated than to be alive, with that stern but splendid choice? If not, blame not the Higher Power for making you free and for the evil which goes with freedom. The evil is not of His making, but results from your power of choice. H. M. WILLIAMS.

Sir: In a pamphlet called "The Truth About Gasoline," just issued by the Standard Oil Co., I find the following chunks of English:

To best meet the demands neither gravity or price we shall in the future, as in the past, continue to meet to conscientiously strive that discriminating public who have looked the past quarter of a century

The argument of this pamphlet is that you should buy gasoline from the S. O. C. because they know how to make it. Which suggests that they should get someone who knows how to write to prepare their pamphlets, and let the bird who wrote this one go back to turning the crank at his filling station. C. K.

THE POOR CREEK.

THE "poor" Creek smirks, as down the street he goes
And rubs a silken 'kerchief 'cross his nose.

The "poor" Creek smiles as laboring white men pass
Holding a dinner pail in horny hands, alas!

And now and then he eyes his black cigar
Through arched fingers as one might a star.

The "poor" Creek dines as might a millionaire,
Then scans the balcony to see what loiters there.

And finding some blonde damsel sitting free,
He climbs the stairs and whispers what might be.

Wherefore, of course, the gentle blonde consents
And they march out midst noise and "low comments."

Only a wave of hand, and lo! the Creek's car comes
A mighty demon as it throbs and hums.

So doth the Creek, "poor" Creek, pass lonely days
In affluence and wealth enough to craze.

"Poor" Creek! White men will ever envy his "poor" lot
And watch in sullen anger for they know not what.

But still the Creek his lazy life pursues,
Oily and rich, and used to white abuse.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

LITTLE MEN WITH BIG REPUTATIONS.

From the San Francisco Call and Post.

CALVIN COOLIDGE of Massachusetts was triumphantly re-elected Governor on the strength of the popular belief that he had put down the Boston police strike and saved that city from a reign of terror. The New York Nation points out how singularly ill founded this legend was. 'The fact is,' it declares, 'that Gov. Coolidge ran from the police strike as a singed cat from fire, as anyone may learn who takes the trouble to read the report of the Storrow Committee, containing the verdict of Boston's ultra safe, sane and sound men of affairs."

But Coolidge's reputation outran the Storrow report, and he not only won the governorship, but has had the distinction of being mentioned with Leonard Wood as one of the safe and reliable candidates for next year's Republican nomination.

It is too easy, as all newspaper men know, for a clever press agent, acting upon a receptive and credulous public, to make a hero or a villain out of almost everybody. There was Ole Hanson of Seattle, who has become a national idol in certain circles chiefly on his own statements about the part he played in the Seattle strike. The probability that the "revolution" he suppressed existed chiefly in his own mind has nothing to do with the case. He is now a successful lecturer, who will point out to any audience for a moderate fee the best method of dealing with Bolshevism.

Attorney-General Palmer is another popular hero who under examination does not seem so deserving of laurels. All that Palmer did was to invoke an obsolete law to stop a strike which it turned out no law could stop. He made a sublime gesture which settled nothing. Other men, patient men of whom the public will hear comparatively little, will be responsible for any fair and permanent settlement of the coal problem.

But there is another side to the discovery of the essential triviality of many famous men which the persistent investigator is certain to make. If many nobodies are thrust to the top by the accident of a press dispatch or the design of special interest there are far more somebodies who do their work faithfully and well in comparative obscurity. While the Department of Justice thunders at strikers and bigoted Judges scold them, some mild person in the Geological Survey or the Bureau of Labor may be gathering facts and offering suggestions which will show us how to reorganize the coal business in such a way as to make another coal strike improbable.

ITALY'S WAR DEBT.

From the Springfield Republican.

TRULY portentous is the balance sheet just struck by Italy's Minister of Finance. The capital represented by the public debt amounts to $25,000,000,000, as against about $2,700,000,000 in 1913. This is an increase of nearly 10-fold. The interest on the consolidated funds has increased from $70,740,000 to over $1,000,000,000, a 14-fold increase. Evidently measures of the most drastic sort will be required to prevent bankruptcy, and a heavy tax on war fortunes is to be followed by a capital tax spread over a number of years. Italy is not a rich country, lacking coal and iron and therefore at an industrial disadvantage, but before the war, at any rate before the Tripoli adventure in 1912, its public finance was notably sane and sound. How it can stand public debt which five years ago would have seemed staggering to the richest country in Europe is hard to see, and its enemies have been too thoroughly pulverized to yield much tribute. Before the war it was generally believed that financial exhaustion would make a long war impossible; governments kept going longer than had been expected, but the bill which the people have to foot is all the greater.

Events in the Social World

Lull in Debutante Parties Turned Attention to Charity Affairs During Past Week, but Coming Days Are Filled With Coming Out Parties, Teas, Dinners and Luncheons.

THERE was a decided lull last week in the number of debutante parties, Mrs. Herman Duhme Jr.'s reception for her niece, Miss Frances Carleton, being the only large debutante affair on the calendar. Far from having a rest, however, the debutantes and belles were kept busy with different charity affairs. Many of them sold programs and flowers at the performances for the Actors' Benefit Fund Friday, and at Christmas bazar they served and assisted in various ways. St. Mary's Guild of St. Peters Church held their bazar Thursday and the articles that were on sale were so quickly disposed of that the members have decided to place a few more on sale next Thursday, from 10 to 5 o'clock at the Parish House, Lindell boulevard and Spring avenue. Mrs. Heman Pettengill of 50 Vandeventer place is chairman of the Guild and some of the girls who assisted her on last Thursday were her daughters, Miss Peggy Murphy, Miss Lida Crawford, Miss Marion Bannister, Miss Helen Battle, Miss Eugenia Barroll and Miss Frances Ewens.

In contrast to last week, the coming week will be an unusually gay one for the debutantes, with coming out parties, teas, dinners and luncheons. Three of the season's buds will be formally presented, Miss Katherine Scott, Miss Lida Crawford and Miss Peggy Murphy. Miss Scott will make her bow tomorrow afternoon at a reception, and Miss Crawford and Miss Murphy at a ball at the Country Club Friday evening.

Among the other big affairs of the week are Miss J. D. Wooster Lambert's ball at the Country Club tomorrow evening in compliment to Miss Mary Frances Joy, whose marriage to Robert Bagnell will be an event of Wednesday night. Mrs. Edward A. Faust's dance in honor of several of the season's buds Tuesday evening and on that afternoon Mrs. Samuel Kennard's luncheon at the Country Club for her granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Kennard.

MRS. John Carr Parker and her daughter, Miss Laura Parker, 4905 Lindell boulevard, will entertain this afternoon with a mixed tea from 4 until 7 o'clock, in honor of Miss Lida Crawford, debutante daughter of Mrs. G. Lacy Crawford. The girls who will serve include Miss Florence Lambert, Lucy Ludington, Josephine Edgar and Peggy Murphy. Those who will assist are Mmes. Everett W. Wilson of Peoria, Ill., who is a guest of Mrs. Parker; Lida Bevis, G. Lacy Crawford and William Preetorious. About 125 guests have been invited.

Mrs. J. L. D. Morrison of the Buckingham Hotel will give a debutante dance at the St. Louis Woman's Club Jan. 12 in honor of her granddaughter, Miss Adele Carr of New Mexico. Miss Carr and her mother, Mrs. Clark M. Carr, will arrive Dec. 28 to be the guests of Mrs. Morrison.

Owing to the continued illness of Mrs. George W. Kerr, 3703 West Pine boulevard, cards were received yesterday, anouncing that the reception which she was to have given for her granddaughter, Miss Damaris Macbeth, next Tuesday, has been indefinitely postponed.

Mrs. Oscar Niedringhaus of 4647 Pershing avenue was hostess at a table for 70 guests at the Woman's Club tea dance yesterday afternoon. The honor guests at her table were two debutantes, Miss Josephine Edgar and Miss Florence Lambert and her son Warne Niedringhaus.

Mrs. Albert T. Perkins, 4906 Argyle place, had a table at the Country Club dinner dance last evening, in honor of Miss Evelyn Guy of 10 Portland place, who will be presented to society this season.

MRS. HERMAN A. STEINWENDER, JR. of 4400 Lindell boulevard will be in charge of the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals at all of the hotels Thursday. The headquarters will be at the Hotel Statler with committees at the different hotels and Mrs. Steinwender will be assisted by a group of young society matrons and debutantes. The proceeds of the sale will go to the Tuberculosis Society here, to be used to fight tuberculosis in St. Louis.

Mrs. Samuel L. Geisinger of the Buckingham Hotel has sent out cards for a tea dance which she will give at the St. Louis Club Christmas afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock in compliment to Miss Lucy Ludington and her daughter, Miss Gloria Geisinger, who will be home from Ogonz School at Philadelphia for the holidays.

Mrs. W. R. Compton of 18 King's bury place expects her daughter, Miss Frances Compton, to arrive soon from Vassar College to spend the holidays. W. R. Compton Jr. is also expected home from Princeton.

Misses Irene Loeb, Margaret Maxwell and Janet Holmes are coaching the cast, which is made up of Misses Elizabeth Scudder, Emily Lewis, Dorothp Maxwell, Helen Langsdorf, Adeline Smith, Elizabeth Stix, Erna Rice, Lucy Turner, Martha Gellhorn and Karthleen Sheldon.

A Christmas sale will be held Wednesday, Dec. 10, from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock in the evening at Miss White's school for girls, 4146 Lindell boulevard. Besides the many handmade articles there will be a sale of live pets, puppies, kittens, birds and gold fish.

Among the patronesses are Mmes. Willa H. Thompson, Ewing White, Harry L. Block, George Lacy, Knox Taussig, Theodore White and Humphrey Gifford. The proceeds of the sale will go to the Women's Guilds of Trinity Episcopal Church for their parish and missionary work.

Our Greatest—Our Most Stupendous Semi-Annual 50% Off

Sample Sale

The way the women of St. Louis jammed our store Friday and Saturday, and the liberal way in which they bought, and the high character of buyers they were, are some of the evidences that this is the greatest of our great Sample Sales. We could not begin to handle the rush—the crowds were far greater than we anticipated. If you were here but could not be served, come again tomorrow or the next day. There are thousands of exclusive Sample Garments remaining, and these will be replenished almost daily.

LEST YOU FORGET...

WE know from past experience that the "bigness" of the values (and they are "bigger" than ever before) and the unparalleled charm of the garments (and they are more charming than ever before) will have a tendency to cause some customers to buy more than they really want. Let us caution you against this, as the rule prohibiting the return of merchandise is still in effect.

GERMAN STATES FEAR NEW TAX BILLS ENCROACH ON RIGHTS

Delegates to National Council Say System Tends to Unitarianism in National Government.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Thursday, Dec. 4.—Encroachments by the German Government on the prerogatives and integrity of the Federated States are provoking increasing impatience and mistrust among the delegates to the national council, according to indications again today at discussions of the national tax measures drawn up by Mathias Erzberger, Minister of Finance.

Representatives of the six federated States who are taking part in the council, made known to Herr Erzberger their disapproval of the manner in which he is attempting to force the tax, saying that they are not permitted to inspect the measures wih respect to their infringement of State rights. The delegates say it is the avowed tendency of the measures to accomplish a system bringing about a unitarianism in the national Government administration.

"MESSIAH" AT ODEON DEC. 29

The Pageant Choral Society's plans for the season, announced yesterday, call for a performance of Handel's "Messiah" at the Odeon on the evening of Dec. 29. Miss Olga Hambuechen, St. Louis contralto, is to be one of the soloists.

At a second concert, the date of which has not been set, the organization will undertake Enrico Bossi's choral drama, "Paradise Lost," adapted in a prologue and three parts from Milton's epic.

STORIES OF THE REPUBLIC IN THE "GOOD OLD DAYS"

mendous editorial tilts with the Globe-Democrat and with other St. Louis papers. In the early '90s it printed a series of pseudo-learned editorials purporting to prove that the word McCullagh in the Gaelic language meant "son of a hog." Joseph B. McCullagh was then editor of the Globe-Democrat. He countered neatly with pertinent personalities on various editors of the Republic from time to time, including the style of whiskers worn by one of them, Charles H. Jones.

Fought the Exposition in the Interest of Fair Association.

In the interest of the old Fair Association which then owned the Fair Grounds, the Republic strenuously opposed the opening of an annual exposition in St. Louis. The Globe-Democrat and the Post-Dispatch took up the cudgels for the exposition. It was opened on the present site of the Public Library and flourished for 14 years.

Like all newspapers whose life extends over a considerable period the Republic at various times employed in its editorial and art departments men and women who either there or elsewhere became noted in their profession or in other lines of endeavor.

Augustus Thomas, the noted playwright, was a Republic reporter and sketch artist. Alexander Russell Webb left the staff to take up the study of Theosophy, went to India and Manila and returned as preacher of Oriental religious cults. Frank Taylor, another reporter, "got religion" and joined the entourage of Sam Jones, a noted evangelist.

Another reporter quit the Republic staff and drinking the same day and became a preacher.

Martin Green, now on the New York World staff, laid the foundation for a reputation as a brilliant reporter through a description of the St. Louis tornado in May, 1896, which he wrote for the Republic.

Stanley Waterloo, who later founded the St. Louis Chronicle with the Scripps brothers, was editor of an evening edition of the Republic which was published in 1875-76, but was discontinued.

Thomas E. Garrett, dramatic editor of the paper, was widely hailed as the discoverer of Mary Anderson, a noted actress.

Phil Ferguson established a reputation as a reporter by his Monday morning stories in the Republic on Sunday's crowds at the postoffice. The city was much smaller then and many persons went to the postoffice to get their mail on Sundays.

Beer and Sandwiches After Saturday Night Work Was Done.

Former Judge Jesse A. McDonald, now president of the Board of Education, was a Republic reporter before he studied law.

Mrs. S. I. Stone, the first woman regularly employed on a newspaper staff in St. Louis, was successively a news reporter and society editor of the Republic. Ada Patterson, who, since has achieved fame as a writer in the East, was a feature writer on the staff for several years. Thomas MacMechen, now widely known as an expert writer on aviation, was a Republic reporter. An active and energetic member of the staff in the '90s was James B. Espy, now secretary of the Board of Police Commissioners. Because of his zeal in those days he was known as "Hot Pursuit" Espy.

The glory of the Republic has departed in more senses than one. William Marion Reedy recalls that every Saturday night after the paper was out the staff would buy a keg of beer and 100 sandwiches, and take them to the editorial rooms, where there would be eating and drinking, singing and story-telling until dawn arrived and the beer was gone.

Though the paper has here been mentioned throughout as The Republic, its name was The Republican until it was changed in 1888 by Charles H. Jones, who came here from Jacksonville, Fla., to take editorial charge of the paper.

5 YEARS ON WOMAN'S STORY

Identifies Prisoner as One of Three Who Robbed Fuel and Ice Company.

A sentence of five years in the penitentiary was imposed upon William Crow, 25 years old, 214 North Compton avenue, Friday night, in Judge Garesche's court, where he was convicted of first degree robbery.

The prosecuting witness was Miss Cecelia Massinghoff of 1919A Bremen avenue, cashier and bookkeeper for the Hannibal Ice and Fuel Co., Grand avenue and Hebert street. She said that at 10 a. m. on Sept. 9 last, three men entered the office, and that one of them, whom she idetified as Crow, covered her with a revolver and commanded her to open the safe. She pretended to have forgotten the combination, but under threat of death unlocked the safe, from which the robbers took $65.

CITY IN SUDDEN DARKNESS

Downtown Section Under Pall Two Minutes Yesterday.

St. Louis, in the downtown section, was covered with a pall of darkness from 1:28 to 1:30 yesterday afternoon, causing automobilists and motormen to light their lights. However, no sooner had they done so than the cloud lifted, leaving the city comparatively light again.

At the Weather Bureau this was explained by the fact that low-flying clouds were moving over the city, sometimes becoming becalmed because the air was too light to move them.

To Have Smooth, White, Soft Skin All Winter

Does you skin chap or, roughen easily in this weather, or become unduly red or blotchy? Here is a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the Winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest drug store and use a little before retiring, as you would apply cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with sudsy water. The wax, through some peculiar attribute, flecks off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn-out cuticle comes off just like dandruff, only in almost invisible particles. Mercolized wax simply hastens Nature's work. Used as required, it keeps the face constantly free from devitalized scarf skin and only the healthy, young-looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for weather-beaten, aged, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

Post-Dispatch Christmas Fund Has No Collectors; How to Make Contribution

THERE are no collectors of contributions for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival.

This year, as in former years, subscription lists will be distributed by young women, where that is practical and elsewhere by mail. The Festival lists are sent out with the request that they be so displayed that anyone wishing to do so may subscribe and give any sum, large or small. This request will be made by the young women wherever they leave the lists, and these helpers will make further visits to see that the list has not been mislaid or forgotten, but none of them are authorized to ask for or receive money.

When a list has served its purpose it may be returned to the Post-Dispatch by the person in whose charge it will have been placed or, if that is not entirely convenient, a telephone request to Christmas Festival Headquarters will bring a representative of the Post-Dispatch authorized to receive and receipt for the list and the money.

Except through contribution lists, donations can only be made by mail, or in cash at Christmas Festival Headquarters, 1101-05 Olive street, or at the office of the cashier of the Post-Dispatch.

$10,000 IS NEEDED FOR THE CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL THIS YEAR

utors will go well out along the principal thoroughfares, west, north and south.

It will not be possible to employ this method in more than a limited area, however, and elsewhere the lists will be mailed.

Some one person in each place that a list goes will be asked to take charge of it and of contributions and, when the list is closed, to send the money subscribed, with the list, to the office of the Post-Dispatch. Due acknowledgment in some way will be made by the Post-Dispatch for every contribution, large or small.

How Christmas Festival Association Was Started.

THE Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Association, which was organized by the Post-Dispatch 19 years ago, is managed by an Executive Committee of about 20 representative citizens of St. Louis. Members of this committee are appointed by the chairman to head the various committees which carry on the different departments of the association's work, and these chairmen in turn choose their associates.

The spirit of the association's work is hospitality, rather than charity. The purpose is to have as large a number of persons as possible be the hosts for one day of the poor and needy of the city, the association offering itself as a medium through which this may be accomplished in an organized and systematic way that insures every deserving person being reached, and is a guarantee against duplication of giving and against needless giving.

The chairman of the committee which prepares the list of the hundreds of families to whom a Christmas dinner in baskets is supplied, is an experienced social service worker and three of his assistants are the heads of leading benevolent organizations.

The money expended goes for the exact purpose for which it is contributed, and the hospitality reaches those whom it should reach, instead of being scattered haphazard among the unworthy as well as the worthy.

Conservation and economy are further carried out in the purchase of all articles distributed by the association. Chairmen of the committees which purchase the provisions and the gifts are men experienced in buying in large quantities the kind of supplies which they purchase for the association, and they have the cooperation of wholesale dealers or manufacturers of those supplies.

How the Tickets Are Distributed.

Tickets of admission to the Coliseum, where a Christmas tree is erected and an elaborate entertainment given especially for the children, are distributed with the same care to reach the needy that the basket list is prepared. The chairmen of most of the committees have served for years in the same capacities, improving their methods from year to year.

Estimates for this year have not been completed by the various committee chairmen, but a good idea of what the association does to extend a day of hospitality each year to the city's poor may be obtained from the records of last year's work. Dinners in baskets were distributed to 1125 needy persons and families on Christmas day and the two days immediately preceding. All the baskets were delivered at the homes of the recipients with as little ostentation as possible. The association has gradually worked away from the plan of having the baskets called for by the recipients at basket packing headquarters. To fill these baskets cost an average of $2.89 per basket last year and the committee estimates that each basket this year will cost about $4.00—an increase of over 38 per cent. The cost at retail would be much more, and the cost at wholesale will be considerably higher than ever before.

Last year the Coliseum entertainment was omitted because of the influenza epidemic, but unless something unforeseen occurs, it will be resumed this year on a larger scale than in former years.

More than 12,000 children have been provided for by the committee. Each child, upon entering the hall, will receive gifts, according to age or sex, and will then be sent to a seat in one of the balconies. The entertainment this year will be a spectacular presentation of characters from "Mother Goose" rhymes and will be concluded in time for all children to reach home in time to have their Christmas dinner there.

Every cent which is collected for the Christmas Festival is devoted to that purpose. In addition to making an annual contribution of several hundred dollars to the Festival Fund, the Post-Dispatch pays all administration expenses of the Festival to the last detail.

Fourth Murder Trial for Kansan.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Dec. 6.—On the grounds that inadmissable evidence was admitted in the trial of B. W. A. Henson of Wichita, sentenced to serve a term of 20 years at hard labor in the penitentiary for the murder of his wife, the Supreme Court today handed down a decision reversing the decision of the lower court and ordering the case remanded for a new trial. Henson already has had three trials in the Sedgwick County District Court, two resulting in hung juries. Henson is 71 years old.

EXPLOSIVE DISCOVERED IN COAL

A load of coal delivered to the Episcopal Orphans' Home, Grand and Lafayette avenues, contained a stick of an explosive which had been broken in half, it was found by Charles Smith, fireman of the institution, when the coal was being unloaded yesterday.

Smith discovered a half of the stick in its original wrapping, and, after a search, found the rest of it. The explosive was turned over to the Magnolia Avenue Police Station, and Federal investigators were notified. It is thought that the explosive was accidentally dropped into the coal at the mine.

"THE RAINBOW GIRL" AT AMERICAN TONIGHT

"Chu Chin Chow," Oriental Spectacle, Remains Second Week at Shubert-Jefferson.

A musical comedy of considerable prestige, "The Rainbow Girl," comes to the American Theater tonight for a week, while the munificent Arabian Nights' extravaganza, "Chu Chin Chow," remains, as was planned from the first, for its second week at the Shubert-Jefferson.

The story of "The Rainbow Girl" is by Jerome K. Jerome; its adaptation for the stage is by Rennold Wolf; the score is from the talented pen of Louis A. Hirsch; and the decorations are by Joseph Urban. A comely chorus is promised.

The fable concerns an English girl who marries a nobleman, only to discover that her entire family are working as servants in the bridegroom's household. Grace Welsh has the chief girl part, and the comedy is in the hands of Billy B. Van and Sydney Greenstreet. Others in the cast are Harry Delf, Harry Benham, William Clifton, Gladys Fooshee, Mabel House, Jane Burby, Margaret Merriman, Fred Solomon, Marquita Dwight, Edna Hettler, and Lenora Novasio, a St. Louis girl. Greenstreet was the Touchstone in the "As You Like It" performance in Forest Park several years ago.

"Chu Chin Chow" has during the last week broken all records for attendance at the Shubert-Jefferson, according to the management. The public has been particularly pleased with the production's gorgeous costumes, said to be a replica of the investment of the jubilee production of the spectacle in London. There are hundreds of costumes, and they are rich not only in color and fabric but in design. It is no exaggeration to say that in scores of the principal habiliments there is a touch of genius.

Mantell Next Week.

Robert B. Mantell, in his familiar Shakspearean and classic repertory, will appear at the American Theater next week, and the Shubert-Jefferson will present Tom Wise in "Cappy Ricks."

Evelyn Nesbit is back in vaudeville and will be one of two headliners at the Orpheum this week. The other is Emma Carus, in a song act, aided by J. Walter Leopold. The Bowman brothers are billed for a study of the Southern negro. Horace Wright and Reno Dietrich have an act, and other items announced are Oscar Lorraine, "nutty" violinist; Selma Braatz, juggler, and Elsie White, singer. Fink's mules are to provide an equine novty. The Standard will offer "Round the Town," and the Gayety, "Sporting Widows."

SUGAR TO GO UP AND HOGS DOWN, SAYS HOOVER, IN TALK

the remedy that Hoover prescribed for ending the world chaos.

Bolshevism came next, and Hoover told for the first time how the farmers of Hungary beat the Bolshevistic Government of Bela Kun in that country.

"Bolshevism," said Hoover, "is essentially a town phenomenon. It's only because the Russian peasants are so ignorant that it has made headway outside the towns in that country. It was different in Hungary. When the workers of the towns took up Bolshevism and stopped making shoes, farm machinery and other products of the factories, the farmers declared a strike against the towns. They declined to take the paper money that the Bolshevists printed and offered for their farm products. Getting right down to the first principles of economics, they told the town workers that they would exchange their food only for other things of value they said, in other words, that they would decline to send food to the towns so long as the towns refrained from productive work. They posted bulletins to that effect throughout the country.

No Work—No Food.

No work by the towns, no food from the country, was their ultimatum to Bolshevism.

"It broke the back of the Government. A contributing factor in the defeat of Bela Kun was the intelligence of the trades unions, but the basic cause was the strike of the farmers.

"The farmers around Munich did the same thing, with the same results. So also in some parts of Russia the farmers have struck against the cities.

"Bolshevists of the towns have in some cases in Russia retaliated with raids upon the farmers to get supplies. There has been a great deal of bloodshed from this source.

"Bolshevism could never have made the headway that it has made in Russia were it not for the dense ignorance of the peasantry. It cannot penetrate in sections where the peasantry is intelligent. To the peasant Bolshevism means simply getting a share of the land, and when the land is parceled out there is no further incentive to be a Bolshevist. The peasant with his parcel of land becomes a capitalist. Bolshevism succeeds because the peasants as a whole are unorganized and unlettered, and because of the methods of terrorism that it employs. A narrow class, some 400,000 or 500,000, rule the country, just as a narrow class ruled it under the Czar. Bolshevism falls before organization and intelligence."

TROPICAL FRUIT PLANTS PART OF SHOW EXHIBIT

Number and Variety, Greatly Increased Recently, Now Placed in Special House.

The number and variety of the tropical fruit plants grown in the Missouri Botanical Garden recently have been greatly increased. A tropical fruit house has been established in the quarters previously occupied by the varied industries and today is open for visits of the public.

In comment, the bulletin of the garden says: "Their concentration in a special house should afford excellent opportunity for visitors to study the habit of growth and fruiting and flowering periods of these fruits not ordinarily seen outside the tropics."

Among the more common of the citrus fruits in the collection are orange, lemon, lime Pomelo and kumquat. A specimen of the ponderosa lemon is bearing many well-developed fruits. The ponderosa is not the familiar lemon of the fruit markets. It approaches in size an indoor baseball and frequently weighs one and one-half to two pounds.

One of the more interesting of the plants is the papaya, a common breakfast fruit of Hawaii. The fruit weighs up to 15 pounds, from 40 to 50 growing on a tree. The flesh is salmon-pink to yellow, resembling a muskmelon. The seeds have medicinal value, the bark of the tree is used for rope-making and the roots are a nerve tonic. The leaves and juice are used to render tough meat tender.

Announcement of the opening of the poinsettia show in the floral display house will be made soon.

The Autopiano

A Splendid Christmas Gift

THE arrival of an Autopiano for Christmas will prove a realization of anticipations deeply cherished in the hearts of husband and wife.

No family can well live happily without music in the home. Music is something for which the spirit craves. It means relief from household toils, it means the cheeriest of welcomes to the husband worn from his day's work, it means delightful evenings spent together—and if there be children, it means education and culture not otherwise easily possible of acquirement.

The Autopiano is the great Player Piano of the Army and Navy. It has been awarded sixteen gold medals. There are over a million dollars' worth in St. Louis homes.

Christmas morning with an Autopiano in your home will ever be remembered as a wonderful Christmas, the beginning of a musical era that will become, with the passing years, of greater influence than anything else affecting the spiritual and intellectual welfare of your family.

It is not alone the Autopiano that will interest you in your visit to Conroy's. There is a greater number of reliable makes of Pianos and Players to be seen here than under any other one roof in America. You will also be charmed with the Ampico, which can be heard in the Knabe, Haines Bros. and Marshall & Wendell Pianos, Uprights and Grands.

You will find here every convenience for comparing the tones and actions of Pianos—large exhibit halls, private music rooms. You will be delighted with your visit and fully satisfied that you have found here the one instrument you would rather have than any other in the world.

The prices are very moderate. Pianos are priced as low as $395, Player Pianos from $485 upward, Ampico Pianos from $850 upward.

COUNT FIFTY! NO NEURALGIA PAIN

Don't suffer! Instant relief follows a rubbing with old "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Conquer pain—never fails.

Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment" right on the ache or pain, and out comes the neuralgia misery.

Here's a joyful experiment. Try it. Get a small trial bottle from your druggist; pour a little in your hand and rub it gently on the sore, aching nerves, and before you realize it—in just a moment—all pain and neuralgia disappear. It's almost magical, but the joy is, that the misery doesn't come back. No. The nerves are soothed and congestion is relieved and your neuralgia is overcome.

Stop suffering. It's needless—neuralgia and pain of all kinds, either in the face, head, limbs or any part of the body, is instantly banished. "St. Jacobs Liniment" is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin. In use for half a century.—

REAL FIGHT BETWEEN HARDING AND WOOD

G. O. P. "Old Guard" Said to Favor Ohio Candidate for the Presidency.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—In Republican circles here the belief is strong that the real fight for the presidential nomination in the national convention will be between Gen. Leonard Wood and Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio. Gov. Lowden of Illinois has not shown the strength that was expected and is now viewed as the third man in the race. The candidacy of Senator Miles Poindexter of Washington is spectacular and interesting, but is not giving serious concern to the friends of the other aspirants.

Wood, it is conceded, will figure strongly throughout the pre-convention struggle to line up delegates. He will come into the convention with a lot of delegates. As state after state instructs for him the country may get the impression that he is about to ride to the nomination on a tidal wave of unbeatable popularity.

The "Old Guard" leaders foresee all this and discount it. While the tumult and shouting for Wood is going on, these politicians will be quietly at work on a well-thought-out plan to keep Wood from dominating the convention. They don't say that they are antagonistic to Wood, but they do admit a desire to keep the race open.

The plan of the "Old Guard" contemplates the capture of a block of seven states, the total of whose delegations, plus scattering votes from other sections, will be sufficient to put a "crimp" in the aspirations of Wood or any other candidate who looks for a victory on the first ballot. These seven states are Massachusetts, New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, West Virginia and New Jersey.

Massachusetts, if the plan works out, will send to the convention a Coolidge delegation; New York an uninstructed delegation; Pennsylvania will be in the first instance for Sproul, Ohio for Harding, Illinois for Lowden, while West Virginia and New Jersey will vote as Pennsylvania dictates.

Strength of Seven States.

The strength of the seven states will be a Harding-Lowden strength. Ultimately, it is believed, it will be thrown to the Ohio candidate, for he is the man, undoubtedly, who stands highest at the present moment in the good graces of the old line Republicans. They are not opposed to Leonard Wood—not for publication—but one needs no profound knowledge of political currents to understand that the Old Guard would be happier with Harding than with Leonard Wood, the heir of Roosevelt, in the White House.

As for Poindexter very few believe that he has a chance. Poindexter, say his friends, sincerely believes that he has. The Washington Senator is described as the greatest political "speculator" in public life. He was a Tennessee Democrat; he was a Democrat when he moved to Washington, where he became a Silver Republican.

He was elected to Congress as a Progressive and is now a Republican, running on a platform whose main plank is anti-Bolshevism. As Poindexter sees it, the fight is wide open, and he has a chance on that platform to garner enough votes to make him a real factor in the convention.

EMBARGO ON FUEL OIL TO PUSH USE IN WEST

Railroad Administration Seeks to Replace Coal—Profiteering Charges Investigated.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The United States Railroad Administration today issued an order placing an embargo on the shipment of fuel oil east of St. Louis and Chicago from the oil refining points in the Middle West. This move was taken to encourage the consumption of fuel oil to save coal in the Middle Western territory, where there is a good supply of oil, and to conserve coal that has been necessary from mines in the East. It is pointed out that approximately 1600 cars of coal have been delivered daily by the Railroad Administration to points in the Central West and Southwestern railroad regions since the strike began and that much of this supply can be diverted to big industrial points in the East by the use of fuel oil where it is available.

An exemption from the embargo is given to industries in the East which were using fuel oil prior to Nov. 1 and to fuel oil for export to regular consignees who received oil prior to Nov. 1.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas today called at the Department of Justice and asked for an action against alleged profiteering in fuel oil by refiners in Middle Western territory, especially in Kansas. Senator Capper had a conference with C. B. Ames, assistant to the Attorney-General. He reported to Judge Ames that complaint had been made by industries in the Middle West, where plants had been converted to use fuel oil in the place of coal that prices of fuel oil had advanced from less than $1 a barrel in come cases to from $4 to $5. Senator Capper pointed out as significant that the price increases had been general and had been advanced apparently in concert by all refiners.

Judge Ames assured Senator Capper that the Department of Justice would look into the matter and it was indicated that prosecutions under the Lever law and the anti-trust law would be started by the Government if the information in Senator Capper's hands is correct.

Held for the Grand Jury.

Walter A. Bowman, a bond salesman, waived preliminary hearing Friday on a charge of altering and selling War Savings Stamps and was held for the grand jury in bond of $5000, which was furnished by his uncle, Edwin Schiele.

$15 CONSCIENCE CONTRIBUTION

Man Returns Money He Stole From Alton Newspaper.

The Alton Telegraph has received $15 as a conscience fund contribution from a man in St. Louis. The money was sent by a Catholic priest, who wrote that the man had confessed to him that he stole the money from the company publishing the newspaper, and had taken that means of restoring it.

The theft had not been discovered by those in charge of the paper.

TRIAL OF REDDISH TO BE TAKEN UP AGAIN TOMORROW

Week-End Adjournment Taken to Permit Attorneys and Witnesses to Visit Their Homes.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., Dec. 6.—Taking of testimony for the defense in the case of Dr. Horace Augustus Reddish, Jerseyville physician charged with the murder of his father, Stephen M. Reddish, will be resumed here Monday, an adjournment having been taken at noon today to permit attorneys and witnesses to return to their homes for the week-end.

A recapitulation of the State's evidence, the introduction of which was concluded late Friday afternoon, shows that it is entirely circumstantial, no witness having testified that Dr. Reddish was anywhere near Jerseyville within a week of the time the murder of his father and that of the negro housekeeper, Rachael Cisco, are alleged to have been committed.

Defense Relies on Remoteness.

It is the remoteness of the circumstances brought forward by the State which the defense relies on largely, to acquit the accused physician, his attorneys say.

The chief points in the State's case may be summed up as follows: The fact that the defendant was a drug addict, and that he was entirely dependent upon his wealthy, but thrifty father for his income; that he and his father quarreled over money matters; and that he threatened his father.

There is the testimony, also, that the bullets found in the pillow and mattress of the negro woman's bed weighed exactly the same as bullets found in the defendant's room.

Defendants' Words Damaging.

One of the chief elements relied upon to convict has been the conduct of the defendant himself, and his utterances before his arrest. One of the most striking of these was his statement, said to have been made to an Alton physician and a former classmate of Dr. Reddish, that his father had been killed, at a time fixed by witnesses as more than an hour earlier than the discovery of the bodies. Furthermore, his sister-in-law, who apprised him of the discovery, said she did not tell him that his father had been killed, but only that he had been found dead.

The State's case originally was built up around the finding, in a lamp shade, in Dr. Reddish's room, of a pawn ticket which was found to call for his revolver, which had been pawned in St. Louis four days after the murders are alleged to have occurred. Although the defense now admits that the revolver is Dr. Reddish's, and that he pawned it, he strenuously denied it at the time of his arrest.

Made Defense Difficult.

It is conceded now that Dr. Reddish had not so emphatically denied all the suspicious circumstances held forth at the time of his arrest, and had admitted some of them, the matter of defending him now would be much easier. The fact that his stories then conflicted with the facts, now admitted to be true, is being used against him in the trial.

The foregoing constitute the main links in the chain of circumstantial evidence. It is not known for certain upon what hour, or what night, the killings occurred, and no witness has located Dr. Reddish anywhere near the scene of the murders.

While the prosecution contends that the aged landowner and his housekeeper were shot to death at midnight of April 25 last, the defense has produced 13 witnesses who testified to seeing him alive the following day, and three who told of hearing shots the morning of April 27.

Says He Was in St. Louis.

It also is known that the defense will produce an alibi for Dr. Reddish. It is maintained that he was at the home of his uncle, John Mackelden, 2522 Clifton avenue, St. Louis, for more than three weeks before the bodies were discovered.

Many features of the case remain in mystery. It has been strongly hinted by the defense that Stephen Reddish was not killed in the room where he was found, although witnesses have testified that his body was lying in a natural sleeping position. Against this is the fact that two bullets passed entirely through his head, but no trace of them was found in the floor or the walls. The mattress was burned a few days afterward.

Courtroom Is Crowded.

The case has excited almost as much interest here as it did in Jerseyville, where the principals were among the most prominent residents of the town. The last two days and nights of the trial have seen the courtroom crowded almost to the point of suffocation. School children, nurses from the State Sanitarium and students from the woman's teachers' college have been among the onlookers.

As a legal battle, the case is being contested bitterly. The chief counsel for the defense is Jerry Sullivan of East St. Louis, an experienced criminal practitioner, known for his biting manner of cross-examination and his "bulldog" tactics. Opposing him are two State's Attorneys and a former State's Attorney—Paul Hamilton of Jerseyville and his predecessor, Walter Chapman, as well as State's Attorney Robinson of this city. The defense probably will rest Tuesday, when rebuttal testimony for the State will begin.

The VANDERVOORT

Vandervoort Player-Pianos

for Christmas Giving. Why?

Because—You can rely on the reputation of this house which is of as great importance as the reputation of the instrument itself.

Because—The best instruments are not always the ones that are the best known. This is true because many well known instruments have acquired their reputations through the indorsement of artists and other costly forms of advertising.

Because—This institution strives to give you the best in every department, and in offering the Sohmer, Kurtzmann, Acoustigrande, Fischer, Milton and Vandervoort Player-Pianos, we feel we are giving our patrons the best the market affords without their having to pay exorbitant prices.

Because—Your Player-Piano will be the center of attraction in your home, and you will expect it to last a very long time. It will be used and admired by your many friends, who in turn may be interested in purchasing one.

We, realizing these facts, must guarantee your satisfaction, and in offering our line of Player-Pianos we know we are making a strong bid for your patronage in our entire institution, and that your friends will also patronize us.

Our stock is now very complete and we are in a position to offer you the various case designs and finishes. We urge your immediate consideration, because there will likely be a shortage of instruments within the next few days.

Prices range from $585 to $1250.

Your old instrument taken as part payment, and we will be glad to arrange convenient terms on the balance.

JUDGE SAYS HE WILL GRANT ACTRESS' HUSBAND A DIVORCE

Hears Petition of L. C. Keating Against Former Stella Hammerstein, Daughter of Impresario.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Supreme Court Justice Platt, sitting at White Plains, announced yesterday that as soon as the testimony in the case is transcribed, he would order a divorce for L. C. Keating, a lawyer. Keating's wife was Miss Stella Hammerstein, daughter of the late impresario, Oscar Hammerstein. Mrs. Keating is a moving-picture actress, and the co-respondent, Charles F. Pope, follows the same profession.

Former Assemblyman Goodwin of White Plains, who appeared for the plaintiff, said Mrs. Keating was served with the complaint in the action on Nov. 6, but she did not answer. Neither was she represented in court by counsel.

WANDERING LIBERTY BONDS FINALLY DISAPPEAR ENTIRELY

Two $50 Liberty Bonds, owned by Solomon Muiller, 917 Market street, passed through a half dozen hands Friday after they had been misplaced, and were finally lost altogether on the street.

Goldie Muiller, 11 years old, had been sent by her father to the Jewish Alliance, Ninth and Carr streets, to get the bonds for him. She laid them on a radiator while she played with other girls. Then she forgot them. They were found by a janitress and turned over to another girl, who said she would see that Goldie was given the papers. This girl met another girl who offered to take them to Goldie's home. She put them between the leaves of her school books. When she reached Goldie's home she discovered the bonds had dropped from between the leaves and were gone again.

U. S. FARMS LEAD IN INDIVIDUAL PRODUCTION

Secretary Houston's Report Shows 1919 Valuation in United States Is $15,873,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The American farmer leads the world in individual production of crops, Secretary Houston of the Department of Agriculture, asserted today in his annual report. While countries such as Belgium, under intensive farming, get a higher acreage yield, he said, taking both acreage and yield per acre into account, the American agriculturist produces two and a half times as much as his Belgian and German rivals, 2.3 times as much as the British farmer, 3.2 times as much as the French, and more than six times as much as the Italian.

The result of this and of the American farmer's war work is shown in the 1919 American crop production, placed at three times greater in value than the average annual output during the five-year period preceding the European war. The aggregate value of all crops this year is placed at $15,873,000,000 as compared to $14,222,000,000 in 1918 and an average of $5,829,000,000 during the five-year period.

Live stock on farms this year was figured at $8,830,000,000 as against $8,284,000,000 in 1918.

Average Yield Increased.

The average yield for all crops for the decade ending in 1918 is about 16 per cent greater than for the average for the decade ending with 1890, the report said. The average rate of increase for the past 25 years is about one-half of one per cent a year.

Estimates in the report put the 1919 wheat production at 918,471,000 bushels and corn at 2,910,250,000 bushels. Cotton is expected to reach 10,696,000 bales and tobacco 1,316,553,000 pounds.

"The farmers of the nation in 1919 planted an acreage in leading cereals greater by 33,000,000 than the prewar annual average which, it is estimated will yield 635,000,000 more than the prewar average," Houston said of war work on the farms. "They increased the number of milk cows over 1914 by 2,700,000, of other cattle by 8,500,000, of swine by 16,700,000 and of horses and mules by 1,000,000, or a total of 28,900,000.

"The planting operations of the year began before the fighting ceased, and the call was still for more wheat. The department suggested a maximum fall acreage of 47,206,000 acres, an increase of 12 per cent over 1918. There was actually planted 49,261,000, the largest acreage in the nation's history, 6,960,000 acres more than in 1918.

"The spring wheat acreage was 22,593,000, while the winter and spring plantings combined amounted to 71,854,000 acres, or 7,200,000 more than the preceding record.

"It is estimated that the yield will exced that of 1918 by 1,000,000 bushels and will be the nation's second record wheat crop. The estimated corn crop of 2,910,000,000 bushels will be 300,000,000 greater than that of 1918."

Much Land Untilled.

The Nation can further expand its output of commodities by cultivating unused tillable land, estimated at more than 60 per cent of the total, the report states. Expansion is limited, however, by the supply of capital and labor.

No step to promote farmers' cooperative associations along the right lines should be omitted, the Secretary said. It is estimated that these organizations market annually approximately $1,500,000,000 worth of commodities.

Included in Houston's recommendations were the following:

The building up, primarily under State law, of a system of personal credit unions, for farmers whose financial status and operations make it difficult to secure accommodations through the ordinary channels; expansion of facilities for aiding in marketing, especially extension of the market news and food products inspection services; continuation of Federal participation in road building through an appropriation of $100,000,000 for each of the next four years! regulation and control of stockyards and packing-houses; Federal legislation to protect consumers against adulterated feeds and fertilizers; increased State support for rural schools and more definite instruction as to rural problems and conditions; legislation to improve rural sanitary conditions and provide hospital and medical facilities

A Ten-Day Tube of Pepsodent. Send the coupon. Make this simple home test and see how your teeth look then.

See How White Teeth Can Be Without Film

All Statements Approved by High Dental Authorities

Stain and Tartar Can Be Ended

They are due to film. Now you can daily combat that film and keep teeth whiter, safer and cleaner.

The ten-day test will prove this. The results are clear. And the book we send will tell the reason for them.

Make this test now. Millions have already done it. See for yourself the difference between film-coated teeth and clean teeth.

Your own teeth will tell you quickly what is best for you and yours.

Perhaps your teeth are clouded by a film. Most teeth are, more or less, save right after cleaning in a dentist's chair.

The cloudy film looks like the teeth, and you think the teeth are clouded. But it is the film. Remove it and see how teeth look then.

That viscous film which you feel with your tongue is the cause of most tooth troubles. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. The tooth brush does not end it. The ordinary dentifrice does not dissolve it. So it stays—much of it—and may do a ceaseless damage.

That is why so many brushed teeth discolor and decay. You leave the film, and that is the great tooth wrecker. Despite the tooth brush, statistics show that tooth troubles are constantly increasing.

How Teeth Are Ruined

That film is what discolors—not the teeth. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. Dentists call the film "bacterial plaque." Those germs, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Dental science has for years sought a way to combat this film. Periodic dental cleaning removed the film and tartar. But what was needed was a daily film combatant.

It has now been found. Convincing clinical and laboratory tests have amply proved its efficiency. Able authorities endorse it. And now leading dentists all over America are urging its daily use.

For home use the method is embodied in a dentifrice called Pepsodent—a scientific product. And, to spread the facts, a 10-Day Tube is being sent to anyone who asks.

Now Millions Know

Now millions know by actual test what Pepsodent can do. Everywhere you see the results in whiter, cleaner teeth.

Pepsodent is based on pepsin, the digestant of albumin. The film is albuminous matter. The object of Pepsodent is to dissolve it, then to day by day combat it.

Pepsin long seemed impossible. It must be activated, and the usual method is an acid harmful to the teeth. But science has discovered a harmless activating method. And now this film combatant can be every day applied.

Pepsodent needs no argument. The results are quick and apparent. See what it does, read the reason, then judge it for yourself.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the slimy film. See how the teeth whiten as the fixed film disappears.

Compare the results with your old methods. See the effects you never saw before. The test will be a revelation to you. Mail the coupon to us today.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

The scientific film combatant, which leading dentists everywhere now advise for daily use. Druggists everywhere are supplied with large tubes. Millions of teeth show its benefits.

Ten Days Will Tell

Look now at your teeth, then look in ten days. You will see what this new method means to you.

WORK, NOT TALK, ONLY PROGRAM OF COMMITTEE OF 48

Convention of "Liberal-Thinking" Citizens Will Meet Tuesday to Seek Remedy for Nation's Ills.

REMEDIES FIRST, THEN CANDIDATES

Non-Partisan League, Only Organization With Selection for President, Expected to Present Its Choice.

A convention without set program and made up of delegates who come without previous instructions and whose qualifications are limited to a conviction that the two dominant political parties of the country are fundamentally impotent and that only a governmental program of the "liberal-thinking" citizens will save the nation from the industrial, social and economic ills from which it is now conceded to be suffering, will be held at Hotel Statler, Tuesday to Friday, inclusive, and will be known as the "Conference of the Committee of Forty-eight."

The "conference" in reality will be a gathering of several groups of political bodies—one of which, at least, has an avowed candidate for President, whose claims, it is expected, will be urgently presented to the delegates, or conferees. This is Gov. Lynn J. Frazier, Non-Partisan League Governor of North Dakota, who himself will head a delegation of from 200 to 300 members of that party, which now claims the political control of that State, a similar strength in Minnesota and a varying control in 13 middle and northwestern States.

Not Coming to Spout.

Gov. Frazier's personality is the only one to come to light in advance of the conference. That this is, in a measure, the intent of those in charge of the arrangements, is indicated by the following statement, issued by the publicity committee yesterday:

"The Executive Committee has decided that there will be no set speeches, in so far as the committee might prearrange, and therefore no list of speakers can be announced in advance of the conference. The temporary chairman has not been agreed upon and will probably not be selected until after we assemble in St. Louis. This is quite in line with our established policy of attempting to hold in St. Louis a real working conference of earnest men and women who will assemble, not to listen to speeches by more or less celebrated men, which may or may not have direct application to the matter in hand, but to deal in a sober and intelligent fashion with the grave problems that confront our people. We are coming to work, not to spout. Our movement is founded on ideals and not personalities. The conference is going to be more interested in problems than in oratory.

"It will be noticed that all the political news of the two dominant parties today is concerned with the 'availability' of this or that candidate. You look in vain for a glimmer of thought or statesmanship directed toward the intelligent handling of the facts of modern civilization. With us the process is reversed. We are concerned, first, with determining the facts and the remedies. Leadership will take care of itself, or else the whole theory of democracy is wrong."

750 to 1000 to Attend.

The conference is expected to attract from 750 to 1000 persons from all parts of the country. The Committee of 48 derives its name from the fact it has representation in all the states. It is the outgrowth of several conferences held early last spring in New York of a group of men and women, who believed "that some definite effort should be made to discover the opinion of the people concerning fundamental national issues."

The quotation is from "The Call" of the committee which was sent out, together with a questionnaire, to a selected list of 10,000 readers of several so-called liberal, or radical, journals, the intention being to reach the "thinking" class of Americans. Subscribers to the sentiments of "The Call" were invited to send in small sums for the expenses of getting out literature and making the arrangements for a nation-wide conference. This conference is the gathering to be held n St. Louis, and the conferees will be the persons who have shown interest in the movement, as indicated by their financial assistance and their willingness to attend the conference.

Proposals for Course.

Having reached an understanding as to the immediate and pressing reforms which it shall champion, the conference is expected next to tackle the problem as to how it shall function. Of the suggestions already made, there are:

First, the formation of a third party and the placing of a candidate for President and Vice President, to be nominated in a national convention held not later than July 1, 1920, in the field.

Second, operating through the present dominant parties, seeking the election of those favorable to its program and the defeat of candidates opposed to it.

Third, the amalgamation or fed-

Industrial Fives

Are Issued in Amounts as Low as $50

INDUSTRIAL FIVES are the 5% Certificates of the Industrial Loan Company of St. Louis. They are purchasable in any amount from $50 to $5000. They yield 5% interest, payable semi-annually, and are secured by the entire assets of the Company.

The Industrial Loan Company is conducted on the well-known Morris plan. It lends money to firms, salaried employes and other persons of good character who might otherwise fall into the clutches of loan sharks.

It is directed and managed by some of St. Louis' most prominent and able business men. Their names are printed below.

Readily Convertible Into Cash

What makes Industrial Fives better than a bond is the fact that they are nothing more or less than 30-Day Demand Obligations of the Company, redeemable in cash up to 30 days' notice with interest to date of payment. Or on demand, by waiving the interest from the last interest-paying date.

Holders may borrow from the Company upon these Certificates, up to the full face value, without any security.

Call or write us for complete information regarding the safety and attractiveness of this investment.

One Customer Asks Why Union Electric Preferred Is Advertised by Brokers at Less Than Par When Offered by the Company at Par for Cash, $102 Per Share on Payments.

Here's Why:

Now and then a shrewd stock and bond broker talks a Union Electric preferred stockholder into trading his safe and sure U. E. 7 per cent stock for securities which are speculative but which PROMISE a higher dividend.

The broker knows he can sell U. E. preferred readily. It is a standard investment stock. The Company sells it only across its own counters, and only to its customers, as a form of profit sharing.

The broker gets a liberal commission for selling the other securities. If he can trade them for U. E. preferred even up—both at par—he can afford to advertise his U. E. shares below par, for a quick cash sale and as a means of boosting his business — AND STILL MAKE MONEY ON HIS TRADE.

Very little Union Electric preferred ever gets on the market. Its safety and high dividend rate make it a stock to be bought, registered and put away in a safe deposit, as a steady income-producer. The brokers never get more than a few shares of it. Any time you see those few shares offered below par, buy quickly; it's a bargain. If you own any of our preferred, and need to realize on it, bring it to our Securities Department, let us offer it for resale and get its real value.

Our third $1,000,000 issue of this stock is selling in smaller lots to more buyers than the first two issues. This issue bids fair to be divided among more than 2,000 of our customers.

ST. LOUIS SALES OFFICE: Room 201, Union Electric Building, 12th and Locust Streets. Open from 8 a. m. to 5:15 p. m. every business day, including Saturday. TELEPHONE MAIN 3220 or CENTRAL 3530 and ASK FOR SECURITIES DEPARTMENT. Mail orders filled on receipt of bank draft, certified check, express order or post-office money order.

TERMS OF SALE:

$100 a share for cash; $102 a share on a ten-payment plan. Under this plan you pay $10.20 a month for nine months, with your electric bill, on each share bought. You draw 5 per cent interest from Union Electric, payable quarterly, on your installment payments. You can draw all payments, with interest, any time before final payment is made. You get stock certificate when final payment is made. The Company reserves the right, at its option, to redeem this stock at $105 a share.

STYLE ADJUSTMENT PROPOSED

CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 6.—Lower prices of women's clothing will be possible only when productiveness of labor increases, demand for finer grades of wool recedes and styles are adjusted to the supply of fabrics. These assertions were made by speakers before the annual meeting of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association here.

As a means of adjusting styles to the supply of fabrics, a resolution was adopted calling for co-operation between garment makers and producers.

THIEVES IN STOLEN AUTO ROB TAXI PASSENGERS

Trail Cars and Hold Up Occupants When They Reach Destination.

An automobile belonging to Edward A. Faust of 1 Portland place was found abandoned at 6 o'clock yesterday morning in front of 4135 Washington boulevard, with four revolver cartridges in the tonneau, 1½ hours after it had been stolen from the curb at 5190 Cates avenue. In the interim it had served as a pirate craft for highwaymen using the novel tactics of trailing taxicabs and robbing the passengers as they disembarked.

The machine has distinctive characteristics which caused all of the victims to note it carefully. It is a Cadillac phaeton, with a red body and black wheels.

At 11:45 p. m. Friday a taxi conveying Mr. and Mrs. Frederick F. Sale, stopped in front of their residence, 6016 Waterman avenue. Immediately a red phaeton car drew up behind them, and three men, one with a handkerchief over his face, leaped out and surrounded the taxicab. Revolvers were flourished. They took from Sale $16 in cash and $2832.51 in checks, belonging to his father, Simon B. Sale.

Ten minutes later a taxicab in which Mr. and Mrs. Seymour R. Goge were passengers, stopped at their apartment, 5894 Kingsbury boulevard, which is two blocks from the Sale home. Close behind them came the red automobile. The same procedure was followed, and Goge was robbed of $35.

Three quarters of an hour before, the red car appeared at Gambleton place and the Hodiamont right-of-way, where many employes of the Fulton Iron Works, 1259 Delaware avenue, take the street car for their homes. It was the hour of changing shifts, and yesterday was payday at the plant.

There were five men in the machine, and three, with revolvers, sprang out to meet four employes coming from the works. From Philip Christman, 5640 Etzel avenue, they took $40.50, and from Wilgess Genneman, 4015 North Twenty-second street, $15. Fred Morrow, 6915 Magnolia avenue, had his hands in his pockets when ordered to raise them, and contrived to carry his money into the air in one palm, so that nothing was found when he was searched.

eration of existing political groups, such as the American Labor Party, the Non-Partisan League, the People's League, (which is the Non-Partisan League expanded to include members other than farmers,) and the world war veterans. All these organizations will participate in the conference.

The questionnaire, whose answers were tabulated and announced at a public meeting at Sheldon Memorial recently, and published in full in the Post-Dispatch the following day, set out 22 questions bearing on governmental machinery and policies. The answers indicated a preponderating sentiment for public machinery for the distribution of products, equal political and economic rights for women, Government control of monopolies, abolition of secret diplomacy, reformative and educational methods for criminals and a literal restoration of the constitutional rights of free speech and free assemblage. The answers of the questionnaire have been referred to a Platform Committee, which will embody them in recommendations to be made to the conference.

Writers and Lecturers Included.

The chairman of the Executive Committee of the Committee of Forty-eight is J. A. H. Hopkins, a wealthy insurance man of New York and a former progressive. Other members are H. R. Williams, vice chairman, in charge of local arrangements, Robert W. Bruere, Lincoln Colcord, Otto Cullman, Will Durant, William P. Everts, Gilson Gardner, John Hamyes Holmes, Mary H. Ingram, Horace M. Kallen, Oswald W. Knauth, Robert Morss Lovett, Allen McCurdy, Dudley Field Malone, George Naysmith, Mary Pattison, Gilbert E. Roe, Mary K. Simkhovitch, George P. West, Arthur G. Wray, Charles Zueblin and William F. Cochran. Virtually all are writers or lecturers on public topics.

A feature of the conference will be the publication daily of a miniature newspaper, to be known as "Facts," and which will be circulated among the delegates and mailed to the 20,000 "members" on the committee's mailing list. The staff will include William Hard, Lincoln Colcord, McAlister Coleman, Gilson Gardner, Boardman Robinson and J. W. McConaughy.

Other groups which are expected to attend the conference are the Farmers' Union, Farmers' Grange, American Society of Equity, National Co-operative Association, American Proportional Representation League, and the Public Ownership League. Individuals expected to attend include Glenn Plumb, author of the Plumb railroad plan, which is generally favored by members of the committee; Eugene M. Foss, former Massachusetts Governor and proponent of the Plumb plan; and Warren E. Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

American Legion Protests.

The announcement of the conference drew a resolution of protest from the central executive committee of the American Legion of Kansas City, calling on Mayor Kiel to prevent the meeting and asking other American Legion posts to join in the protest. The local committee retorted with a statement that it contemplated an orderly gathering for fair discussion along approved American lines. In a statement threatening legal action, Prof. Tyrell Williams, acting dean of Washington University law school, and a member of the local committee, pointed out that the World War Veterans, a rival organization to the American Legion, would participate in the conference. Several other American Legion posts in Missouri, and one in East St. Louis have adopted similar resolutions.

St. Louisans who assisted in organizing the movement here and in arranging for the conference include Flint Garrison, recent Democratic nominee for the Board of Aldermen; Percival Chubb, leader of the Ethical Society; Percy Werner, former head of the Civic League; Prof. Williams, F. J. Herzog, Dr. George Dock, Dr. G. Lippmann, Rabbi Samuel Thurman, Mrs. Eugene Senseney and Horace M. Swope.

PSYCHIC EXPERTS FINED, FACE A SECOND CHARGE

Woman and Husband Alleged to Have Taken Collection Before Starting Spiritualistic Meeting.

Mrs. Maude Abbott, 45 years old, 3914 Page boulevard, medium for the "Church of Psychical Research," and her husband, Frank Abbott, self-styled pastor of the church, who were fined $100 each by a jury in Police Court Friday night on a charge of telling fortunes, will be tried next Thursday by Judge Miller in the Court of Criminal Correction on charges of petty larceny growing out of a collection taken up at a meeting at their home Nov. 30, when they were arrested.

Policewoman Elizabeth Hoch testified at the Police Court hearing that she attended a seance Saturday night, Nov. 29, at the Abbott home, accompanied by Detectives Lawler and Joyce, whom she introduced respectively, as her husband, Mike La Rue, and her brother, "Jack." She requested an interview with a brother, whom she named as "Bill," but explained to the jury that he was a fictitious shade, as she never had such a brother.

Ghostly Figure Appears.

The lights went out, Miss Hoch said, and 25 persons attending the meeting and sitting in a circle, remained silent. Suddenly something white fluttered at the door of a cabinet. The audience held its breath, and a "ghost" strutted majestically about the room. Miss Hoch said she knew all the time that it was not a "real ghost," but it certainly made her feel "spooky." The form was draped in white, and a smearing of phosphorus down the front gave it a ghostly appearance.

"Who wants to speak to Brother Bill?" inquired a hollow voice.

"I do," Miss Hoch testified she said. "Is that you, Brother Bill? Come closer that I might embrace you."

She said that she wanted the "ghost" to advance so that the detectives could grab it. Instead it retreated and Detective Lawler sprang from his chair and threw his arms about it. Miss Hoch said she carried a flashlight beneath her coat and at the psychological moment flashed it and found the electric switch. When she turned on the lights, she said, the circle was thrown into confusion.

Lawler struggled with the "ghost" and when Frank Abbott got a strangle hold on the detective's neck Lawler drew his revolver and threatened to "shoot up" the place. He then tore a muslin shroud from the form and revealed Mrs. Abbott.

Her Astral Body.

Judge Mix asked Mrs. Abbott how it happened that she was "Brother Bill's ghost."

"That was my astral body," she replied. "I was in trance. The spirit was manifesting itself through me."

"But the policewoman has said that she never had a 'Brother Bill,' so how could his spirit bob up through you?" the Judge persisted.

"There are such things as lying and deceitful spirits," said Mrs. Abbott, "just as there are lying and deceitful persons in the material world. I did not know what was going on about me until I came out of my cataleptic state."

Mrs. Abbott declined to go into a trance for the benefit of the jury when asked if she could do so. She said that the courtroom was not a "sacred place." She said that she represented a church organization and that the prosecution was tantamount to religious persecution. She denied that she and her husband told fortunes for Miss Hoch and Detective Lawler, as they had testified.

Prof. James W. Whittlesey, 91 years old, 5064 Cabanne avenue, formerly a teacher at McKendree College, Lebanon, Ill., testified that he had attended seances at the Abbott home and that he believed the Abbotts were sincere in their spiritualistic work.

The warrants charging larceny were issued when detectives stated they had seen a collection taken up at the Abbott home, each person in the circle giving 50 cents. Fred M. Kershaw, also of the Page avenue address, who, the detectives said, helped to rig up the "spirit" cabinet, also was charged with larceny.

Tells a Secret

Manufacturer of Famous Medicine Tell Ingredients, So Public Can Appreciate Pure, Reliable Medicine.

Many people fear to take medicine to check and abort colds, cure coughs, catarrh, etc. This fear is groundless with all the products of The Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio. Not one contains opiates, narcotics or harmful drugs. Mentho-Laxene, for coughs, colds, catarrh, and all distress following a cold, is a compound of Wild Cherry, Tolu, Cascara, Grindelia, Menthoe Ammoniura Chloride and alcohol sufficient to preserve and keep in solution.

Every ingredient is in concentrated form and the medicine is so strong that only ten-drop doses are to be taken in the "raw" state. But the ideal way is to make into syrup by emptying a 2½-oz. bottle of Mentho-Laxene into a pint bottle and then fill the bottle with granulated sugar syrup, made by dissolving a pint of sugar in a half pint of boiling water. It is said by thousands that this makes a most effective home treatment for all cold troubles. The manufacturer guarantees it to please or money back. Sold by all good druggists.

SUMMARY OF WORK OF WORLD'S LABOR CONFERENCE

Conference Adopts Draft of Convention Limiting Hours of Labor in Industry to 8 a Day and 48 a Week.

IDEA ADAPTABLE TO CONDITIONS

Exceptions Also Made in Proposals to Prohibit Employment of Women and Children at Night.

By Dr. Louis Levine.

(Professor of economics of the University of Montana and for four years economic expert for the New York Department of Labor. In December, 1918, Dr. Levine became associated with the War Labor Policies Board and Prepared a report on certain phases of the international labor situation.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—When the International Labor Conference adjourned last Sunday the first experiment in international labor legislation under the provisions of the league of nations was generally declared to have proved a success. Not that every one of the 120 or more delegates was entirely pleased with the results. On the contrary, one could hear many comments on the unsatisfactory character of this or that feature of the work of the conference. But, as one delegate put it, the fact that all groups were more or less dissatisfied was the best proof that the conference had been successful.

The correctness of this interpretation must be tested by an examination of the work of the conference. It may be summarized briefly under the following topics:

The conference adopted a draft of a convention limiting the hours of labor in industrial establishments to eight hours a day and 48 hours a week. Exceptions are made for persons employed in confidential and managerial positions and in cases of emergency. In processes which are carried on continuously by a succession of shifts the 56-hour week is allowed. Special arrangements are also permitted in special cases and for seasonal industries. Special provisions are also made for the so-called backward countries. In Japan the hours of labor are limited to 48 a week in case of underground work in mines; in the raw silk industry the weekly hours are fixed at 60, and in all other industries at 57. A weekly rest of 24 hours is required.

The conference adopted a draft of a convention prohibiting the employment of children under 14 years of age in industrial establishments. Japan is permitted to employ children over 12 years of age in industry on condition that a child so employed shall have completed a course of study in an elementary school. In India no child under 12 years of age is to be employed in mines and quarries, on railroads and docks and in factories working with power and employing more than 10 persons.

Night Work for Children.

The conference adopted a draft of a convention prohibiting the employment of young persons in industry at night. Exceptions are made for two-shift industries and for tropical countries. The convention does not apply to persons over 16 years of age employed in continuous processes. Special provisions are made for Japan and India.

The conference approved the principle embodied in the Berne convention of 1906 that women should not be employed in industrial establishments at night. A draft of a convention was adopted prohibiting the employment of women six weeks after and before giving birth to a child. The women shall receive free medical attention and maternity benefits and shall not be dismissed from employment during her absence.

The conference adopted the principle that the employment of women should be entirely prohibited in processes which have a deleterious effect on the uterina function, and that the employment of women and young persons should be strictly regulated in unhealthy processes. The principle of compensation for occupational diseases was affirmed.

The draft of the convention on unemployment adopted by the conference provides that all states shall establish free public employment agencies under the control of a central authority; that the work of such national agencies shall be co-ordinated by the International Labor Office: that this office shall receive from all ratifying countries all available information on measures taken to reduce unemployment. The draft recommendation calls upon the various countries to abolish private employment agencies which are operated for profit and to establish an effective system of unemployment insurance.

A recommendation was adopted that the workers and their families belonging to one state but employed in another should be admitted to the benefits of the laws and regulations having regard to labor protection, as well as the right of lawful organization.

JUMP FROM BED IN MORNING AND DRINK HOT WATER

Tells Why Everyone Should Drink Hot Water Each Morning Before Breakfast.

To see the healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside bathing every morning for a week.

Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and toxins, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a fine appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges or whose skin is sallow or pallid, that one week of inside bathing will have them looking and feeling better every way.

SUMMARY OF WORK OF WORLD'S LABOR CONFERENCE

cordance with the provisions of the Versailles treaty.

Such are the main results of the work of the conference. They bear throughout the marks of compromise arrived at after long and arduous debate in committee meetings. It must be remembered that among the workers' representatives the majority, if not all, were members of Socialist, Syndicalist and Labor parties whose program far outdistances anything contemplated by the conference. On the other hand, the employers held out as long as possible against too great concessions. Only a careful study of the numerous proposals and amendments on both sides on all the questions before the conference could reveal how much each side had to compromise to arrive at results acceptable to both.

This spirit of conciliation and compromise clearly shows that there were important things at stake in the conference. It would be futile, however, to assume that there was agreement among the different groups and countries as to what the important things were. As it seems to me, the dominant motives which held the conference together were four in number.

1. The members of the conference were strongly impressed with the necessity of equalizing competitive labor conditions in world markets. This idea runs like a red thread through the proceedings of the conference. It was clearly revealed in the importance which all attached to the situation in Japan, the discussion of which waxed quite vehement at times.

2. The desire to assure industrial harmony within each individual country. In view of the situation in Europe and throughout the world, this motive was very influential.

3. The hope in the possibilities of the league of nations. Though starting from different premises and inspired by different aims, the members of the conference all seemed agreed on the necessity of the league in order to promote the economic and political reconstruction of the world.

4. The aim to promote internationalism as much as possible. This was perhaps the predominant idea among the workers' delegates. They see in the International Labor Conference an opportunity to bring the labor problems of all countries before the bar of world opinion and to advance ideas of economic internationalism in general.

Difficulties Smoothed Over.

Because the various countries and groups at the conference were moved by these ideas, hopes and desires in varying degrees, difficulties were smoothed over and compromises reached. Two conditions made the process of compromise easier. One was the method of voting, the delegates from each country voting as individuals. This permitted considerable flexibility for the play of national, international and industrial interests. Frequently, one could see the hands of Government delegates raised in voting with those of workers against employers, and vice versa. The second condition was the splendid organization of committees and subcommittees.

Considering the results of the conference in relation to the countries represented, one may distinguish three groups. The first group includes such countries as Sweden, Norway, Holland, France and Switzerland, in which labor and social legislation has advanced in many respects beyond the point at which the conference stopped. The second group includes countries such as the republics of Latin America and federated states, in which industrial conditions and constitutional organization make the application of the recommendations of the conference extremely doubtful. The third group consists of those countries in which labor legislation is in a rudimentary condition, and where the application of the decisions of the conference will mean a serious act of industrial reorganization. To the third group belongs Japan, China, India and other industrially backward countries.

In estimating the value of the work of the conference, it is assumed that the Governments of the various countries will act upon its recommendations. The conventions, recommendations and resolutions drafted by the conference have no force until ratified or acted upon by the Legislatures of the countries represented at the conference. Much will also depend on the good faith of the various Governments and on the ability of the various groups to enforce a proper interpretation of the decisions which, in many instances, are worded vaguely and leave many loopholes. As the dates for the ratification are fixed for July 1, 1921, and later, and as considerable time is allowed for action by the Legislatures of the different countries, it may be several years before the effects of the work of the conference will be really known.

Those who watched the proceedings of the conference could not but be impressed with the earnestness of the delegates and with their evident sense of strong moral obligation for decisions taken. This is not only a promise that strong efforts will be made to obtain favorable action on the recommendations of the conference. It also indicates that in the mind of the delegates their conventions and recommendations, besides being of practical legislative importance, had the value of general principles upon which the future of industrial and social relations must be based. And though the sense of national interest dominated the delegations of each country, the proceedings of the conference reflected a consciousness on the part of the delegates that they were laying the foundations of a world public opinion which may one day be the stronger guarantee of fair dealing and international justice. From this point of view the absence of American representatives may be deplored.

Why Gray Hair Is No Longer Necessary

New, Clean, Easy, Harmless Treatment—First Bottle Gives SATISFACTION

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, leading stores throughout the country are recommending "Canute Water" for Gray Hair to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Enderle and Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores, Famous & Barr Co., Stix, Baer and Fuller, and Nugents' Dept. Store sell it in St. Louis on a positive guarantee of absolute satisfaction or your money back: 'Canute Water" restores color to your hair so naturally and evenly that no one can possibly tell you are using anything. All questions one naturally asks, are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use "Canute Water" for Gray Hair without the slightest fear of injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal-tar products of any kind—making it as harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. "Canute Water" for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A CRUDE DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. "Canute Water" is a simple method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that "Canute Water" is not a crude dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair. While as the reader knows the crude dyes are put up in packages marked with the different colors of hair or numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way and simply require a retouching at the roots once in a while as the new hair grows out.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will affect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores, your own druggist or by mail direct upon receipt of price, $1.10 per bottle. Friedman Canute Co., 18 East 17th Street,
New York City, New York.

NOTICE—Beware of sales-people who get commissions to sell worthless imitations. To be SAFE, accept no substitute for "CANUTE WATER".

4000 RUBLES A MONTH MEANS A BARE LIVING

Russian Here Gets Letter From Brother in Odessa Telling of Money's Loss of Value.

Wages of 4000 rubles a month mean nothing in Russia, according to a letter received by Harry Stein, a clothier, living at 2728 Chouteau avenue, from his brother, Naoum Sterin, a bookkeeper in a plant at Odessa, in the province of Karson Jubarny, which is now under Bolshevik rule.

The letter was written Oct. 26 and was mailed from Greece by a friend of Sterin because letters to America cannot be sent from Odessa.

Before the war the ruble was worth 50 cents. Now its value is about 1 cent. Sterin says that with his 4000 rubles a month salary he is not able to live as comfortably as when he received 50 rubles for the same amount of work.

Some of the prices quoted in the letter are: Suit, 7000 rubles; shoes, 3000 rubles; socks, 80 rubles; bath, 50 rubles; monthly room rent, 300 rubles; 40 pounds of wood, 200 rubles, with the cost of other necessities proportionately high.

The letter says there have been three changes of Government in the last year. First the Bolshevik took charge and were overthrown by the Deniken faction, which shot, hung and starved about 4000 inhabitants of Odessa, many of whom were Jews. This group remained in power for several months until the Bolsheviki regain control. The inhabitants welcomed the return of the Bolsheviki, the letter said, because of the atrocities the Deniken faction perpetrated.

Stein said that he had written his brother about two years ago and that this letter was received by his brother a year later.

WAR RECORD OF RAILROAD "Y"

In the current issue of the Railroad Association Magazine a record of the activities of the Railroad Department of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. shows that it served 1,500,000 men during the war and met and cheered and fed 3000 trainloads of soldiers.

Letters of commendation for the "Y" work here are from Bishop Tuttle, State Senator Gardner, Clarenve H. Howard, Mayor Kiel, Chief of Police O'Brien, B. F. Bush, I. L. Burlingame, Dr. W. C. Bitting, Lieut. F. M. Willson and many others.

GETS $30 FOR MARTEN SKIN

U. S. Soldier Killed Animal in Occupied Germany With Club.

Knowing the difference between a wolf and a marten netted Roy Camp, a member of the 132d Regiment, Luxemburg, Germany, $30, almost equal to his month's pay in the army, when the skin of a marten he killed in Germany last January was sold yesterday by his uncle, F. R. Dean, to Funsten Bros.

Camp was in a Luxemburg forest when an animal came past a group of men he was with. His comrades made guesses as to what kind of an animal it was but when Camp saw it he recognized it as a marten, whose skin is valuable. He killed the animal with a club and sent the skin to his uncle. The pelt was of high grade and classed as a No. 1.

EARLY MAILING OF GIFTS URGED

Postmaster Warns of Curtailment in Train Service.

An appeal to the public to purchase Christmas presents and mail them at once, regardless of their destination, has been issued by Postmaster Selph, who stated that the curtailment of train service effective tomorrow will have a serious effect on the expeditious delivery of mail. The Postoffice has previously announced that gifts marked "Do not open until Christmas," are now acceptable for mailing.

The postal service cannot guarantee delivery nor be responsible for delays due to lack of trains or fuel, it was stated.

"The public should understand the gravity of the situation," Postmaster Selph said. "The only sure way to avoid disappointments is to mail Christmas packages now."

LAWYERS ABOUND IN FAMILY

Relatives of J. W. McElhinney of Clayton in Reunion.

Lawyers seem to abound in the family of John W. McElhinney, Henderson and Clayton avenues, Clayton. A short time ago the family had a reunion in Clayton, and all present except the children were either lawyers or lawyers' wives. Four generations were represented.

Those present were Judge and Mrs. John J. Suter of Palmyra, Mo., parents of Mrs. McIlhinney, and Mrs. Lula B. Stevens, widow of R. H. Stevens, who was a prominent St. Louis County attorney; their grandson, Edwin McD. Stevens, a Clayton attorney, and his 19-months-old twin daughters, Dona Lee and Dorothy Elizabeth Stevens.

FANCY SAFETY RAZORS TAXABLE

Gold and silver plated safety razors are taxable under the classification of "articles ornamented, mounted or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof" mentioned in the Revenue Act of 1918, according to a notice received yesterday by Collector of Internal Revenue Moore.

The section of the act covering this taxation went into effect April 1 last. Ivory articles, with the exception of surgical instruments, are also taxable under this section when "sold by or for a dealer or his estate for consumption and use."

VIENNA PAPER SAYS EUROPE NEEDS RETURN OF HOOVER

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

VIENNA, Dec. 6.—The Neues Uhrblatt says that Europe needs Herbert Hoover back, because disorganization and panic have seized the food control centers and are menacing with starvation not only Vienna but other places. For example, Austria will be provided with American and Argentine food landed at French ports and brought across the continent, while food trains from Rumania and Jugo-Slavia go to Paris. It is the same with coal. Germany must deliver coal to France, and France promises to help Austria. Hoover's system was an efficient distribution of foodstuffs, and he could perfect the system.

The Vienna paper overlooks the fact that many interests are working to maintain the misery of Central Europe, namely food owners, especially those who have stores of food from Hungary and are profiting by exportation and importation. The employes of the Government and officials are also profiting from the immense graft at the food centers.

Germany is assuring flour through the rest of the year, and German aid is being used as the basis for propaganda looking to the union of Austria and Germany. The idea is undoubtedly making a favorable impression.

Christmas Cheer

It is not a bit too early to make your gift selections. And, if you desire, we will hold the articles selected for Christmas delivery.

You can give a worth-while gift without a large outlay of money. Our plan of dividing the payments over the months makes buying easy.

Hellrung & Grimm

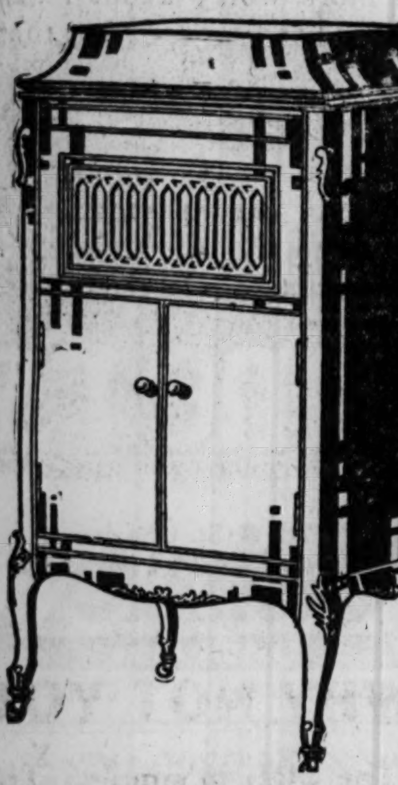
SUPPOSE you have a little confidential chat with old Santa and tell him your idea of the gift spirit. Impress upon him that the biggest thing in your life is your home; that the gifts that bring added beauty to the home or that lessen the drudgery of your daily tasks bring Christmas cheer that endures through the years. Why not make this a furniture Christmas? Furniture is the gift enduring; the gift that shows the giver really thought and cared.

Pathé



What is there that can lift life out of the drab the way music does? What else than music can voice the spirit of the Yuletide?

The Pathe Brings Music at Its Fullest

For the Pathe is the Phonograph of two continents, opening to you the whole world of music—the greatest artists of the American operatic and concert stage; celebrated foreign stars who have never appeared in this country; famous foreign orchestras and bands; a host of delightful musical novelties.

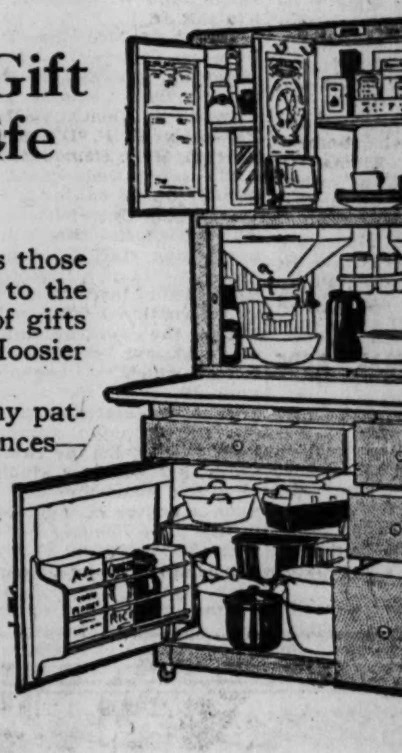
These are Pathe records. And because Pathe Records are played with a Sapphire Ball (not a point), every record is guaranteed to play more than a thousand times without the least impairment to its unexcelled beauty and tone.

The Pathe plays all records. And you'll find a Pathe, with all the superb Pathe features, at the price you care to pay. Pathes from $45 to $1000. Easy payment terms.

When Santa comes into the kitchen he comes into woman's workshop. If he brings with him a saving of time and work he is welcome, indeed.

HOOSIER

Kitchen Cabinet
Saves
Miles of Steps



The Christmas Gift Every Housewife Wants

Few gifts appeal to the housewife as much as those that save her time and strength and which add to the attractiveness of her home. Among this class of gifts is one that meets every requirement—the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet.

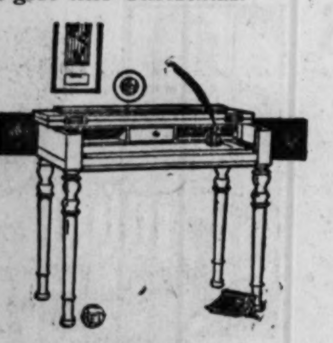
Because of its scientific arrangement and many patented features, the Hoosier brings vital conveniences—time and labor savers—not to be found elsewhere. Every detail is the result of years of kitchen experience; every worthy device is included.

What other gift could equal several extra hours of leisure each week? This is the fundamental upon which Hoosier is constructed—the saving of time and toil; the rendering of efficient kitchen service.

The prices are within range of all. Easy terms if desired.

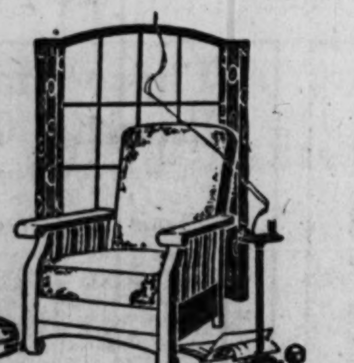
For the Personal Use of the Lady of the House

That is what a lady's desk is intended for. And there is no reason in the world why you should be without one, when we have so many, and there is someone who would be glad to make it a gift this Christmas.

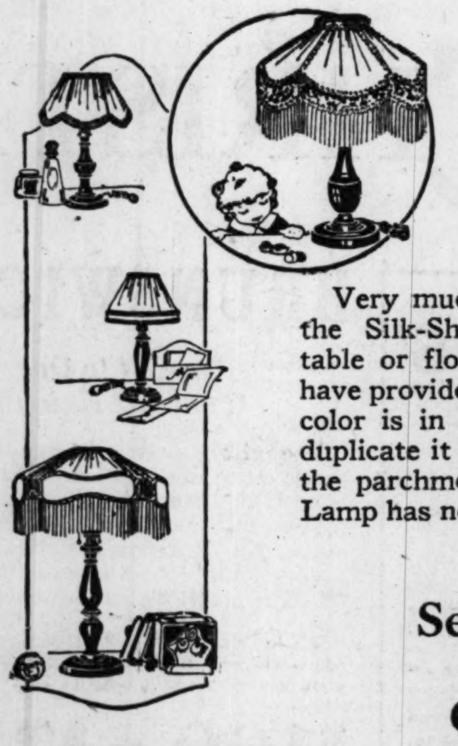


Strictly for Dad

Dad has always wanted one of those big Chairs with the reclining back and a footrest. And a Smoking Stand to go with it. We'll help you select what dad most wants.



Hellrung & Grimm



Electric Lamps

Very much in vogue now are the Silk-Shaded Lamps, either table or floor Lamps. And we have provided well. Really, if the color is in the rainbow we can duplicate it in a silk shade. But the parchment and glass-shaded Lamp has not been forgotten.

Sewing Stands and Other Things

The Sewing Stand is always a big gift favorite—one of a dozen styles is here illustrated.

And there are so many extra pieces of furniture that were made, it would seem, just for gift purposes—for instance,

A Dressing Table or a Chest of Drawers.

A Day Bed.

A Bookcase or Stand.

A Telephone Stand or a Fernery.

Several Things Worth Considering

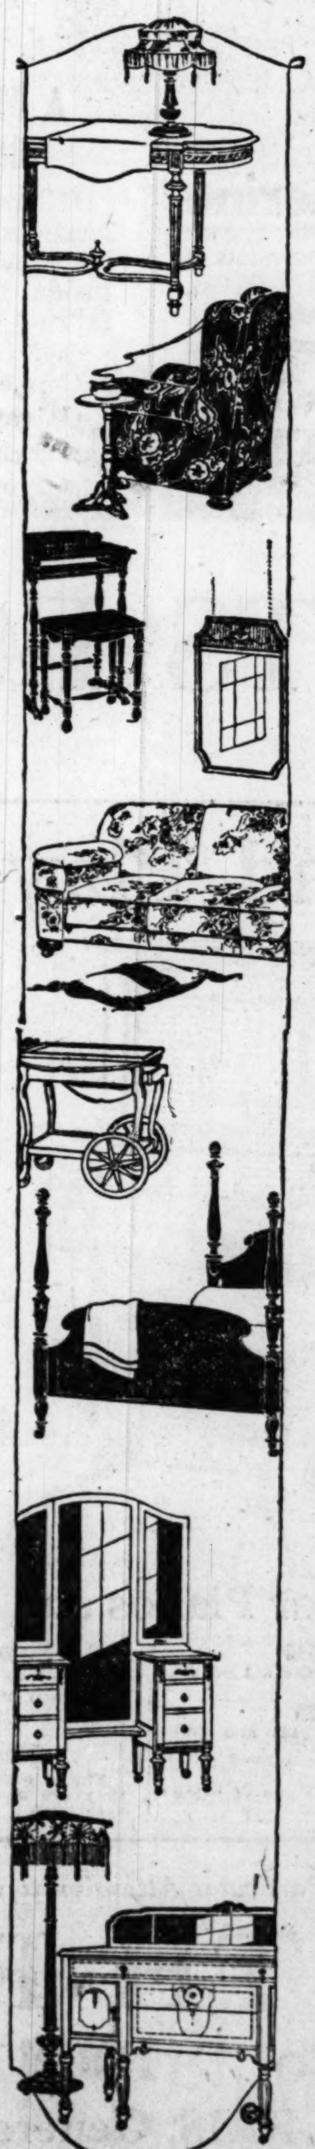
There are so many things that add so much to the appearance of a home and the joy of living. Little things, many of them, that you have intended for ever so long to get. So put them down on your gift list.

In some room a pair of Curtains are needed. Put that down on your list—and you might add "Portieres."

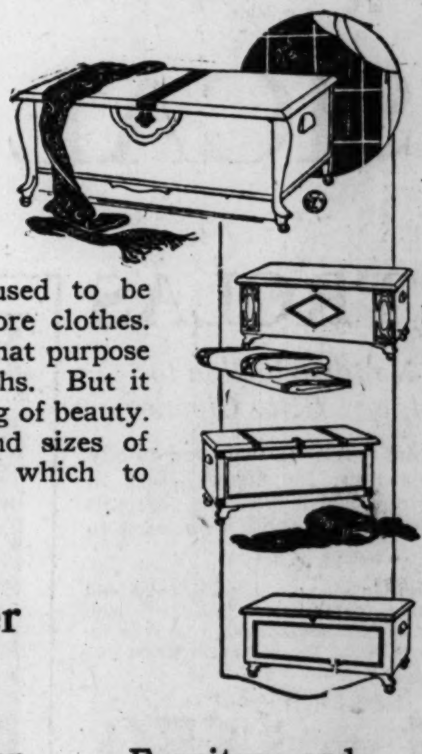
New Linoleum makes the kitchen floor easily kept clean.

Now check off one of these—a new Rug for one of the rooms—a small Rug for between doors; a Runner for the hall; a pretty washable Bath Rug.

And a Combination Range (burning either coal or gas) will do two things. It will effect a saving in fuel. It will make cooking and baking easier and the results certain.



Cedar Chests



The Cedar Chest used to be simply a place to store clothes. It is still useful for that purpose and to keep out moths. But it has grown into a thing of beauty. A hundred styles and sizes of Cedar Chests from which to choose.

Helping Mother Enjoy Life

Housework is, so they say, woman's work; but don't you forget that a lot of it would tax a man's strength — unless mother has the labor-saving tools that makes it easy.

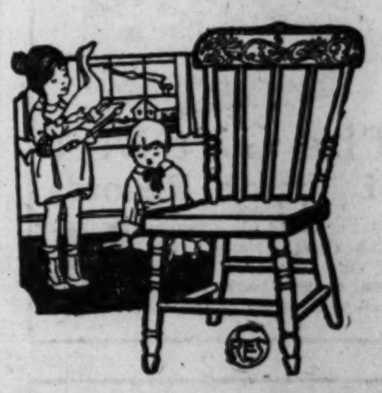
Perhaps that old sewing machine is all out of kilter and works so hard that running it an hour or two leaves mother all tired out.

If a man had to sweep a room it's certain that his wife would get a Vacuum Cleaner the next day. The Electric Vacuum Cleaner is the biggest household labor-saving device ever bestowed upon uncomplaining woman. We show all the standard makes and sell them on convenient payment terms.

Washday is not ordinarily a pleasant occasion. But it's downright fun to do the wash when you have an Electric Washing Machine.

Furniture and Doll Buggies for the Kiddies

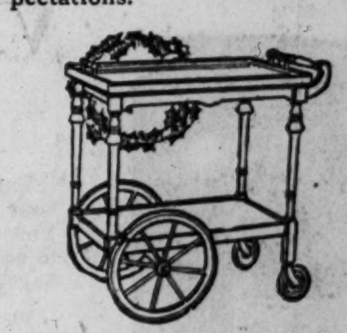
There are Go-Carts and Carriages for baby's dolls that are just like the buggy that baby herself rode in—only of a smaller size.



And Chairs and Rockers for children's use that are built as finely and substantially as furniture for the grown-ups—and beds, dressers and other furniture for baby and her dolls.

Use It to Bring in the Christmas Dinner

If hubby really wants to do himself proud — well — a complete new Dining-Room Suite will do it. As a compromise, though, a Tea Cart will come nearest meeting up with expectations.



Pleasing Daddy and Saving the Rugs

Daddy will be tickled with a Smoking Stand—and there won't be any more ashes spilled on the floor. And early buyers can choose from a wonderful assortment—brass stands, wood stands and smoking stands with humidors to keep cigars in good condition. A smoking stand is a great solver of the gift problem.

FOSTER HOMES SOUGHT FOR 56 CHILDREN

Board of Children's Guardians Hopes to Have All of Them Adopted Before Christmas.

"Have a child in your home this Christmas" is the slogan of the Board of Children's Guardians of St. Louis, which has 56 children for adoption. The children are from two weeks to 14 years old, and there are Protestant and Catholics, white and negro boys and girls on the list.

The board began six years ago to give dependent and neglected children of the city a chance to live and grow into good citizens by obtaining homes for them. The superiority of foster homes over institutions has been proved by the hundreds of children placed in comfortable homes here.

Abandoned children and foundlings are placed in charge of the board, and first put in "receiving homes," where they are built up to better physical and mental condition by private families with roomy quarters who are willing to take a number of children temporarily.

When a child is to be adopted it is first given to a family "on trial," as immediate adoptions are not considered by the board. Two years' probation are required to determine if the family is capable of caring for the child and whether it is happy and content in its surroundings. During this time it is under supervision of a physician and visitor of the board, who watch the care and development of the child, and to approve or reject the adoption.

Applications for children who are to be seen in the "receiving homes" may be made to Miss Emma C. Puschner, Agent, Board of Children's Guardians, 237 Municipal Courts Building. The board is composed of C. G. Rathmann, chairman, Forrest C. Donnell, Judge George H. Williams, Francis G. Easton, Philip C. Scanlan, Irvin Bettmann, and Ferd P. Meyer, secretary.

C. O. BRANT FUNERAL HERE

Brother of Mrs. Breckinridge Jones Died at Gretna, Va.

Funeral services will be held in St. Louis this afternoon for Charles O'Neill Brant of Gretna, Va., who died in that city Wednesday. He was a brother of Mrs. Breckinridge Jones, 45 Portland place, wife of the president of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

His widow, who was formerly Miss Mary Wood of St. Louis, is bringing the body here. Burial will be in the Bellefontaine Cemetery.

WASHINGTON U. BEGINS $2,000,000 CAMPAIGN

Alumni to Canvass 3200 Members Here in Behalf of Salary Endowment.

Intensive effort in behalf of the salary endowment of $2,000,000 being sought for Washington University will be started to-morrow by the alumni of that institution, to continue for one week. By the end of that period it is expected that each of the approximately 3200 members of that body resident in St. Louis will have been enrolled as a contributor to that fund, and that at least as many more who are not among the graduates, but are steadfast friends of the university, will have gone upon the list with them.

Steps to obtain contributions from alumni members living outside St. Louis, numbering nearly 5000, are also to be taken.

Each of the four schools of the university has named a committee to direct the drive, as follows:

Arts and Sciences—W. H. Danforth, chairman; H. J. Steinbreder, vice chairman; F. E. Bausch, F. M. Cann, Lillie Ernst, Col. John A. Laird, Charles Parsons Pettus, C. W. Rice, W. E. Rolfe, Philo Stevenson, Harry F. Thomson, J. W. Woermann and T. H. Cobbs, the latter ex-officio, as president of the Alumni Association.

School of Law—Judge Virgil Rule, Judge John W. Calhoun, Charles E. Kimball Jr.

School of Medicine—Drs. F. O. Schwartz, Harvey G. Mudd, J. B. Shapleigh, Elsworth S. Smith, Willard Bartlett, Louis H. Behrens.

School of Dentistry—Drs. B. W. Follenius, H. F. D'Oench, W. M. Bartlett, H. F. Hagemann.

The salary endowment campaign, in addition to making it feasible for Washington University to establish a scale of salaries that will give to it a teaching staff fully meeting the requirements of a first-grade higher institution of learning and strengthen its international fame, will probably hasten the working union of the four alumni associations, effort toward which was begun at the annual dinner of the association last year. It was stated at the joint meeting of campaign committees last week that it was the first time in 30 years that the four alumni associations had come together and agreed upon a course of common action.

Miss Jean Spencer Blair, formerly with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., has been named by University Treasurer Kotany as secretary of the alumni, with office on the campus, her duties at present pertaining mainly to the endowment campaign, but generally she is to look after affairs of the alumni in every direction.

The committee created by the corporation to have general charge of the salary endowment movement, of which Benjamin Gratz is chairman, reports splendid progress.

APPEAL ISSUED FOR MORE CHRISTMAS CAROL SINGERS

Children's Aid Society Hopes to Have Groups in All Neighborhoods—Goal Set at $5000.

An appeal was issued yesterday by the Children's Aid Society for more Christmas carol singers. It is hoped to have groups in every neighborhood making the rounds on Christmas eve. Last year there were 140 bands and the total collection was $3214, and this year the goal is $5000. Any club, class or lodge willing to join is asked to communicate with Miss Florence Van Sickler, secretary of the aid society, Board of Education Building, Olive 1087. Bands in the North and South ends of the city are wanted especially, because the organization there last Christmas was disappointing.

Apart from the money collected, the aid society wants as many bands as possible because of the friendly community spirit the carol singing awakens. The hospitality of the public is asked for the singers, many of whom last year were invited into the homes after the carols were sung in the streets. The money collected Christmas eve goes to care for hundreds of neglected children, who are placed in comfortable private homes where their board is paid, or are provided with clothing and supervised in their own homes.

UNDERWEIGHT OF CHILDREN CHARGED TO LIVING COSTS

COLUMBUS, Ind., Dec. 6.—Declarations by parents of boys and girls attending the public schools of Columbus that their children were undernourished because of the high cost of living has resulted in an investigation of conditions.

All school children are being weighed and examined. The investigation, as far as it has proceeded, shows that 46 per cent of them are more than four pounds under weight. pint of milk and buttered bread. Only 12 per cent of the thousands that attend school have been found to be normal in poundage.

In an effort to build up the children's bodies and resistance force, parents of children attending one school have promised to pay for a which will be fed to pupils each morning at the school. Donald Dushane, superintendent of city schools, has requested that each child be fed a pint of milk daily and to prohibit the use of tea or coffee. The parents also are asked to see that each boy and girl gets at least nine hours' sleep each night.

FAC-SIMILES of PRESIDENT WILSON'S SIGNATURES as they APPEAR on PARDON PAPERS from SEPTEMBER 29 to NOVEMBER 22.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.

PRESIDENT WILSON is progressing back to health so rapidly that the doctors proclaim his improvement to be phenomenal and so slowly that, though he has been in bed two months, it will be another month at least before he is sitting at his desk again in anything like the full swing of his official activities.

The explanation of the seeming contradiction lies in the circumstance that six months is the ordinary period of recovery from such a nervous breakdown as that suffered by Mr. Wilson.

There is no medical authority for the prophecy that another 30 days will see him convalescent, for Admiral Grayson, as well as the specialists, is still avoiding prophecy lest some untoward happening interrupt the steady course of improvement, but certain plans are being based on this estimate. He anticipates being up and about the first of the year and there is a report that during the mournful service of a Thanksgiving in bed he was promised that, if all goes well, he can partake of the family dinner on Christmas, with permission to do his worst to the turkey.

Pardons First, He Ordered.

Progress of his recovery is recorded in his own handwriting. During his illness he has had to sign probably 50 documents.

When he found he was to be allowed to attend to a certain amount of business he stipulated that first must come the consideration of applications for executive clemency. He said that no man who had been adjudged to have earned his freedom by the Department of Justice ought to suffer because of his illness. Hence most of the signatures that are printed as exhibits are those appended to pardons.

At the beginning of the President's illness his enemies in the Senate, who were whispering that he was hopelessly paralyzed or his mind affected, questioned the genuineness of his signature. They were particularly worked up over the one to the nomination of Judge Faris of the Missouri Supreme Court to the St. Louis Federal bench. They pointed out to all who would look its divergence from the President's well known handwriting as evidence either that somebody else was doing the signing or that he was using his left hand because the right was helpless. It was not until it was discovered that this signature was written weeks before the President's breakdown—in fact before he started on his speaking tour—that this form of innuendo was discontinued.

Tries to Clean Up Work.

Even after his return to Washington the President's handwriting was firm and legible. On Sept. 29 he signed a batch of pardons. This was during the period when he was trying to clean up his work against the long period of prostration he knew was coming. When he got around to signing again his penmanship was pretty weak, though some of the irregularity and uncertainty of the lines about Oct. 20 were due to the manner in which he had to work. Nobody could do a Spencerian job lying flat on his back while the paper was held up for him to scrawl with an indelible pencil. For a week or so thereafter he economized effort by signing only his initials. They were feeble, but they were enough to get some people into the sunlight which was denied him, and he made a grim comment then about knowing how a prisoner felt.

Toward the end of October his handwriting shows the gain in strength and Nov. 22 he attached a signature to the application in the Washington Citizens' campaign that had no wavering lines.

Now he is doing well. He takes his "outings" in a wheeled reclining chair, in a much easier position to write. Naturally, the wheeled chair has given rise to another crop of rumors, but inquirers are assured it only means that the rest cure is continuing and that he is not yet ready for the effort of walking. After two months in bed even a well would have difficulty in standing, and there is nothing to be gained now by the effort. That will come along shortly.

KREISLER SYMPHONY SOLOIST THIS WEEK

Eminent Violinist Will Display More Serious Talents in Beethoven Concerto.

Fritz Kreisler, most popular of instrumentalists, returns swiftly for his second appearance this season in St. Louis. On Nov. 8, after a self-imposed eclipse of two years, he came to the Odeon for a violin recital. On Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week he will function as soloist at the Symphony Orchestra concerts. At the recital he gave the sort of light and tuneful program which has made him the idol of phonograph enthusiasts. At the symphony concerts he will display his more serious genius by performing Beethoven's Concerto in D Major, Op. 61.

This masterpiece was written in 1806, when the violin bow had been perfected and the general technique of the instrument had been mastered. However, Paganini had not yet arisen to invent the dazzling displays of executancy which characterize more modern compositions for the violin. So that the concerto stands on a middle ground, demanding mostly the sustainment of a pure, noble tone, depth of feeling and amphlitude of style. Kreisler should afford a memorable performance.

It is not often that a symphony is played by the orchestra in two successive years. Yet that is what Director Zach, urged by many requests, will do for Chausson's Symphony in B-flat major, Op. 29. This work proved unexpectedly popular when it was performed last year for the first time in St. Louis. The complete program for the pair of concerts this week is as follows:

Symphony in B-flat major, Op. 29—Chausson
Lent—Allegro vivo; Presto.
Tres Lent.
Anime: Grave.
Concerto for Violin in D major, Op 61 ....Beethoven
Allegro ma non troppo.
Larghetto.
Rondo.
Overture—In the Spring....Goldmark

Today's Popular Concert.

Miss Dorothy Achenbach, pianist, makes her second appearance as a soloist at a popular concert of the orchestra, this afternoon at the Odeon. When the orchestra was on tour in the Southwest in 1917, Director Zach's attention was brought to Miss Achenbach, then a pupil in a girls' school at Sherman, Tex. He invited her to appear at a Sunday concert in St. Louis, and she did so on March 10, 1918. Later she won a scholarship offered by the Federated Music Clubs of Texas, which afforded her a term of work with Mme. Olga Samaroff. The orchestral program features two "first time" numbers, "Carillon," by Witowski, and "Northern Rhapsody," by Lucius Hosmer, a companion piece to his familiar "Southern Rhapsody." The newer composition employs familiar themes, such as "Home, Sweet Home," and "Yankee Doodle." The program is as follows:

March—Pomp and Circumstance—Elgar
Overture to The Merry Wives of Windsor ....Nicolai
Suite for orchestra—Carillon—Witowski
Concerto for piano, in A minor, Op. 16 ....Grieg
Allegro moderato.
Adagio.
Allegro marcato.
Serenade Hongroise ....Joncieres
Northern Rhapsody ....Hosmer

Rosenblatt Sings Tonight.

Josef Rosenblatt, the Jewish cantor who sings coloratura soprano through a huge beard, and who has also a beautiful though rather untrained tenor voice, will give a recital tonight at the Odeon, singing many Hebrew liturgical and folk songs, but also attempting an aria from "Aida," a song by Denza, and a group in English—"The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," "The Dying Harper," a Welsh air, and Wilfrid Sanderson's "The Trumpet Call." The boxes have been taken over and resold for the benefit of the Jewish Orphans' Home, 3117 Lafayette avenue.

Miss Alma Peterson, soprano of the Chicago Opera Co., will give a recital at the Odeon Thursday night for the benefit of the Young Women's Clubhouse, 3434 Morgan street. Miss Peterson will be remembered here for her singing of the role of Alisa in "Lucia di Lammermoor," with Mme. Galli-Curci, at the Chicago Grand Opera Co.'s performance at the Coliseum on Nov. 3, 1917. She was born on a Minnnesota farm of Swedish parents.

Marie Ruemmeli, pianist, will give a "Chopin evening" Thursday night at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium. She will undertake the composer's 24 preludes, his six "Chants Polonais," transcribed by Liszt; his Impromptu, Op. 36, and Ballade, Op. 23.

OFFICE FOR LINDENWOOD DEAN

Miss Lucinda D. Templin Is Adviser to College Women's Federation.

Miss Lucinda D. Templin, dean of Lindenwood College, has just been appointed to the new office of collegiate adviser of the National Federation of College Women. This organization, representing 95,000 women, met in Chicago November 19—23. It includes college women who are not graduates, as well as those who are, and has members in almost all the professions and occupations of womankind. Mrs. Kingman Miller of New York City is president.

It was agreed by 125 delegates at the Chicago meeting that a State chairman should be appointed in every State, to assist young women desiring to know about vocational training. Co-operating with all the State chairmen will be the national adviser. Information as to the situation in the various States will be co-ordinated through the collegiate adviser. Miss Templin has specialized in "Vocational Guidance" in summer work at Harvard.

FRENCH PLAN TO MAKE HOTELS ATTRACTIVE TO AMERICANS

Recognition of Bathtub and Manufacture of Ice Cream Are Among Measures Proposed.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 18.—The National Chamber of Hotel Keepers has begun an active campaign to make French hotels attractive to Americans. American ideas are being sought through an agent of the chamber in the United States. The necessity of modern toilet conveniences, honest treatment, and other measures conforming to the standards of the United States are emphasized.

Cleanliness is given the most attention by the chamber's agent in the United States and he cites conditions in some of the French hotels that would be surprising to an American. He recommends the use of white paint, greater illumination, recognition of the bathtub from the American point of view, removal of various insanitary quarters from near the kitchen, elimination of little service charges and other changes.

"Breakfast," the correspondent reports, "is the American's best meal," and we must organize ourselves to give it to him and to serve it quickly. Also, ice cream is the national dessert; it is eaten morning and night. America has machines for making this dessert. Perhaps we can adopt a model and later make it in France."

The hotel men are cautioned by the correspondent against "a veritable organization to boost prices," which he said had been reported to him. Otherwise, he reasoned, returning travelers would spread the bad news and "we would thus lose the chance we now have to make enormous profits."

To prevent such overcharging, a Government agency is obtaining pledges from hotels to charge only posted rates to tourists directed to them through the Government's international publicity campaign to attract visitors.

Care and Responsibility.

THE responsibility attached to the preparing of a remedy for infants and children is undoubtedly greater than that imposed upon the manufacturer of remedies for adults whose system is sufficiently strong to counteract, for a time at least, any injurious drug. It is well to observe that Castoria is prepared today, as it has been for the past 40 years, under the personal supervision of Mr. Chas. H. Fletcher.

What have makers of imitations and substitutes at stake? What are their responsibilities? To whom are they answerable? They spring up today, scatter their nefarious wares broadcast, and disappear tomorrow.

Could each mother see the painstaking care with which the prescription for Fletcher's Castoria is prepared: could they read the innumerable testimonials from grateful mothers, they would never listen to the subtle pleadings and false arguments of those who would offer an imitation of, or substitute for, the tried and true Fletcher's Castoria.

CASTORIA

A Word About Truth.

"Great is Truth, and mighty above all things." So says the Old Testament, yet it is equally true to-day. Truth shows no favors, fears no enemies.

From the inception of Fletcher's Castoria, Truth has been the watchword, and to the conscientious adherence to this motto in the preparation of Fletcher's Castoria as well as in its advertising is due the secret of its popular demand.

All imitations, all substitutes, all just-as-good preparations lack the element of Truth, lack the righteousness of being, lack all semblance even in the words of those who would deceive.

And you! Mothers, mothers with the fate of the World in your hands, can you be deceived? Certainly not.

Fletcher's Castoria is prepared for Infants and Children. It is distinctly a remedy for the little-ones. The BABY'S need for a medicine to take the place of Castor Oil, Paregoric and Soothing Syrups was the sole thought that led to its discovery. Never try to correct BABY'S troubles with a medicine that you would use for yourself.

BODIES IN INTERIOR OF FRANCE TO BE RETURNED

Arrangements Now Being Made, Says War Department's Latest Bulletin.

The latest announcement of the War Department, as to the return of soldiers' bodies from France, is to the effect that arrangements are being made for the return of bodies from the zone of the interior in France, this zone being outside the scene of battle operations. It has not been possible, thus far, to make arrangements for removals from the zone of the armies, which is the territory over which the battles were fought. The number of American bodies buried in the zone of the armies is about 53,000, and those buried outside that zone number about 18,800

It is stated that the French Government wishes plans for removals from the zone of the armies to be deferred until a future time, because of sanitary and economic difficulties.

Bodies May Remain Abroad.

Arrangements are being made for the return of bodies of American soldiers buried in England and other allied countries except France.

"Relatives should fully understand," the announcement says, "that if they so desire, the bodies of their boys may continue to rest in France, in beautiful American cemeteries which will be maintained and beautified by the United States as perpetual memorials to our heroic dead."

Many such requests are being received, one coming from a mother who gave two sons in the service of her country. In her letter she says: "In the first place you doubtless know that my two boys have been killed in France. I wish their bodies to be left in the country in which they died, and, if buried in a suitable place, not to be moved. This I feel is not an unreasonable request. I want to know the exact locality of their graves, so I can visit them and mark them." It is well known that it was the desire of the late Col. Roosevelt, that the body of his son, Quentin, should be allowed to remain in France.

U. S. to Maintain Cemeteries.

In fulfillment of such requests, the Graves Registration Bureau will avail itself of a number of cemetery sites granted by the French Government. These cemeteries will be used for interment of the bodies of American soldiers only, and will be maintained by the United States Government as are the national cemeteries in this country. Several of the sites offered by the French Government or by municipalities of France, are beautifully situated.

The Graves Registration Bureau is under the direct command of the Quartermaster-General of the Army, with Lieutenant-Colonel Charles C Pierce, Quartermaster Corps, as chief of the bureau. Col. Pierce was in charge of the Graves Registration Service in Europe during the war, and was engaged in similar work in the Philippines.

Col. Harry F. Rethers, Quartermaster Corps, has been assigned to the work abroad as Director of Mortuary Operations in Europe.

FIRST OF SEVEN LECTURES ON TAXES TO BE HELD THURSDAY

Will Be Open to Public at Large and Under Auspices of Tax Committee of Chamber of Commerce.

Seven lectures on income and excess profits taxes are the first of the services the War Tax Committee of the Chamber of Commerce plans to render to members and the public at large this year. The initial lecture will be held at 8 p. m. Thursday, Dec. 18, at the Y. M. C. A. School of Accountancy. The course was arranged at the suggestion of the War Tax Committee by C. C. Winn, educational director of the Y. M. C. A., and will include a treatise on invested capital, exemptions, deductions, preparation of returns, use of forms, information at source, claims for abatement and refund.

The committee points out that such a class is timely, because the rates of taxation this year will be different than they were in preceding years, and the many rules and regulations issued by the Bureau of Internal Revenue since returns were filed last year, make the course worth while, especially to those whose duty it is to prepare returns.

Beginning the 18th, the class will meet every Thursday night until the seven lectures have been completed. The course will be conducted by Ralph R. Neuhoff, who had charge of similar classes last year.

A nominal fee of $7 is charged to cover cost of materials, light, heat, etc. Women are eligible to attend. Those desiring to do so can enroll by notifying C. C. Winn, educational director, Y. M. C. A., Grand and Franklin avenues.

NEW EMERSON BUILDING WILL COST $600,000

Contract Awarded for 8-Story Structure on Washington Avenue East of 21st Street.

The eight-story building the Emerson Electric Co. will erect on the south side of Washington avenue, adjoining the company's present quarters at the southeast corner of Twenty-first street and Washington avenue, will cost $600,000. The company announced two weeks ago that $1,000,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock had been issued for this purpose.

About 1000 additional workers will be employed when the factory is completed. At present the company employs about 1200 persons in the manufacture of electric fans and motors.

The general offices will be on the sixth floor of the new structure. The shipping rooms will be on the first floor. One portion of the building will contain an electric substation and there will be fireproof rooms under which will be installed gasoline and oil tanks. The remainder of the building will be devoted to manufacturing purposes.

The building will be equipped with an electric light and power system, a heating plant and five passenger and freight elevators.

The exterior of the building will be faced with light gray vitreous brick, with Bedford stone trimmings and gray granite bases.

The general contract for the building has been awarded to the Murch Bros. Construction Co. Albert B. Groves designed the structure and will supervise the work.

The company is said to have refused orders totalling $3,000,000 during the last four months because the present plant had been outgrown. It has been in St. Louis since 1890. Its principal markets are in the Eastern States

MUSIC CLUBS TO MEET IN SEDALIA NEXT WEEK

Board Meeting Sunday to Open Second Convention — St. Louisans to Attend.

The Missouri Federation of Music Clubs will hold its second annual convention in Sedalia, beginning with a board meeting, next Sunday and closing Wednesday evening, Dec. 17. Convention headquarters will be Hotel Terry.

Beside the regular order of business there will be several musical programs. Mrs. Joseph H. Rodes of Webster Groves, president of the federation, is now in Sedalia perfecting arrangements for the convention, which promises to be one of the largest meetings of musical organizations held in the State. A large delegation will attend from St. Louis and another from Kansas City, where the first convention was held, last year; representatives from all over the State have signified their intention of taking part in the program arranged by the Committee on Local Arrangements, of which Mrs. F. W. Keyser is chairman.

Arthur Gaines, manager of the St. Louis Symphony Society, which has entered the Missouri Federation of Music Clubs, will speak. It is expecetd that the Pageant Choral, which is also a member, will be represented. Nearly every musical organization of the city has entered the federation and teachers throughout the State are organizing junior clubs. Among those who have formed such a club are Misses Vera Schleuter, Theresa Finn, Alice Pettingill and Mary Bakewell Stevenson of Webster Groves. One junior club in Sedalia is composed entirely of violinists.

Callus? "Gets-It" Will Peel It Off!

Nothing on Earth Like Simple "Gets-It" for Corns or Calluses.

A callus, or thickened skin on the sole of the foot, which often makes walking a misery, is of the same nature as a corn. "Gets-It" removes it as easily as it does the toughest corns. By using a few drops of "Gets-It" on the callus, you will be able to peel it off with your fingers in one complete piece just as you would a banana peel. It leaves the skin free and smooth as though you never had a callus. You need no more fussy plasters, sticky tape, "packagey" bandages, knives or scissors for corns or calluses. "Gets-It" is the national corn remover, the biggest on earth, used by millions. It never fails. You'll work, play and dance at ease in spite of corns.

"Gets-It," the only sure, guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros' Drug Co. and Winkelman Chem. and Drug Corp.

THE QUICK WAY TO STOP A COUGH.

This home-made syrup does the work in a hurry. Easily prepared, and saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant, too—children like it—and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup, if desired. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, famous for its healing effect on the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 10c and 25c.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

RIOTING BARCELONA IS CHAMELEON CITY OF NORTHERN SPAIN

Aristocrats Live So Far in Past That They Deplore Columbus' Discovery of America.

AVENUES AND CAFES RIVAL THOSE OF PARIS

In Other Quarters Streets Are Narrower and More Crooked Than Those of Old London.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—While the United States is coping with the coal miners' strike Spain has industrial troubles of an opposite sort—a national lockout of workers. Barcelona, meeting place of the employers' congress which ordered this drastic action, is the subject of the following bulletin from the National Geographic Society:

"Barcelona is the chameleon city of Spain. In some quarters streets are narrower and more crooked than those of old London; in others are avenues, boulevards, shops and cafes, which vie with those of Paris. The city has an aristocracy which lives so far in the past that its scions still deplore the discovery of America. These gentle patricians are undisturbed by the agitators for all sorts of political and economic novelties.

"Until 1492 Barcelona was the New York of the Mediterranean. Its position on the northeastern coast of Spain, actually at about the same latitude as New York City, relatively is to the Mediterranean world what the western city is to Atlantic trade routes. Columbus' voyage was considered a bit of impertinence on the part of the Castilian Government to upset the balance of trade in favor of cities in western and southern Spain.

Planned Annexation to France.

"Soon a movement swept the Catalan provinces, of which Barcelona is the center, for annexation to France. In 1640 Catalonia did rebel against Philip IV, gave itself over to French protection, but its old allegiance was renewed in 1652, and cemented by the peace of Ryswick before the close of the seventeenth century.

"In four centuries this resentment had ameliorated enough to permit the placing of a statue of Christopher Columbus in the Rambla, Fifth avenue of Barcelona. After the Spanish-American war mobs of Barcelona citizens stoned and egged the explorer's statue 'as punishment for his having ventured to find so troublesome a new world for Spain.'

"Despite its commercial subsidence when the Atlantic replaced the Mediterranean as the major water route of civilization, Barcelona flourished. A year after the late war between George Dewey and Spain, as O. Henry puts it, Barcelona paid more than a tenth of the kingdom's entire revenue from industrial taxation. Before the World War some two score important shipping companies had made it a port of regular call, and today the city has a population exceeding half a million.

Center of Riots.

"In respect to publicity Barcelona has hardly put its best foot forward, since it is heard of most often as a center of riots, strikes, and rebellions. Though one traveler found the citizens pleasantly surprised that King Alfonso, who had just visited there, had escaped with his life, he concluded after staying a time that, 'with all her reputation for turbulence Barcelona seemed an enlightened and thoroughly progressive city.' Havelock Ellis paid a more glowing tribute, after admitting the city's faults, by saying, 'Barcelona is a revelation of what a great commercial city may be when humanely and harmoniously organized. In a beautiful and exquisitely tempered climate, a robustly independent and clear-eyed population has freely expanded itself, loving work and loving play, and combining these two fundamental human impulses more completely and more admirably than in any other great city.'

"Despite its disorders and its modernism, Barcelona retains many relics of those mellow times when Cervantes made it the setting for Don Quixote's later adventures. There still are church processions, lottery ticket sellers, policemen with red coats and helmets, flower stalls and caged bird vendors. Folk lore embellishes the story of the girlish martyr, Saint Eularia, whose ashes lie in the Barcelona cathedral, perhaps the darkest of all great churches, and among the most beautiful in Spain.

Catalan Is Thrifty.

"Cool fountains play in the cloister garden, among oleanders, and orange and lemon trees, and pools disclose geese, not violators of the mediaeval sanctity, but contributory to it, when one learns they are descended from the birds formerly used for augury.

"Many of Barcelona's political disturbances may be attributed to a difference of temperament between the Catalan and the southern Spaniard; a difference akin to that between the Yankee and the Dixie plantation owner before the Civil War welded our common interests so indissolubly. The Catalan more nearly resembles his thrifty, enterprising, practical French neighbor than the courtly, dreamy Castilian. Moreover, the Catalan emphasizes this difference by speaking and writing in his own dialect, called the hardest of Romance tongues."

TO WALLOP RADICALISM, IS THIS LEAGUE'S AIM

Million Volunteers to Fight Un-Americanism Wherever It Appears Sought in New York.

SYRACUSE.—"A million volunteers to fight un-Americanism wherever it appears." This is the call of the New York League for Americanism organized, with State headquarters in this city, to carry on a campaign for American ideals and principles. It was founded by manufacturers and has had a rapid growth.

Its first attack is on the American Association for Labor Legislation, which is declared to be a branch of an international organization with headquarters in Switzerland. The association has worked in 28 states. In New York it has sponsored compulsory health insurance, and the League for Americanism has made the defeat of this scheme its first task. Its campaign is seconded by the newly organized Congress of Fraternal Orders.

"Our idea," said Carleton D. Babcock, secretary of the league, "is to wallop the head of every Socialistic idea that is proposed. The radicals have been having their own way, and the league has decided that the big middle class should have its say.

"Health insurance is attacked merely as a starter. It has been proved a failure in England and in Germany. It is hard to say what we shall take up next."

JEWS HERE TO PARADE TOMORROW IN PROTEST

Demonstration Against Reported Massacres to Include Meeting at Coliseum.

The Jews of St. Louis tomorrow will engage in a demonstration protesting against the reported massacres of Jews by the Ukrainian and Cossack armies in Southern Russia and Ukrainia.

The demonstration will be a parade in the afternoon and a mass meeting in the Coliseum at 7 p. m. Leaders of Jews have exhorted all of that faith to in some way participate. Many Jews engaged in business will close during the afternoon. Statements are made that 100,000 Jews have perished by the sword within the last few months. Documents have been published to support the statement.

The parade will be in six divisions. The first will be composed of Jews who served in the army of the United States in the Great War. They will move from Grand avenue and Delmar boulevard at 2:30 p. m. north on Grand to Easton avenue, east on Easton to Garrison avenue, north on Garrison to Dayton street, where they will be joined by the second division.

The Jewish soldiers have issued a call asking other soldiers to participate in the parade. They say there were 201,480 Jewish soldiers in the American army of whom 5178 were killed and 15,213 were wounded.

The Arrangements Committee for the meeting is composed of Dr. M. Golland, chairman; Leon Gelman, secretary; Philip Levin, treasurer; Rabbi B. Abramowitz, Rabbi J. Grodsky, Dr. A. Halpern, Rabbi J. Goldenson, Rabbi B. Lehman, Gutman Levin, N. Harris, Alex Goodman, M. Richmond, I. Faeir, M. Novack, I. Dubinsky, Sol Goldman, J. Sayvetz, Hyman Elbert, B. Gelbert, M. Sobel, N. Krishtalka, H. Berger.

The second division will be composed of members of the various Jewish societies and unions and will march to Dayton street and Glasgow avenue, where it will be joined by the third division.

The third division will be composed of members of B'nai Abraham Congregation and will march east on Dayton street to Leffingwell avenue, where it will be joined by the fourth division.

The fourth division will be composed of members of Zichron David Congregation, which will march east on Dayton street to Jefferson avenue, south on Jefferson to Carr street, west on Carr to Nineteenth street, where it will be joined by the sixth division.

The fifth division will be composed of members of the Rumanian congregation and will march south on Nineteenth street to Franklin avenue and east on Franklin to Fifteenth street, where it will be joined by the Sixth division.

The sixth division will be composed of members of the Sharreth Sphard congregations and will proceed with the others north on Fifteenth street to Wash street, east on Wash to High street and Franklin avenue, which is the point of formation of the parade. The procession will be headed by mounted police and a band, followed by local rabbis and the divisions above described in their order of number. The march will be south on High street to Washington avenue, thence west to the Coliseum. Doors of the Coliseum will be open at 6 o'clock.

Speakers at the Coliseum meetings will include the Jewish rabbis and several ministers of the Christian faith, including Archbishop Glennon, the Rev. Dr. W. C. Bitting and the Rev. Dr. Z. B. T. Phillips.

PAMPHLET PRAISES AMERICANS

France in Souvenirs Credits U. S. for Big Part in Victory.

Soldiers of the American army are credited by the French Government with being largely instrumental in winning the victory which came to the allies on Nov. 11, 1918, when the armistice Germany begged was granted, according to a souvenir pamphlet issued by the French Government and dedicated to the American soldier.

The memorial is a history in tabloid form of America's participation in the war, beginning with Cantigny, where the First Division made history, to the attack on the heights of Sedan, just before the armistice was granted.

A supply of the memorials has been shipped to Col. John H. Parker, in charge of the recruiting station at Third and Olive streets, and upon their arrival will be distributed to men who served overseas.

MICHIGAN COUNTY TO USE TANKS ON SNOW-BOUND ROADS

Former Service Men Expected to Drive Army Machine to Pack Highways to Make Them Passable.

HOUGHTON, Mich., Dec. 6.—The army tank which had a share in revolutionizing methods of warfare during the late world conflict is to find a new sphere of usefulness in the snowy wastes of the far northern states, according to plans of the Keweenah County (Mich.) Highway Commission.

In Keweenaw County it is proposed to use army tanks for packing the deep snow on the public highways during the long winter season. Great rollers of wooden construction have been used in the East for this purpose, the only disadvantage being that the horses hauling the packer had to flounder and wade through deep snow ahead of it. The tank, carrying its own motive power, will do the work much more rapidly and, because of its strength, much better than was possible with the rollers, the Highway Commissioners believe.

No trouble in getting the tanks over the snow is anticipated, and it is proposed to have them driven by Keweenah County young men who were soldiers in the tank service during the war and who are, therefore, accustomed to the ways and vagaries of the tanks in slimy mud and clay, not unlike, in the difficulties presented for locomotion, the snows of the north. Snow falls to a depth of several feet and drifts, in places, a score or more feet in depth in the passes and along the trails of the cliffs and little mountains of Keweenah.

The Government, in turning army automobile equipment over to the states that have road improvement programs, will give Michigan, it is said, several army tanks and caterpillar tractors, and Keweenah's road commission will seek one.

THE GIFT TO ONE THAT ALL ENJOY

CHRISTMAS shopping resolves itself into an effort to please. To give something that will make the recipient happy. Most gifts are of passing pleasure. They lack substance. Many are for the selfish possession of an individual. But The Brunswick is a gift to one that all may enjoy. Moreover, it is the many-year Xmas present.

Brunswick Method of Reproduction

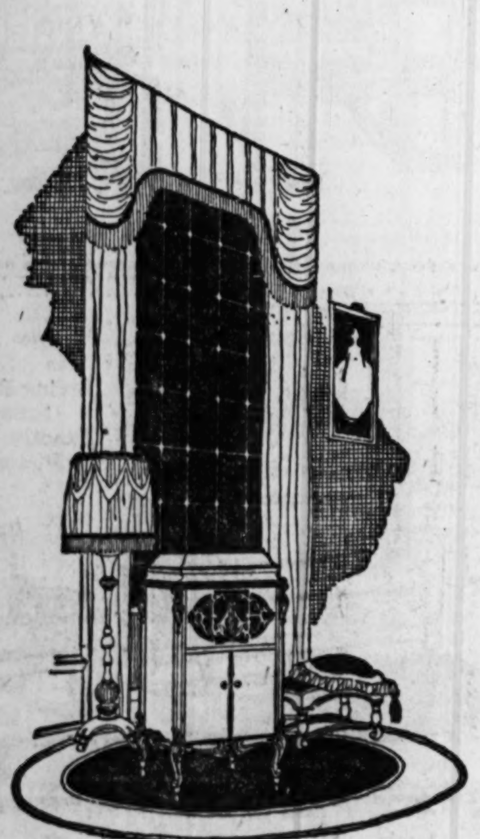
The Brunswick Phonograph is known to music lovers the world over for its marvelous Method of Reproduction.

Play the most difficult selection of any producer. There is noticeable at once a new life, color and beauty of tone hitherto unvoiced.

Everyone who has ever made comparisons knows its superiority. Besides playing better, one's record library is unlimited with The Brunswick.

Heretofore, the machine determined the range of choice. Before The Brunswick came into being one had to forego the pleasure of hearing many good records. All selections—operatic, band, orchestra, jazzes, vocal or instrumental—may be chosen regardless of make.

The Brunswick Method of Reproduction includes two exclusive and scientific features, the Ultona and the Tone Amplifier.



The ULTONA

The ULTONA—a scientific Brunswick creation—is universal in adaptation and simple in structure.

It plays all records infinitely better.

It is not a makeshift contrivance nor so-called combination attachment, but a patent that involves genuine fundamental principles of sound.

With but a slight turn of the hand, it presents the proper needle and diaphragm to any make record. Every artist, every band, every selection, whether foreign or American, may be played at its best on The Brunswick.

The TONE AMPLIFIER

WITH GRILL REMOVED

The TONE AMPLIFIER is part of the Brunswick Method of Reproduction. It solves an old problem in acoustics.

It is oval shaped and moulded of rare hollywood. Like the sounding board of a fine piano, it is built entirely of wood. It is absolutely free from metal.

By this method of projecting sound, tone waves are unrestricted and allowed to unfold into full rounded tones that are rich, mellow and, above all, natural.

RUSSIANS TOO COWED TO REBEL, FINN SAYS

Belief That Population Will Be Starved Into Starting Revolution Is Mistake, He Asserts.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 5.—There is no likelihood of a rising of the people of Petrograd against the Bolsheviki this winter, no matter how terrible their plight may become, says I. Saponen, a prominent art dealer of that city, who sacrificed a fortune of 5,000,000 rubles to escape from Russia.

"The belief of starving the population into starting a revolution is a heresy," he declares. "So far as the Russians are concerned, they will simply die."

Aided by the wife of Maxim Gorky, M. Saponen contrived, by lavish bribery of the Bolsheviki, to leave Petrograd. He arrived at Helsingfors a month ago. M. Saponen is a native of Finland, who has resided in Petrograd for the last 10 years.

"Until March," he said, "we foreigners were never molested. I had been representing the Danish Red Cross until I took up the exchange of prisoners on March 11.

"After securing a written guarantee, signed by Schlovsky, the Petrograd commandant, and Tchitcherin (Commissioner of Foreign Affairs) that my wife and property would be safe, I was allowed to return to Finland. Nevertheless, from April 22 until May 14 I was kept in detention in my own house and was formally arrested on June 2. I was then taken to Moscow, thrown into a military camp and treated worse than a dog simply because I was a Finn. I was kept in prison until Aug. 8, when Schlovsky ordered me to be released.

"The contents of my Petrograd house, including works of art and jewels valued by Russian experts at 4,000,000 rubles, are undoubtedly carried off."

Commenting on the conditions in Russia, M. Saponen said:

"The allies blockade is destroying White Russia, for the Bolsheviki naturally feed their own followers first and there is little left for the Government's enemies who are perishing.

"I wish to reiterate that there is no possibility of a counter revolt for the Russian peasants are incapable of acting without strong leaders. It was the Germans and not the people who brought about the revolution which overthrew the Emperor and later Kerensky. Before the revolution people could obtain two or three pounds of bread. Afterwards they were only allowed one-eighth of a pound, but they were too terrorized to protest.

"There are only 3 to 5 per cent real believers in Bolshevism in Russia, and they, by using drastic measures, are able to swing the great masses over to their side."

M. Saponen said that the central Government, despite the control of the army, exercised little power over the local Soviets, but the Bolsheviki have done considerable constructive work principally in the establishment of trade schools. Eager to eduacte the masses, they have opened numerous new kindergartens and the State takes care of the children until they reach 14 years of age.

M. Saponen said that in Petrograd all wooden houses had long since been burned for fuel, as well as the flooring of others. He asserted, however, that the depletion of Petrograd's population was not due so much to starvation as to the fact that the Bolsheviki had sent away the bourgeoisie and had removed prisoners to the interior.

GIRL STOWAWAY ON U. S. SHIP

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—When the captain of the Lake Freed, an American vessel, spied what looked like a new set of signals snapping in the early breeze from his ship's rigging while in the North Sea, a few days ago, he thought at first that his memory of the code had betrayed him. On closer observation, however, he found the signals were in reality intimate articles of feminine wearing apparel and at once he had the fright of his long seafaring life. He suspected he had a woman stowaway on board, and he was right.

When his ship left Rotterdam bound for New York, the night previous, there was hidden in the bunker a comely Dutch maiden whose swain awaited her in New York. The men of the crew had discovered her earlier. They had found the lass as begrimed as a chimney sweep, and they had offered to wash her garments, and these were drying when the captain saw them later. The captain headed his ship for a British channel port and after placing the young woman under lock and key and with a guard outside her cabin he journeyed to London to see the American Consul. The British authorities didn't want the stowaway to land, as she had no passport, and the Dutch officials said they could do nothing, but eventually the captain, several days late, was relieved of his burden by the British police.

HANDY VOLUME ISSUE

This picture shows the complete set of the new Eleventh Edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in the tremendously popular Handy Volume issue printed on genuine India paper. The twenty-nine volumes contain 44,000,000 words, 30,000 pages, and are the work of 1,500 recognized authorities from every civilized country in the world. While this set contains a great wealth of information on every subject known to the human mind, the entire twenty-nine volumes, because they are printed on the wonderfully light, thin but opaque India paper, occupy only 31 inches of shelf room, and each volume, which is no larger than the ordinary magazine, may be held with comfort by the reader for hours at a time.

IN THIS GREAT DAY AND AGE

YOU NEED

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA

THIS is a crucial age, this reconstruction era, a time of great changes, a live, awakened, alert age, an age of great progress, of great initiative, an age of interests that are world wide. Momentous social, political, industrial and economic changes are affecting the welfare of this nation and every country in the world. Every man, woman and child, profoundly stirred by war, have taken up their peace time pursuits with a new wholesomeness and a new vigor. Americans today are not only interested in the government and the affairs of their own city, state and country, but have become deeply concerned in the people and the political and social conditions of many nations throughout the world. Millions of our straight standing, vigorous boys, back from France and matured by the great experience of war, are returning with a broader view, keener minds and a wider grasp and with the determination to build for themselves homes and to make themselves an important part of the industrial life of the nation. To the great army of workers, the second line of defense, war has been a period also of great mental growth. They have entered a new world—they have been awakened to the rich opportunities that await a well equipped man who can hold his own in the battle of wits and brains They wish to learn more, be more worthy and earn more.

A miracle has been wrought in men's minds, a miracle in which there is a tremendous thirst for knowledge, a knowledge which is absolutely necessary today, as never before. Where can people find correct, authoritative and comprehensive information on the many subjects in which they are interested as a consequence of this awakening? They naturally turn to the wonderful storehouse of knowledge—the world's greatest guide to correct and authoritative information — the Encyclopaedia Britannica. The Britannica furnishes practical, detailed and authoritative articles of great value to the manufacturer, to the importer, to the worker in the industries. The Britannica will give a foundation for study of subjects which will be uppermost in our minds for years to come. The Britannica is a great work of useful information. It is a book for Americans today who are waking up to new thoughts, new work and new interests.

The Employer and Employe Need the Britannica

During the past few years the business of this nation has greatly expanded. So terrific has been the pressure to produce tremendous quantities of materials in the shortest length of time that out of necessity efficiency has been the watchword of the day. Great progress has been made in shop management—there have been many inventions, many short cuts have been found for better and quicker production of material. Today marks the period of this country's greatest industrial development. In many industries peace has meant a far greater speeding up than even during the war, and competition has become smarter. All of these are signs of the times and a demand for greater alertness, aggressiveness, knowledge and capacity on the part of the employer and employe.

Under these conditions the men are required to have the best means of knowledge, the best tools, with which they can keep abreast of the times and fulfill the stricter requirements of our awakened industrial world. The young man returning from war must capitalize his vigor and determination in order to make his mark in the world. The big army of workers who are fearful of falling back into their ruts of pre-war days must have knowledge and equipment in order to build upon the progress made during the war.

A Marvelous Library of Knowledge

This great work with its 41,000 separate articles is marvelously complete. The Britannica is a great library of knowledge on every subject known to the human mind; discusses in a way that you can understand every branch of science, industry, literature, art, religion, invention and engineering, history and race development, wars and peace, architecture, astronomy, chemistry, sociology, education, steam, electricity, geology, geography, law, physics. You and your family will find the Britannica a liberal education. In answer to the hundred and one questions which every day come to your mind—and to your wife's and children's minds—questions which arise in discussion at your club or in your business—it will tell you more about everything than you can get from any other source.

What Is Before Us?

Do you understand the tendencies in our industrial life? Have you studied why the prices of commodities are high? Will wages go still higher or will they gradually fall? Have we reached the crest in the high cost of living? Is there likely to be some great cataclysm that will serve to send prices and wages tumbling downward? Are you sitting down and studying the facts of past conditions that were somewhat similar? Each war has had its great reconstruction period, with conditions peculiarly paralleling our present times. Are you familiar with what happened after other wars? In England after the Napoleonic campaigns; in the United States after the Civil War; to France, to Germany and to neutrals after the Franco-Prussian war?

This wonderful book—the new Encyclopaedia Britannica—literally spreads before the reader the knowledge of the whole world. It tells about foreign countries, characteristics of the people, their resources, exports and imports, trade possibilities, their history and progress. An hour a day with the Britannica will give you as clear and comprehensive an idea of the rest of the world as we Americans now have of the states of the Union.

The Woman of Today Needs the Britannica

Woman's position politically, industrially and economically has changed radically in the past five years. Woman has become a power in politics, for her vote is respected and valued. She has taken a more important place in the industrial world. The sensible and up to date woman is studying the cost of foods, food markets and food values. The Britannica is invaluable to woman with its splendid articles on politics, on industries, on domestic science, on foods and on everything pertaining to the home. To the mother with children to educate, the Britannica is indispensable and it will give her the information to teach her children wisely and correctly.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

TEXAS DISPUTES WITH OKLAHOMA OVER STATE LINE

Rich Oil Property Along Red River Is Basis of Controversy Being Fought in Courts.

TEXAS RANGERS GUARD ACREAGE IN QUESTION

Conference Between State Officials Failed of Settlement—Supreme Court to Be Asked to Act.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Red River boundary lands receivership controversy, which failed to reach of settlement in the conference between Texas and Oklahoma officials at Fort Worth, next will be heard in the Supreme Court of the United States in Washington, according to Attorney-General S. P. Freeling of Oklahoma, whose attempt to obtain possession of the property by force threatened an armed clash between the two States.

The meeting was held at the instigation of Governor J. B. A. Robertson of Oklahoma, and attended by him, Governor W. P. Hobby of Texas, their attorneys general and various other State officials. It adjourned in a complete deadlock when Judge George Calhoun of Texas and Judge Cham Jones of Oklahoma, before whom conflicting receivership actions are pending, failed to reach an adjustment of their jurisdictional disagreement.

Attorneys to Washington.

Freeling and C. M. Vureton, Texas attorney general, will leave immediately for Washington, where the former will lay the entire matter before the Supreme Court in the boundary line case which is now pending before that tribunal. It is probable that he will ask for a writ of prohibition stopping all litigation over the lands, which are claimed to be within the boundaries of both States, and it is likely that he will also ask for the appointment of a trustee to take charge and operate the properties until a final decision is reached.

As the matter now stands Texas is in possession of the property through the receivership of John W. Hornesby of Austin, who was appointed Oct. 7 by Judge Calhoun, of the Fifty-Third Judicial District, to take charge of the Burke-Senator and Burk-Bet oil properties, involving about 80 acres of the most promising land in the oil territory. On the day preceding Hornesby's appointment, however, Judge Jones in the Cotton County, Oklahoma, District Court, had appointed for the same property, who immediately took charge. Later, Hornesby, through a ruse, took advantage of an unguarded moment, and secured possession of the property for the Texas rcourt.

Frequent threats of armed action have since been made in the case, and Texas Rangers are now stationed at the point to avert possible bloodshed and to hold the property under the Texas claims. Hornesby states that he has instructed his guards to shoot anybody who attempts to trespass on the lands in question, which are fabulously wealthy, and that he will not surrender possession unless compelled to do so by a higher court than that he represents. Oklahoma officials disclaim all responsibility for any troubles that may occur, but predict that disorders are bound to develop in the near future.

Oklahoma officials are very much chagrined over the failure of the conference. It was believed that a friendly settlement had been practically agreed upon when the two Governors delegated the judges in question to decide which of the two should handle the disputed properties. The judge given jurisdiction over the boundary lands was to have been required to operate the wells, sell the oil and impound the receipts until such time as the Supreme Court should finally decided which State owns the land.

Texas claims the center of the Red River as the northern boundary of the State, while Oklahoma contends that the south bank of the river is the real line. A further question of just what constitutes the river bank is involved, the two states differing by a matter of a mile and a half in their claims, due to changes in the current of the stream.

Results are being watched closely by royalty owners and operators, interested in the strip of lands along the Red River. A number of wells being drilled in the bed of the river itself are the principal ones embraced in the fight.

If this case should be decided in favor of Oklahoma, Texas holds that there is no apparent reason why that State should not step in and claim large slices of Texas counties all along the course of the Red River to the boundaries of the two states, and points to the fact that on a former occasion an entire Texas County was conceded to Oklahoma and is now in the possession of that State.

Oklahoma officials are nettled at the ruse adopted by the Texas receiver to gain possession of the property, and will undertake a recoup if opportunity presents. They now have a writ to serve on the Burk-Senator well, but are unable to gain access to the property without precipitating a battle.

Upholds Workmen's Law.

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Judge A. S. Neil, in the second Circuit Court here, held the Tennessee workmen's compensation law, recently pronounced unconstitutional by Circuit Judge A. G. Rutherford, to be constitutional.

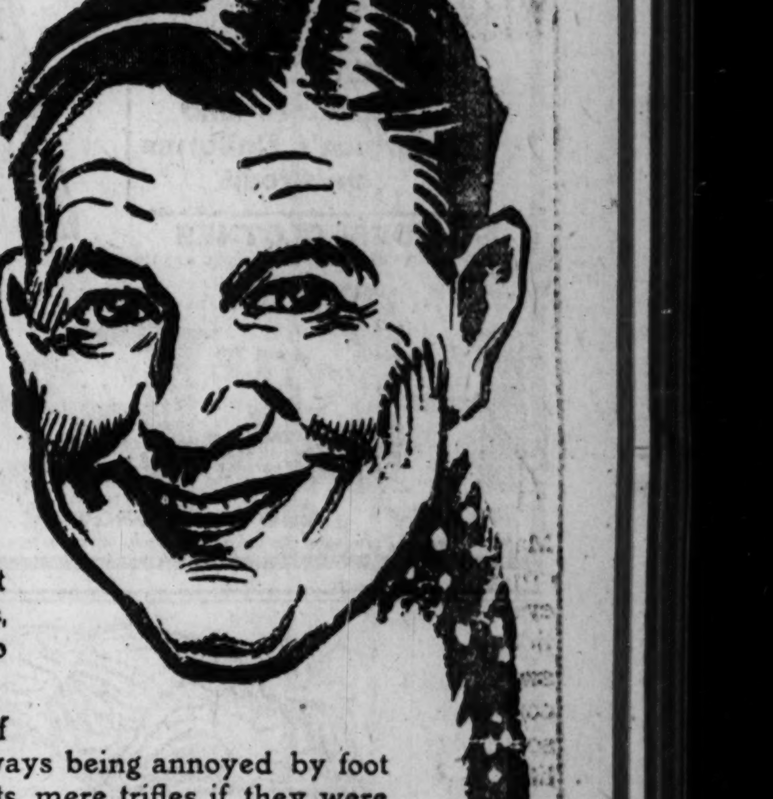
Which?



WHICH one of these footprints is nearest like yours? Unless you are of the more fortunate ten percent, the one at the left is similar to yours, and this shows a weak, rotated foot, with little or no arch left. It means that the muscles and ligaments, whose duty it is to hold the foot and ankle in the line of the body's weight have been weakened or stretched so that they no longer properly perform that duty. It means that you have that much talked of and little understood complaint of "fallen arch".

You do not have to examine your footprints to find out whether you have this trouble. Examine your countenance instead. If it is usually like that of the chap at the right, you positively have no such trouble. Cheerful grins like that don't occur on faces of people who are almost always being annoyed by foot pains, foot burnings, foot cramps and foot tiredness. They are far more apt to look like the lugubrious mortal at the left. Even the slightest foot discomforts, mere trifles if they were only fleeting, become moulders of sour visages when they keep on year after year, wearing lines of suffering on the face like constant dripping of tiny drops of water will wear in a rock.

The Answer is not "Arch Supports"

Usually, the words "fallen arch" and "arch support" follow each other closely, just as "bleeding" used always to follow "fever" until the world learned better. Arch supports are NOT the scientific remedy for weak and fallen arches. They are better than nothing, as a temporary expedient, just as a crutch is better than nothing. They are not, however, corrective. They cannot be, since they merely bolster up a RESULT (the displaced bones forming the natural arch) and do not touch the CAUSE, which is improper distribution of the body's weight over the foot.

Just as weak arches are back of almost all common foot discomforts, so this tendency to rotate, or bend the foot from the ankle is behind all so-called weak arches. In other words, the arch cannot fall and cease to function as the natural body-spring until the foot is allowed to rotate. Even then, the arch may remain nearly intact, the flat-foot effect being obtained through the inner or arched side of the foot being brought into contact with the ground by the turning or rotation of the foot at the ankle. The effect, however, is the same as if the arch had given way.

The Direct Route to Comfortable Feet

The simple, direct and common sense way to correct the annoyances of weak foot and fallen arch is to go straight to the cause and correct that, not to waste valuable time in trying to correct a mere symptom.

Since all the best modern medical and orthopedic thought is agreed that improper distribution of the body's weight over the foot is the cause of these other conditions, is it not most sensible to start at the beginning and CORRECT THIS FUNDAMENTAL CAUSE?

Of course, it is, and Science has now recognized this. Elaborate supports, consisting of splints, springs, metal plates and straps, have been known for years, but these have been of a merely palliative nature and besides, the average person would rather endure his foot aches than to go about in a bulky harness of that nature. Not until were invented was anything practical for this purpose available. Not until these remarkable little correctors arrived was it possible for the long-suffering and weary victim of weak feet to really do anything of a remedial nature. He had to be content with supports and other makeshifts to gain temporary relief, with no hope of ever overcoming the trouble and being free of it.

Nature-Tread Pads

"Make You WANT To Walk"

Weigh Less Than an Ounce But—Oh, My!

Nature Tread Pads weigh less than the average letter and fit in any shoes without using needed room. They occupy space that would otherwise be vacant. They require no bulky, shapeless shoes or "freak" lasts to aid them in making your feet a delight instead of a trial to you. As stated by Major Edward A. Rich, M. D., M. C. U. S. A., Supervising Orthopedic Surgeon, Washington, D. C., in The Journal of the American Medical Association for December 14th, 1918: "The underlying principle in all satisfactory treatment of the common static defects of the feet is that of restoring weight-bearing to those parts of the feet to which weight-bearing naturally belongs. All other forms of treatment * * * are merely forms of treatment that support or palliate."

Price, $2.50 Per Pair

Blissful Ease from First Moment

No period of "breaking in" or "getting used to" Nature-Tread Pads. The moment your foot rests upon one you KNOW that it belongs there. It does not feel like something foreign in the shoe, but like something that had been missing and was now restored. It instantly demonstrates that it is the right thing in the right place. Your foot knows and responds with a feeling of luxurious comfort, just as a kitten responds to petting with purrs of satisfaction. There isn't any "maybe." It does it.

Real Correction of Basic Cause

Nature-Tread Pads are not supports, although worn in the shoes in the same manner. They do not hold up the arch. They do not need to, because the arch will hold itself up when the natural and correct position of the foot is maintained. Neither do they support the ankles. The ankles need no support when the body-weight passes from the leg to the foot and thence to the ground along the line it follows when the foot is correctly positioned. All that Nature-Tread Pads do is to and old Mother Nature does all of the rest.

Scientifically Position the Feet

The pains, aches, throbbing, cramping and other destroyers of your comfort are simply outraged Nature's protests against a mal-position of your feet. When that position is naturally and easily changed to normal by the insertion of Nature-Tread Pads into your shoes, the protests cease and blessed comfort comes. They "make you want to walk" because they make your feet feel so good.

Great Improvement in Foot Appearance

You'll be surprised at the difference in the looks of your feet and will be filled with wonder that so small a thing as a Nature-Tread Pad can accomplish so much. Insteps that have lost their beautiful curves through wrong foot position return to normal beauty, bulging uppers over the soles cease to bulge, heels that always "run over" cease to do so and slovenly side bending of the feet ends. You'll hardly recognize your own foot. No larger sized shoes ever required and sometimes smaller sizes become possible when the foot is correctly positioned.

For Everybody With Foot Troubles,
Whether Great Or Small, and Whether Now Depending On Arches or Not

In fact, for everybody whose feet are not entirely comfortable all of the time. Those who continue to endure annoyances from their feet after this are doing so of their own volition. They do not have to. Every day without Nature-Tread Pads on the job is a day of self-sentenced punishment for negligence. Don't YOU be guilty.

BIG SISTERS CONDUCT CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS

Organization's Idea Is to Aid Girls Who Need Mental, Moral or Spiritual Assistance.

The Big Sister Organization, 509 Times Building, is actively conducting a campaign to raise funds for its yearly budget which will be spent in behalf of girls who are in need of assistance, mentally, morally and spiritually. According to the report for March 10 to Oct. 10 this year, 70 cases were received by the organization.

The Big Sister Organization is conducted along the same lines as the Big Brothers. The primary idea is to save girls, not to wait until they have gone wrong and reclaim them. The purpose of the organization is preventive, not corrective, according to the president, Mrs. G. V. E. Mechin.

A majority of the cases are from the Juvenile Court and are handled by the court representative, Mrs. Mary Ferris, who is also executive secretary.

The organization is nondenominational and is financed by voluntary subscriptions. In the six months covered by the report five families were given emergency relief. Clothing was furnished to 60 persons.

Music and magazines were given and friendly visits were made to the Epworth Home for Girls, the City Hospital and the Letmar Club. For eight weeks during the summer months 10 girls a week were taken from the House of Detention to a swimming pool.

PLANS TO EXPEDITE RELIEF WORK IN POLAND PROPOSED

Express System to Reach All Parts of the Country With Motor Trucks Is Projected.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Packages of food and clothing may be sent direct to destitute relatives and friends in Poland, with the guarantee that they will reach their destination safely and quickly, if plans proposed by the Joint Distribution Committee, which disburses relief in Eastern Europe for the American Jewish Relief Committee and allied relief organizations, materialize.

Formation of this transmission organization, similar to an express company, will permit Americans to make direct contributions to suffering relatives across the sea.

The plan provides for a system of railroad and motor truck transportation which will reach every corner of Poland, going directly to needy families. Motor trucks, flying the American flag, will go into parts of Poland not yet reached by railroads. It is estimated that half of Poland will be covered by motor transportation.

The proposed system calls for a central office in Warsaw, with branches in 17 of the principal cities. With 60 trucks it is planned to distribute 140,000 parcels a month.

ARMENIAN WOMEN BRANDED BY TURKS APPEAL FOR ASSISTANCE

Simple Method of Obliterating Tattoo and Other Marks Is Sought by Doctor.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—A simple method to obliterate from the faces of thousands of Armenian girls and women the brands and indelible ink tattoo marks placed upon them during the war by Turks, Kurds and Arabs is sought by Dr. Wilfred M. Post of Princeton University, who has just returned from a trip through the Near East.

The victims of the branding and tattooing, in every case, were Christians, and their captors thus marked them as Mohammedans. Freed from enslavement they sought at once to remove the evidence of their bondage, employing disfiguring acids for the purpose. Many of them flocked to the relief hospitals, Dr. Post said, to be treated for the self-inflicted burns.

"While removal of tattoo marks cannot be classed with the urgent necessity of providing food and clothing for 800,000 starving Armenian women and children," said Dr. Post, "the wearing of this brand, which shows that the woman has been an inmate of a harem, seriously interferes with the work of reconstruction and rehabilitation among such persons. During the four years that Turkey attempted to exterminate the Armenian people by a system of slaughter and deportation, practically every young woman in that country was at the mercy of the Mohammedans."

CLOSED SEASON ON DEER URGED

By the Associated Press.

CALUMET, Mich., Dec. 6.—There were four fatalities in the upper peninsula of Michigan during the deer hunting season, which ended Nov. 30. This toll is considered light in view of the large number of deer hunters, estimated to be about 12,000.

It is believed that fully 8000 hunters crossed the straits into the upper peninsula this year. Most of them came from the lower part of the State, although neighboring states were well represented. Weather conditions were ideal for hunting, and there was an unusually heavy slaughter of deer.

Sportsmen already are demanding a closed season on deer next year, believing this step to be necessary if the animals are to be saved from extermination. In some counties petitions are being circulated for representation to the State Legislature and the State Game Commission, asking for a closed season until 1921. In the duck and rabbit hunting season four lives were lost and there also were minor accidents involving the loss of limbs.

THE MEANING OF "HOTCHKISS DRIVE"

It Is a Principal, Not an Auto Part—Springs Should Be Given a Little Attention Regularly.

What does the term "Hotchkiss drive" mean to the average car owner?

In a great many cases you will find motorists who consider this indefinite something to be some sort of arrangement of gears for driving the rear wheels. This method of drive is becoming such a predominating factor in the field of automobile design that even the car owner should understand its meaning, and we shall try to outline it briefly.

Let us say in the beginning that the Hotchkiss drive is not part of the mechanism. It is a principle and not a mechanical unit. Indeed, it may be described as a method of eliminating certain parts from the car's mechanism by making the springs serve a double purpose. To do this the springs naturally have to be strengthened, but the gain is obvious in simplicity of design, which is one of the principal aims of modern motor car engineering.

This method of driving was first discovered by an American back about 1902, but it did not make any definite appeal to our engineers, so he took it to France, where it won instant recognition and has been used in French design ever since. Now it has come back to the land of its birth, brought there by cars imported from Europe, and it is now used on more than three-fourths of the cars built in this country.

Power Transmitted Through Springs.

The simplest way to explain Hotchkiss drive is to say that the propulsive power of the car is transmitted through the springs instead of by radius rods, as used to be the rule. Further, the rear springs are called upon to take part of the torque or twist of the whole rear axle assembly.

The rear axle unit is peculiarly liable to twisting, because of its position and also because of its functions. Let us explain that when the car is being driven straight ahead there is a certain amount of twisting in the rear axle, whenever the rate of speed is altered. A somewhat different action is set up when the brakes are applied and the car is stopped. In this case the wheels are suddenly stopped, while the body of the car tends to continue on in the direction it has been pursuing. This is simply the operation of what is known as the law of inertia, which we need not investigate further here. On the other hand, when the car is started the axle has a tendency to twist forward and in cases where the springs are unusually flexible this movement can actually be observed when the car is getting under way.

With the Hotchkiss drive principle employed all these various twisting tendencies are taken care of by the springs, which may be described as absorbing these torque movements. Then after the car is actually in motion the rear axle keeps the rest of the vehicle going by pushing it. You see the driving wheels are on the rear axle and these must supply the impetus that propels the whole car. Hotchkiss drive places this duty also on the springs.

The reader scarcely needs to be told that to bear all this burden the springs must be well designed and constructed. The usual practice in designing springs for Hotchkiss drive is to make the main leaf, which is the keystone of the arch, larger than would otherwise be the case and also naturally to make it of the best available materials. The finest grades of alloy steel go into the making of springs today, and no part of the mechanism has demanded more careful thought on the part of our engineers and designers. As a rule castellated nuts are usually employed on the spring clips, the nuts being firmly securely by cotter pins. Two clips are generally considered enough to distribute the twist or torque to the spring as a whole, thereby taking some of the burden off the central leaf.

Occasional Inspection Pays.

The car owner whose vehicle embodies Hotchkiss drive should be more careful than usual to give the spring assembly the inspection and attention it needs. The clips must be kept snugly in place. If the spring clips become loosened the driving force may easily break some part of the spring, the resistive power of which has been weakened. It is the old proverb of "united we stand, divided we fall." All the spring leaves together can carry the load, but separately they are not strong enough.

In addition to keeping the clips snugly drawn up, the shackle bolts of the springs should be systematically lubricated. Two or three times a season the spring leaves should be pried apart and given a thorough coating of graphite.

Perhaps if the average car owner realizes just how much work his car's springs have to shoulder he will be more careful to give them the not very bothersome attention that they need. Twenty minutes a week will probably take adequate care of the springs and any car owner who has had trouble with these vital parts of the mechanism will not want to court a second visitation.

$50,000 SUIT IS LOST

RICHMOND, Va.—Trial of a lawsuit instituted by Charles L. Ruffin of Richmond against Joseph E. Willard, Ambassador to Spain, for $50,000 for services rendered in connection with the Richmond & Rappahannock Railway, which was ended in the Circuit Court of Fairfax County, resulted in a nonsuit. Mr Ruffin was chief engineer of the railway and sued for services rendered in such capacity. A similar suit, which is yet to be heard, has been instituted in Washington. Mr. Willard, who recently returned from Madrid to spend a short while in Virginia, was the controlling head of the railway.

Curse of Acid-Stomach

Millions Suffer from It

"Makes the Body Sour"

Why do you see so many sick and ailing folks?

Why doesn't the food you eat make you strong?

Why do you now suffer miseries no one had years ago?

Millions of people have asked this.

Medical books tell the reason. It's an Acid-Stomach—that is, too much acid causes food to pass on a sour, fermenting mass. This sends poisonous germs and harmful acids all over the body, instead of strength and life.

Over seventy non-organic diseases can be traced to Acid-Stomach. It is excess acid, not the food you eat, that starts this trouble. Day and night it goes on, doing ceaseless damage, breeding millions of germs.

If you belch, if your food repeats, if you have heartburn, a miserable, tight puffed-up feeling after eating, sour stomach, headache, if you are losing weight, if you don't feel "peppy," sleep badly—in fact, ailing in any way—

Get rid of your Acid-Stomach. It's the first step to good health.

Eminent chemists, after years of work, have found a way to easily and naturally take up this excess acid and carry it out of the body.

It is a tablet called EATONIC, easy to remember. Within two years, over half a million people have used it with marvelous benefits. You can prove this in your own case—FREE.

Take EATONIC for five days—see how much better you will feel. EATONIC contains harmless elements that absorb the acid and drive out the gas—in fact, you can fairly feel it work.

Because of its wonderful merit, 25,000 dealers have started selling and have guaranteed EATONIC for Acid-Stomach miseries in the last two years.

Over half a million people now clean out their excess acid with EATONIC. This keeps them well, strong, full of pep, gives them a good appetite, makes them sleep well.

No matter what you have tried—don't give up hope. Call on your druggist and get a big box of EATONIC. It costs but a trifle.

Give it a fair, honest trial for five days—let your own stomach be the judge.

If you are not pleased take it back. It won't cost you one penny unless it proves its worth to you.

Sickly, ailing people—with no pep, nervous, worn out, all in—should try EATONIC—it is guaranteed to help you. It is so easy to get relief—why feel bad any longer? You will never feel well with an Acid-Stomach. Get rid of it—see how much better you will feel.

EPISCOPALIANS OPEN CAMPAIGN FOR BUDGET

$42,000,000 Sought to Finance Extension Work of Church for Next Three Years.

Members of the Episcopal Church in this vicinity today will join 100,000 associates throughout the United States in the start of a campaign to raise a budget of $42,000,000 for the next three years.

A campaign of preparation has been going on in every city, town and rural community in the country for more than six months. It marks the first application of modern business methods on a vast scale to church administration and extension. A lesson of the world war, taught through the Liberty Loan campaigns and those of the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A., is applied to the church. Lewis B. Franklin, who built the organization for the five successful Liberty loans, with Henry P. Davison, head of the American Red Cross, has led the laymen's work in the present movement.

Americanization, community centers, missions and new churches and a score of new ideas are to become tangible features of church extension. Social, industrial, political and religious lessons of the great war are to be applied.

More than 1500 trained workers are to be added to the general staff of the church. At least 2000 new buildings, ranging from hospital and college projects in some states to igloos in frozen Alaska, mark the range of activities planned. Between these extremes lies motor-driven missions in the sparsely settled sections of the country, rescue homes for men and women in the slums of the great cities, rural community houses in the farming areas and a score of other developments.

Americanization of foreign-born through educational work, and demonstration of the value of American ideas and standards are to be sought.

There will be day and night classes in shipbuilding, including welding, blue print reading, mechanical drawing and shipfitting. Five certified instructors will be in charge. The initial enrollment of 600 is expected to be increased to 1000. The normal demand for shipworkers in the Los Angeles yards is about 15,000 men.

New Q·R·S Player Rolls for December

941—Freckles. Fox Trot. Words by Cliff Hess and Milton Ager. Music by Howard Johnson. Played by Max Kortlander. Have you heard of "Freckles"? He was a little red headed, pug nosed kid who stirred up more mischief than "Peck's Bad Boy." Let this Q·R·S Word Roll tell you about him.	1.00
940—I Am Always Building Castles in the Air. Waltz. Words by Ted Garton. Music by Fred Phillips. Played by Scott and Watters. You will appreciate the sentiment of the lyric and the charm of this melody.	1.00
943—Let the Rest of the World Go By. Waltz Ballad. Words by J. Kern Brennan. Music by Ernest R. Ball. Played by Lee S. Roberts. Whenever we hear of a new Ernest R. Ball number, we look back over his long line of successes since "Love Me and the World Is Mine." His latest number herewith listed is proof that he is still writing great ballads. The quality of this song is vouched for by the fact that Mr. Roberts played it.	1.25
946—Now I Know. Fox Trot. Words by Frank H. Warren. Music by S. R. Henry and D. Onivas. Played by Baxter and Ohman. A persuasive ditty that makes us appreciate the wonderful "by-gones" we have all enjoyed.	$1.25
951—Old Fashioned Flowers Are Best. Ballad. Words and Music by Madame Sturkow-Ryder. Played by Ted Baxter. No one will dispute that they are. What is more beautiful than the old fashioned garden or the old fashioned bouquet that always reminds us of the mellow times of the older folks? The story is charmingly told to a delightful melody.	1.00
954—On Miami Shore. (Golden Sands of Miami.) Waltz. Words by William Le Baron. Music by Victor Jacobi. Played by Roberts and Ohman. The very atmosphere of Florida's "Fountain of Youth" is embodied in this entrancing Q·R·S Word Roll arrangement.	1.25

948—Peggy. Fox Trot. Words by Harry Williams. Music by Neil Moret. Played by Osborne and Howe. Whenever we see the name of Neil Moret on a piece of music, it takes us back to "Hiawatha" "Poppies," etc. which we all love yet. "Peggy" is a bit of charming and refreshing song which will soon weave itself about the hearts of everyone.	1.25
932—Sahara. Fox Trot. Words by Alfred Bryan. Music by Jean Schwartz. Played by "Zez" Confrey. "Sahara, We'll Soon Be Dry Like You" is the sad story told by the lyric of this Oriental Fox Trot tune.	1.25

955—Witching Waves. Waltz. Words and Music by Mary Earl. Played by Arden and Ohman. Everyone who appreciates good waltz music will consider this roll a valuable addition for the player roll library	1.25
936—You Ain't Heard Nothing Yet. Fox Trot. Words by Al Jolson. Music by Gus Kahn and Bud De Sylva. Played by Phil Ohman. You haven't heard anything if you haven't heard "You Ain't Heard Nothing Yet." Al Jolson's latest hit.	1.25
939—You'd Be Surprised. Fox Trot. Words and Music by Irving Berlin. Played by Arden and Ohman. This roll is a vaudeville act in itself, and "You'd Be Surprised" sure will surprise you.	1.25
953—You Know What I Mean. Fox Trot. Words by Alfred Dubin. Music by Fred Rath. Played by Victor Arden. "You Know What I Mean" is cleverly written and has a real humorous idea back of it. An unusual combination.	1.00

Ethel Clayton Tells How To Instantly Have a Beautiful Rosy-White Complexion

MISS ETHEL CLAYTON

New York—Miss Ethel Clayton, the clever young actress now successfully starring under the Paramount banner, is famous for her beautiful complexion. When her friends inquired about it she said: "It's all due to a toilet preparation called derwillo which I use twice daily. The experience I have had prompts me to make my secret public. This wonderful derwillo instantly beautified my skin, and its continued use has made the results permanent." When Mae Edna Wilder, the well-known beauty specialist, was interviewed in reference to Miss Clayton's remarkable complexion stated: "Anyone can have a beautiful complexion when they know how. It's a very simple process. I use the same article in my work, and until you try it you have no idea of the marvelous results. The very first application will astonish you. Go to the toilet counter of any drug or department store and get a bottle of derwillo, then make the following test! Examine your skin critically before your mirror, note carefully its appearance, then apply derwillo as directed. After you have made the first application look in your mirror again and note the surprising change. A peachlike color mounts the cheeks; a baby softness comes to the skin; it makes the skin rosy-white, velvety and radiantly beautiful. It is wonderful for a dark, sallow skin, shiny nose, freckles, tan, oily skin, sun spots, coarse pores, pimples, blackheads, chapped, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles and many other facial blemishes. Derwillo method is absolutely harmless, and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. It is superior to face powder, as perspiration does not affect it, therefore it stays on better. Thousands who have used it, have had the same results as Miss Clayton, and I am sure if you will give it a fair trial you will become just as enthusiastic as I am and always use it in preference to any other powder or beautifier."

NOTE—When asked about Derwillo, one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful beautifier, away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to anyone who is dissatisfied, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the product possessed unusual merit." It is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all department stores and up-to-date druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Drug Co.

How Marshall Made U. S. Supreme Court What It Was Intended to Be Vividly Told

Last Two Volumes of Former Senator Beveridge's Excellent Biography Have Just Been Published—Comment on Other Books.

THE publication of the third and fourth volumes of former Senator Albert J. Beveridge's "Life of John Marshall" marks the completion of that very notable biography. The first and second volumes were published in 1916.

Since his retirement from the Senate, Mr. Beveridge has worked assiduously on this story of the great Chief Justice's life, to say nothing of the time he spent in the years before in gathering data for this work, the writing of which had been contemplated from early days when he became interested, as a law student, in this towering personality whose decisions on Constitutional issues made him literally the father of the United States Supreme Court insofar as its functions, now no longer questioned, of nullifying Congressional acts when they conflict with the provisions of the Constitution are concerned. John Jay, the first Chief Justice, had resigned because he had been unable to make the court function as the framers of the Constitution intended that it should. But President Adams, who believed firmly in a strong central government, knew what he was doing when he chose John Marshall of Virginia as chief of the National Judiciary. Marshall was the man who could make the court function as it should and it was but a short time until he began to assert the authority of the tribunal in a way that showed that he was determined that it should, indeed, be a co-ordinate branch of the National Government.

For the next 11 years he was the United States Supreme Court. He wrote all its opinions on important questions during that time, and so great was his personality and Constitutional erudition that there were few dissenting opinions even though the court was composed largely of Republicans while he was an ardent Federalist.

The two final volumes in Beveridge's biography deal with the great opinions of the Chief Justice. Throughout the four volumes, the author has wisely proceeded upon the theory that the best biography is that written with full regard to the history of the times. Chief Justice Marshall was a stormy petrel of his day and no one could possibly understand him without having an intimate knowledge of the political conditions that obtained then. So Senator Beveridge has written most illuminatingly and interestingly of that day.

His endeavor has been to make his story of the Chief Justice and his work intelligible and interesting to the lay mind. Though Marshall is one of the greatest figures in American history and one of the chief founders of our system of Government as it operates today, knowledge of him is confined largely to lawyers. Beveridge has striven to make him understandable to all. Accordingly he has presented a wealth of fascinating incidents to hold the lay mind. The momentous opinions of the Chief Justice are interpreted in language that the lay mind can comprehend. It is an important service both to history and to literature that the Senator has performed. When Marshall was expounding the Constitution, he was sublimely eloquent as well as unerringly logical and supremely judicial. It was he who dared to proclaim that any act of Congress that transgressed the Constitution was null and void; it was he who decreed that under the Constitution Congress has supreme control over both interstate and foreign commerce; it was he who held that not even a sovereign state may deprive a citizen of life, liberty, property or the pursuit of happiness without due process of law, and that no process is due process unless it conforms to the national Constitution; it was he who opened wide for Congress the fields for the exercise of its right of promoting the general welfare under the Constitution by declaring that Congress may use whatever means it chooses to achieve an end specifically authorized by the Constitution. Today, these things are accepted as matters of course, but the foundations of the republic literally rocked under those decisions when they were first uttered. Disunion and secession were rife, but Marshall stood by his guns and the Supreme Court's decrees prevailed. It is a fascinating period of history through which Senator Beveridge leads us from the beginning to the end of his great work. (Houghton Mifflin Co.)

"THE TEST OF SCARLET."

IN Coningsby Dawson's "Test of Scarlet," described in the subtitle as "A Romance of Reality," Romance comes off second best. Romance is a pallid thing beside the scarlet Reality which Dawson has brought back from the welter of war. No fault need be found with Dawson's desire to apparel his reality in the raiment of romance, since the form of fiction adds a certain decorative fluency to the tale, but the expected happens when fiction fails, at the story's climax, because it cannot rise to the height of reality.

The reality is an appalling thing as Dawson describes it out of the fullness of his experience of it. For it is remembered that Dawson is the young English author, living in Canada, who enlisted in the Canadian artillery when the war began and went through it all. It is "thirst, heroism, cruelty, magnanimity, mingling in an ecstatic trance, while the August woods drip scarlet with men's triumphant carelessenss of dying."

" * * * It's easy for the arm-chair crusaders who sit at home to prate about the glory of war. One glimpse of the landscape on which I gaze would bruise their lips with reality and wash the mountebank valor with tears from their eyes. We who have seen war for what it is will always speak of it as the filthiest of jobs, fit only for human orang-outangs or maniacs. * * * War is an unclean orgy or jungle cannibals reveling in the obscenity of entrails and blood. Half the time it is not even brave; there is nothing brave in smothering a front line with shells which are fired from miles behind the danger; there is nothing brave in overwhelming a demoralized enemy by sheer weight of numbers."

And here is his way of picturing the price: "If the British who have already perished were to march 20 abreast from sunrise to sunset, it would take them 10 days to pass a given point. It would take the French 11 days, the Russians five weeks, the whole of the allied dead two and a half months, and the skeletons of the fallen enemy six weeks more. If all the armies of men of whatever nations who have died fighting since August, 1914, were to march in review, 20 abreast, before the grand stand of the living, it would take them four months to pass."

There is no end of this kind of reality in this volunteer Lieutenant's story of the fighting and the suffering and the dying on the battlefields of France. There are very clear portraits of the men of the battery, Dawson's companions in the Test of Scarlet, and there are "Suzette" and "Bully Beef," who might have been left out but who, after all,

Best Treatment for Catarrh, Croup, Coughs and Colds

Guaranteed by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

No Stomach Dosing

HYOMEI
INHALER

Breathe HYOMEI for all diseases of the breathing organs. It is guaranteed.

In case of croup, which is very common in children, send for a doctor at once. In the meantime pour 30 drops of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water and hold the child's head over it; covered with a towel or cloth so that only the air filled with HYOMEI vapor is breathed.

This treatment has saved many a child's life and mothers of croupy children should always have HYOMEI on hand.

For coughs, colds and catarrh, breathing HYOMEI through the inhaler is usually sufficient.

Many people, however, use the HYOMEI vapor treatment in conjunction with the inhaler.

The vapor treatment is best taken just before going to bed; it only takes about five minutes' time. Pour a teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl three-quarters full of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel, and breathe the vapor that arises deep into the lungs. By this method many a hard cold has been broken up over night. A HYOMEI outfit which consists of a bottle of HYOMEI and a hard rubber pocket inhaler costs $1.15 at Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and druggists everywhere. Extra bottles if afterward needed cost only 60 cents.

HOW MARSHALL MADE SUPREME COURT WHAT IT WAS INTENDED TO BE

bring a bit of brightness into the grimness of the artilleryman's tale. (John Lane Co.)

AN EVERY-DAY POET.

The work of the "colyium" writer may appear transitory and much of it really is, but as long as Tom Daley writes there will be dignity in the profession, for there will be true poetry, of the sort that cannot die because it deserves to live. Another proof of this, if additional proof were necessary, is the collection which comes under the title "McAroni Ballads." As to the title, the poet says:

"My title has a foreign look;
The sort of Latin label
One might expect upon a book
Devoted to the table.
Yet 'Macaroni' 's come to be
A word of many meanings,
(One Noah Webster, L.L.D., Explains its Yankee leanings)
And some of these, I think, will fit
The facts and personages
My puny pipings caust it flit
Among these printed pages."

Yet it is not "puny pipings" that he gives us. He sees the soul of those whom he brings before us. The Italian immigrant ceases to be a mere "dago" when Daly interprets him and his broken English acquires new meaning when it comes to us through the pen of this Irishman whose understanding heart is filled with love for all men.

Yes, the men and women he portrays are at times illiterate, like Joe Gessapalena, who can't write his own name. But he can go to the farm and make the American soil smile forth in fine crops.

"Joe Gessapalena can't write hees own name,
But he can write othra theengs, justa da same;
An 'mebbe you, too,
Bayfore he ees through
Wee'll read w'at he's wrote an' be glad dat he came."

And we have with us also Joe Moralli, the barber, who is

"Crazy for da opra;
He knows dem all by heart."

And who is so good-natured that when he is told his wife brought him triplets,

"He never stopped hees wheesteling,
But just changed hees tune.
Dees answer from hees music
Was all dat they could gat;
'Trio from Trovatore.'
Ha! w'at you theenk of dat?"

One could go on quoting about the incident in the Juvenile Court with the Judge bending down to the little boy and helping him become a good man, or the childless mother, not to mention the poems touching on the late war.

Or take a wholesome little poem like "Da Queena Bee" portraying the poor Italian widow with her six "bambinos" and a little candy store, enlisting them all to help clean the house by telling them about bees and acting as if she were "Da Queena Bee." There is no use taking parts from it. It must be read in full to be appreciated as it deserves.

There are poems in Irish dialect done with the love of one who understands his people. Then there are poems in beautiful everyday English, like "The Six-O'Clock Rush" advising the worker and office make to wash up clean before starting for home:

"Hands, face—aye! heart and mind,
Wash up before you go!
Leave business cares behind;
In soapsuds let them flow;
That frown, that ugly scowl,
Don't take it with you! No,
Leave that upon the tow'l—
Wash up before you go!

It is truly a joy to read these poems, and they should be a joy gift to persons of all ages.—(Harcourt, Brace and Howe).

MORE O. HENRY STORIES.

TWELVE O. Henry stories, that have never before been printed in a collection of that author's works, are contained in "Waifs and Strays," that have been gathered from varying sources and most of which have been forgotten. This, however, is not true of "The Snow Man," the last story in the book, for it was the last story O. Henry worked on before his death. He left it uncompleted and Harris Morton Lyon, who had talked the story over with the author and knew the plot thoroughly, ventured to complete it. The result is a clear exemplification of the individuality and inimitability of O. Henry's style. All 12 of these stories have this delicious O. Henry flavor, though all do not rank with his best work. However, he never wrote anything better than "The Red Roses of Tonia," "The Detective Detector," "Sparrows in Madison Square," and "The Rubber Tree," all of which are found in this volume, which is printed and bound to fit into the uniform edition issued by Doubleday-Page.

Included in the volume is a good index of all of O. Henry's works, arranged not only alphabetically but also geographically. If, for instance, you don't remember the name of the story you seek but do remember whether the setting was America, France, Missouri, Arizona, Timbuctoo or Texas, you will be able to find it. Also there are included tributes to O. Henry's genius by Stephen Leacock, A. St. John Adcock, George Jean Nathan, Arthur B. Maurice and Arthur Page. The latter, in his tribute, quotes from a letter O. Henry wrote back home after being "a stranger in New York four years," the following, which is one of most characteristic O. Henry musings to be found anywhere:

"Live all alone in a great big two rooms on quiet old Irving place three doors from Wash. Irving's old home. Kind of lonesome. Was thinking lately (since the April moon commenced to shine) how I'd like to be down south, where I could happen over to Miss Ethel's or Miss Sallie's and sit on the porch—not on a chair—on the edge of the porch and lay my straw hat on the steps and lay my head back against the honeysuckle on the post—and just talk. And Miss Ethel would go in directly (they say presently up here) and bring out the guitar. She would complain that the E string was broken, but no one would believe her, and, pretty soon all of us would be singing the 'Swanee River' and 'In the Evening by the Moonlight,' and—oh, gol darn it! what's the use of wishing?" WANTS POLICE CHIEF OUSTED

American Legion Also Asks Cleveland Force Be Reorganized.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—A statement from Mayor A. W. Craver is being awaited concerning the request of the American Legion, presented for the removal from office of Chief of Police James Watkins and the reorganization of the police force.

Members of the legion said the report was based on discoveries made by Legion members acting as special police during the steel strike. They declared that evidences of collusion between the police and resorts were found and that the police tried to "frame" soldier officers who "found out too much."

Mayor Craver reinsted two Legion police who had been removed from the force by Chief Watkins.

WORK ON TWO NEW HOTELS SOON TO BEGIN

Foundation of Claridge Already Started—Princess on Eighteenth Street to Be Enlarged.

Two new hotels will soon be under construction on Eighteenth street. Work has begun on the foundation of the Claridge Hotel, at the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets. Work is expected to begin early in 1920 on the enlargement of the Princess Hotel, at the southeast corner of Eighteenth and Chestnut streets, to a degree which will make it practically a new structure.

The widening of Eighteenth street has been under discussion by city officials, but Harland Bartholomew, engineer of the City Plan Commission, said, in a recent letter to a real estate agent, that "it seems rather late" for the widening, in view of the stage which the building plans have reached.

The Claridge Hotel, which is expected to be completed by next October, will have 12 stories and 350 rooms. A coffee shop, replacing the traditional bar, a cafeteria and a roof garden will be features. The building will cost $500,000, and will be of reinforced concrete construction, finished in terra cotta and mat brick.

The Princess Hotel is now a three-story building, with 110 rooms, and is run at popular prices. It was recently bought by its manager, David D. Israel, and he has announced that he will add five stories, increasing the number of rooms to 350. Four storerooms, each 25x65 feet, will be provided on the Chestnut street side, and the ground floor grade will be changed so as to eliminate steps made necessary by the street grade. The work is expected to be finished late in the summer. The brick walls will be covered with stucco. After the reconstruction the hotel's rates will be increased.

On that occasion the President went to the spot on which had stood the chapel of his grandfather, the late Rev. Thomas Woodrow.

106 BLUE-LAW ARRESTS

Baltimore Cigar Smokers and Ice Cream Men Caught in Net.

BALTIMORE. — Groaning under the burden of prolonged war restrictions, Baltimore had the last straw placed upon its creaking vertebrae last Sunday with the enforcement of the blue laws.

No less than 106 persons were arrested, some while emerging from stores, others while attempting to buy a smoke or in delivering ice cream.

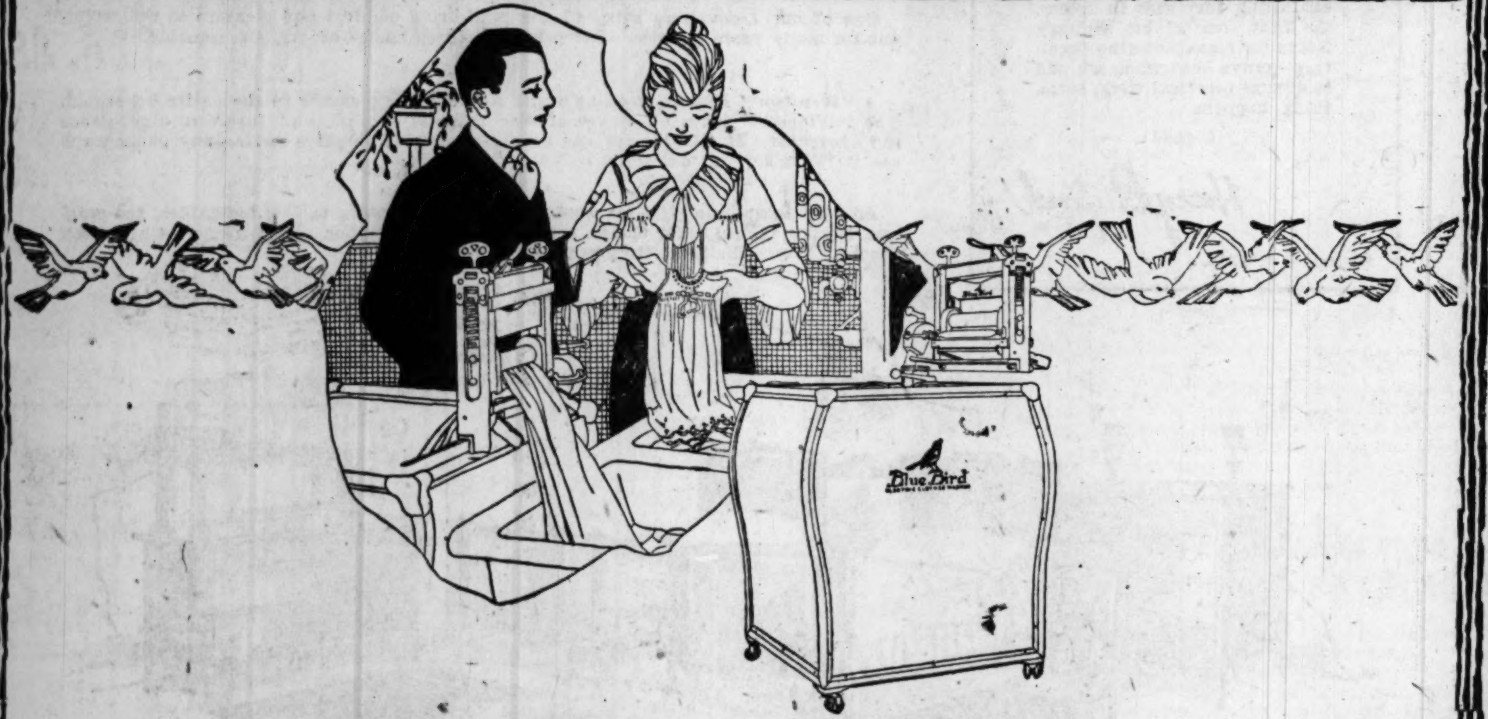
Policemen did not hesitate to approach a man who happened to be smoking a cigar and question him as to how he came into its possession. If a satisfactory answer was not forthcoming the man's arrest was.

OIL LAND IS IN RIBBONS

"400-Square Feet" Parcels Bought by Pittsburgers Run Straight Away.

PITTSBURG.—About 2000, Pittsburg residents of greater Pittsburg would like to obtain an interview with a middle-aged Texan who was here recently selling land in the Texas oil territory.

The Texan explained that he bought for next to nothing 20 acres several miles beyond the Ranger developments before the oil boom started. His proposition was to sell to those who wanted to buy 400 square feet at prices from $250 to $500 a parcel. The buyers thought they were getting a parcel 400 feet square. Each parcel is so narrow a derrick could not be built on it, the purchasers have found.



BlueBird in Webster

The demonstrator, our Mr. Mulgrew, and BlueBird finished washing the second tubful of clothes. Among them were all of Baby's things.

Baby does not walk or talk, but he does creep, and even in Webster floors get dirty. His white stockings and dresses had been very soiled, but they came out of the tub spotlessly clean.

Mother looked at the clothes, then at the clock. They had been perfectly cleansed in fifteen minutes. She examined his sheerest dress; it had not been harmed in any way.

She telephoned to Daddy, telling him that there was a BlueBird in the house on Sarah street.

He told her that not ten minutes before, he had ordered another washing machine for her.

She told him that she just could not let BlueBird be taken away.

BlueBird remained; his order was canceled. When he came home that evening and saw BlueBird, and the day's washing, he understood and shared his wife's enthusiasm.

You can see BlueBird at work daily, at the BlueBird home, 303 North Seventh street.

If you prefer to see it doing your own washing in your own home, we will arrange for such a demonstration.

You can buy BlueBird for a few dollars for the first payment, and pay the rest in convenient monthly sums.

SEEK BOMB PLANTS OF RUSSIAN REDS IN MANY CITIES NOW

Police of Twenty Towns Notified of Addresses That They May Hunt Explosives in Secret Places.

STORES FOUND IN N. Y. STUDIED BY EXPERTS

Possible Connection With Past Explosions or Christmas Plot — Enough to Make Dangerous Bomb.

NEW YORK.—Following the discovery of bomb-making materials in the Russian People's House in East Fifteenth street, police heads in 20 cities of the United States and Canada were notified of the addresses in their localities of the houses occupied by the Union of Russian Workers, so that similar searches might be made.

Meanwhile the city police said that they were proceeding with their investigations along two lines, one on the assumption that the chemicals might have some relation to the Christmas mail bomb plot discovered by the Philadelphia police a week ago and said to be country wide, the other that they might be a valuable clew in the case of the eight bomb explosions last May, when attempts were made against the lives of public officials.

A possible connection with the May bomb plot was seen in the fact that a search of the People's House disclosed, according to the police, a 12-ounce bottle of TNT. This substance was examined by Owen Eagan of the Bureau of Combustibles, and H. A. Campbell, an inspector of the United States Bureau of Mines. Both said the conclusions to the police as to the nature of the substance were correct.

Nott Attack Recalled.

It was recalled that after a bomb had wrecked the home of Judge Charles C. Nott of General Sessions several army officers, who studied the effects of the explosion, said it had been caused by TNT rather than by dynamite.

According to the police, the room in which the chemicals and explosive were found had been closed up and the entrance sealed over with wall paper, as though the occupants of the place had become frightened when they first saw signs of police activity. This fact led to the inference that the room probably had been closed several months and served to discount the idea that there was any connection with the Christmas mail plot.

The chemicals discovered and the apparatus were such as might have been purchased by almost any student who was dabbling in chemistry in a small way. There were several test tubes, a beaker for distilling, an alcohol lamp, rubber corks such as are used for connecting laboratory apparatus and a scale.

Inspector Campbell set aside from the chemicals the following, which he said would be useful in making explosives: Black oxide of manganese, hydrochloric acid, sulphuric acid, nitric acid, metallic sodium, phosphorus, potassium chlorate, bisulphide of carbon, calcium chloride, denatured alcohol, charcoal and sulphur. They mostly were contained in four or eight ounce bottles, with the exception of the charcoal, of which there was a pound package.

All Bought Near By.

There was found also ammonium chloride, alum, zinc metal, and litmus paper, none of which, the experts said, would be of any particular value in a bomb factory. Inspector Eagan asserted that it was the largest collection of chemicals, useful in the manufacture of explosives, that he had seen in a long time and that there was enough to make an extremely dangerous bomb. An investigation showed that all the chemicals had been purchased at a large drug store a few blocks away.

It was admitted that were it not for the presence of the TNT and the fact that the chemicals and apparatus had been concealed, there would be ground for the assumption that they were the property of some harmless experimenter who was taking a course in chemistry in some night school.

The police were unable to find anyone to question, owing to the fact that all the leaders of the Union of Russian Workers were rounded up for deportation two weeks ago and are now on Ellis Island fighting against trial. The only person the police found at the house was a caretaker. For this reason it is pretty certain that no arrests in connection with the discovery will be made in New York City.

It was possible to notify the police of other cities as to houses that ought to be searched, because when the Russian People's House was raided last March there was obtained a country-wide list of meeting places. To this has been added a complete "directory" of the New York branch of the society, which was found in the secret room.

Inspector Campbell made only a brief examination of the articles, as he was forced to leave town, but will look them over carefully later to see if by any possibility there is anything which might throw light on the Postoffice bomb plot of April 30 last. One substance which looked like heavy gray paper in a bottle of oil has not yet been identified.

Success Lies in Doing Things

It is a common custom to look around for somebody else to do things, instead of looking to one's self to do it.

The doing of the actual work is the backbone of success. We might make of ourself an Edison, a Roosevelt, a Ford, a Wright or an Alexander Graham Bell.

Let us stop talking, and commence now to do things, so as to pay interest on what somebody paid to give us an education, and let's do something worth while, besides occasional dreaming.

Examples such as this store, the beautiful arrangement of exhibiting furniture in rooms, the light, comfortable, sanitary floors for manufacturing furniture—prove that when we add to dreams practical work, something happens.

"I Wish I Had Her Complexion"

A Queenly Complexion a Question of Days Instead of Months. A Method That Never Fails. How to Easily Force Hair to Grow.

By Valeska Suratt.

SKIN blemishes, muddiness, sallowness, unevenness in tint, and all that goes to make up a poor or just an ordinary complexion may be very easily corrected, and you will find all spots promptly disappearing, as well as all other blemishes, by pursuing the following simple method, which has never been known to fail. Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and one ounce of zintone in a pint of water. A very rich satiny cream will be the result. This should be used very freely every day. Nothing else will be necessary to give the skin a spotless and queenly beauty. The zintone can be obtained for fifty cents at the drug store.

PUT OUT—You will be able to attend that dance or social event without feeling embarrassed on account of superfluous hairs, and you will have revealed to you a wonderfully easy way to remove them from any part of the body. This never irritates or reddens the skin. Moisten the hair with a little sulfo solution and in a few moments all the hairs will dissolve away almost magically. Wipe off the dead hairs, and the work is done. There is nothing to get ready or to mix. You can get the sulfo solution at the drug store for about a dollar. This is the ideal way because it never fails and does the work so easily and thoroughly.

BONHEUR—Blackheads can never be entirely removed by pinching, because where there are large blackheads there are also smaller ones, sometimes to the extent of thousands. Here is a local treatment by which blackheads can be made to disappear in a few moments. A little neroxin sprinkled on a wet cloth and rubbed on the blackheads will make them vanish in a few minutes. You can easily convince yourself of this fact by trial. The neroxin can be obtained at any drug store for fifty cents.

* * *

QUANDARY—Soaps fail to remove the scale which forms in a film on the scalp, and besides they dry up the scalp secretions. The way to do is to dissolve this scale and let your hair breathe. This can be done easily by dissolving a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of water and used as a head-wash. There is enough eggol in a twenty-five cent package to last for many weeks. Your scalp will be cleaner than it ever was before, and your hair will have a silky sheen that is exquisite.

CINDERELLA—You can positively stop your hair from falling and make it grow in wonderful fashion if you will add the contents of a one-ounce package of beta-quinol, costing fifty cents at the drug store, to a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum, and use this oilless liquid liberally and often. This costs less than the hair treatments already prepared and always does the work. You may use, instead of the bay rum and water, a full pint of witchhazel.

MISS C. Q. D.—You can quickly get rid of wrinkles by using the method given here. This refines the skin texture and the pores of the skin are made smaller. The skin takes on an added vigor and plumpness and at the same time small and deep wrinkles disappear promptly. It is surprising what a change it makes in one's appearance. Get two ounces of eptol from your druggist for about half a dollar, and mix this with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. The liberal use of this cream will bring very surprising results.

AUGUSTA—Just try this face powder for a while and you will realize that you have at last found your ideal. It has exquisite fineness, stays on magnificently and blends perfectly. "Fresca Beauty Powder" is sold at drug stores for half a dollar in any tint. Try it.

This powder, however, has not been on the market very long, and all toilet counters have it in stock. So if you are unable to obtain it from your regular dealer, I will be glad to see to it that you are supplied by mail if you will write to my Secretary and enclose either ten cents for the trial size or fifty cents for the large box of Fresca Beauty Powder.

Simply address,—Secretary to Miss Suratt, Thompson Bldg., Chicago, Ill., and she will faithfully attend to your wishes.

Four members of Thyrsus, Washington University dramatic club, have been dropped from the roster for delinquency in active interest, and another, Eugene Lowey, who was to have taken a leading role in one of the three plays scheduled to have been produced the past week, has left school, so the production has been postponed. The new dates are Thursday and Saturday evenings, Dec. 17 and 19, and Friday matinee, Dec. 18. Because of the difficulties attending adequate production of "In the Zone," it has been laid aside in favor of "Catherine Parr," a historical comedy by Maurice Baring, in which Irene Mueller, Lea Dick and Morris Carnovsky will take leading parts.

Give Your Hair Daily Care by Using Famo Regularly

To keep your teeth clean and healthy—to avoid pyorrhea—you brush your teeth, not once a week, but every day.

To keep your hair clean and healthy—to avoid seborrhea—you should use Famo, not once a week, but every day.

In other words, your teeth get daily care—why not your hair?

Famo kills the seborrhea germ that causes dandruff.

But it isn't fair—to FAMO or your hair—to expect a weekly FAMO treatment to rout all dandruff bacilli, and keep your head free from seborrhea.

It is true that FAMO does drive out the dandruff germ after the first few applications.

But the deadly germ will surely come back unless the use of FAMO is continued regularly and faithfully.

Use FAMO daily and your hair will always be clean and soft and wavy.

FAMO is really a medicine for the scalp and hair, and should be used as a medicine, faithfully and continuously.

Note the difference in your hair, when you use FAMO every day.

FAMO is sold at all toilet goods counters, in two sizes—$1 and 35 cents.

Your money will be refunded, if FAMO doesn't give complete satisfaction.

Seborrhea is the medical name for a morbidly increased flow from the sebaceous glands of the scalp. The seborrhean excretion forms in scales and flakes and is commonly known as dandruff.

PRINCETON TRIANGLE CLUB HERE DEC. 24

Will Present "The Isle of Surprise," a Light Opera, at Odeon Christmas Eve.

The Princeton Triangle Club, which was disbanded during the war, has been reorganized and is preparing a new play which will be produced in the larger cities of the East and Middle West during the Christmas holidays. Through the influence of Princeton Alumni here it will be presented in St. Louis at the Odeon Christmas eve. A committee of local Princeton graduates appointed to take charge of the St. Louis performance is composed of P. Taylor Bryan Jr., Samuel D. Conant and F. Winston Johns.

The play chosen is a light opera entitled "The Isle of Surprise." It is billed as "a melo-farce with musical accompaniment" and is Oriental in its setting, with dances and music appropriate to the scene. Both book and music were written by Princeton undergraduates, and all the performers, actors and orchestra alike, are students of the university.

Walter P. Folmer of Rochester, N. Y., leading "lady" of the cast, was a member of this year's victorious varsity football team. Other members of the cast are former wearers of the khaki, and several of the leading roles are taken by men who were decorated in the war.

Coctumes and scenery are the work of Broadway specialists, and the stage management is in the hands of a professional.

The club will start on its tour next week, giving its first performance, Dec. 1. The entire trip will be made in a special train of pullmans and baggage cars, the latter carrying all the scenery and property of the company. The itinerary follows: New York, Dec. 18; Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 19; Buffalo, Dec. 20; Columbus, O., Dec. 22; Chicago, Dec. 23; St. Louis, Dec. 24; Cincinnati, Dec. 25; Cleveland, Dec. 26; Pittsburg, Dec. 27.

FUNERAL OF VETERAN RAILROAD CONDUCTOR TO BE HELD TODAY

Services to Be Under Auspices of Masonic Lodge With Burial in Odd Fellows' Cemetery.

The funeral of Richard W. Waters, 91 years old, veteran Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain conductor, who died Thursday, will be held at 2 p. m. today from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Charles Stephens, 7414 Virginia avenue, to Odd Fellows' Cemetery. Services will be under the auspices of Cache Lodge, No. 416, A. F. and A. M.

Waters had been a conductor for 54 years. He was employed by the Iron Mountain in 1861 and his first trip was as a conductor of a troop train which took soldiers to points in southern Missouri, where southern sympathizers threatened to burn railroad bridges. Later he was employed on the Carondelet-Kirkwood line and when the Oak Hill division was built he was placed in charge of a passenger train. He was retired with pay Jan. 1, 1915, over his protest.

U. S. MERCHANT MARINE OPENS RECRUITING OFFICE IN ST. LOUIS

Men 18 to 35 Years Old Are Wanted for One-Year Enlistments on New Cargo Vessels.

The United States Merchant Marine opened a recruiting office yesterday at the Demobilization Bureau, 219 North Ninth street. William J. Davis, special enrolling officer, in charge of the station, said that from $10 to $15 more a month is paid all classes of recruits now than was offered when the merchant marine was recruiting here last summer. Seamen are paid $85, firemen $90, stewards $70 and up, bakers and cooks $110, radio operators $150, and coal passers $75 a month. Men are needed for the new ships which have been put in service by the Government in an effort to hold the lead in mercantile shipping.

Men from 18 to 35 years old are wanted, and will be paid $30 a month for six weeks' training period, which includes a trip to Cuba. Enlistments are for one year.

MAIL CHRISTMAS PACKAGES SOON

Early Mailing Will Facilitate Their Handling, Postmaster Says.

The St. Louis postoffice is making arrangements to handle the heaviest Christmas mail this city has ever known. An appeal has been issued to the public by Postmaster Selph to mail Christmas packages as early as possible, and thus avoid congestion in the last few days before Christmas.

A card can be placed in a parcel post package bearing the name of the sender and the consignee, so that if the outer wrapping is lost in handling, the package can be identified.

Packages sent now, according to the Postmaster, can be marked "Do not open until Christmas," and still go at the parcel post rate. If such packages are sent early, they can be handled with greater dispatch, and with less risk of damage.

Universities to Debate.

Challenge to a debate shortly after the new year, issued by Missouri University to Stump, the debating society of Washington University, has been accepted, the debate to take place in St. Louis. The question is immigration, the local team to contend that it is not beneficial to the country at this time. Westminster College has also asked for a debate with the local university team, specifying this city as the place, but Stump will accept only if it can be arranged for Fulton, the explanation being that the society does not desire to hold two debates at home.

OPERA SEASON CUT ONE WEEK FOR STYLE SHOW

Seven Weeks Schedule Agreed on So Municipal Theater Will Be Idle in August.

The Municipal Theater Association and the St. Louis Style Show Committee met jointly Thursday at Hotel Statler to discuss plans for a season of entertainment in the Municipal Open-Air Theater.

The Municipal Opera Committee has decided to hold an eight weeks' season of opera, beginning June 14. This would carry the opera season into the first week of August, which heretofore has been given over to the style show, being the opening of the fall market season in St. Louis.

In view of the fact that the style show has become one of the features of the St. Louis buying season, which has won national recognition, the Opera Committee decided to hold seven weeks of opera and give the first week in August to the style show. The opera season will therefore be from June 14 to Aug. 2.

The St. Louis Style Show Committee is now trying to raise a fund of $18,000 for nationally advertising St. Louis and the St. Louis market. This is in addition to the $20,000 needed to hold the annual show.

It was through the co-operation of the Style Show Committee and the Advertising Club of St. Louis with the municipal authorities that the municipal theater was made possible. They subscribed substantial funds to the costs of building the theater and since have added many valuable permanent improvements, such as installing the lighting system and assisting in building the dressing rooms.

More than $12,000 has seen guaranteed for the opera season. The Finance Committee is composed of Max Koenigsberg, chairman; Thomas H. Lovelace, Frederick C. Lake and Joseph Gilman Miller.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS; SAYS DRUGS EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

Salts harmless to flush Kidneys and neutralize uric acid, thus ending Bladder trouble.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

ACTRESS "1919 FOLLIES CO." WRITES:

"The National Developer has done wonders for me, having developed an attractive bust of FOUR INCHES in the short time of THREE WEEKS—was never larger than a child's. I cannot express how delighted I am in this changed appearance. I take great pleasure in recommending the National to my friends of the profession."—ELAINE BAILEY.

USE THE NATIONAL

To enlarge your bust to its natural size and beauty. EXPANDS BUST INSTANTLY, bringing quick results where all other methods have failed. No matter what the cause of retarded development. THE NATIONAL is the only rational method that will ever restore the size and beauty of the bust.

Develops "One" to "Five" Inches

This remarkable woman's invention WILL EXPAND ANY BUST to its fullest proportions in a remarkably short time. Even five minutes' use will surprise and delight you. Use the NATIONAL a few minutes daily until your bust measurement is what you desire. That's all. If you want greater development any time use it a little longer. It expands the bust as long as used and results are natural and permanent.

Reports After Using the National

FIVE INCHES—

"Your National in my case has not merely developed a bust that disappeared from some sort of illness, but this actually developed a bust which was never larger than a child's. Five inches' development seems almost untrue in such a short time, but nevertheless it is absolutely true in my case, which the photo shall prove to you."—Mrs. Allendorf.

THREE INCHES—

"In the three weeks' use of the National I have increased THREE INCHES in size and am delighted."—Mrs. T. A.

THREE AND ONE-HALF INCHES—

Dr. Swarthout says: "The first three weeks bust developed 3½ inches."

NO PADS AND RUFFLES NOW—

"No amount of money could buy my National. I have laid aside the pads and ruffles I have worn ever since I can remember."—Mrs. D. R.

THE NATIONAL is the special developer Dr. C. S. Carr formerly recommended in the "Physical Culture Magazine" as the only safe, reliable method known for enlarging the bust in a natural way. Of this method Dr. Carr said: "Indeed, it will bring about a development of the bust quite astonishing."

Physician Explains How Anaemia Fastens Its Hold Upon Women And Saps Their Health and Vitality

Says Lack of Iron in the Blood May Completely Change a Woman's Appearance and Break Down Her Physical Strength, While Plenty of Iron Keeps the Body Supple, Active and Tingling With Energy—Prescribes

Nuxated Iron to Make Rich, Red Blood—

The Kind That Puts Strength in the Nerves and Roses in the Cheeks.

ANAEMIA
R Nuxated Iron 5 gr. Original Pkg.
Sig. Two 3 times a day after meals
J. F. Sullivan, M.D.

With anaemia, lack of iron in the blood threatening the health, strength and beauty of so many women of today, it has become a matter of widespread public interest as to how this iron deficiency can be supplied. 'For want of iron a woman may look and feel old at 30, pale, haggard, wrinkled and all run down—while at 50 or 60 with good health and plenty of iron in the blood, she may still be young in feeling and so full of life and attractiveness as to defy detection of her real age.

That women may become stronger, healthier, more beautiful and better able to meet the cares of home, social and business life by increasing the supply of iron in their blood is the belief of physicians who explain below why they prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to build up the red-blood corpuscles and give increased power and endurance. Dr. Ferdinand King, New York Physician and Medical Author, says: "Time and again women patients come to me and say: 'Doctor, I don't know what is the matter with me—I'm always tired out, nervous and I'm beginning to look awfully old. I'm so blue and discouraged I don't know what to do. Can't you give me something to build me up?' In practically nine out of ten such cases, one of the real and true causes of their weak, tired, nervous conditions may be simply a lack of sufficient iron in the blood. Almost invariably in these cases I prescribe organic iron—Nuxated Iron—to enrich the blood and create thousands of new red blood cells, thereby quickly transforming the flabby, toneless flesh into firm, healthy tissue. I have known Nuxated Iron to make women look years younger and in two weeks' time to give greatly increased strength and energy in many instances."

In commenting upon Dr. King's statement concerning the imperative need of more iron in the blood of run-down, nervous women, Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Dr. King is absolutely right. As I have said a hundred times over, organic iron is one of the greatest of all strength-builders. Many a woman who is run down, easily tired out, nervous and irritable, suffers from iron deficiency and does not know it. I am convinced that there are thousands of such women who, simply by taking Nuxated Iron, might readily build up their red corpuscles, increase physical energy and get themselves into condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us. I have seen frequent instances where it gave renewed strength and energy, increased power and endurance, steady nerves and the rosy bloom of health in about ten days or two weeks' time. I consider Nuxated Iron one of the foremost blood and body builders—the best to which I have ever had recourse."

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by [illegible] Drug Co., Johnson Bros.' Drug Co., [illegible] & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Weipert Drug Co., Pauley's [illegible] Stores and Merker's 3 Stores, East St. Louis, Ill., and all other druggists.

Eye Specialist and Medical Author Report on Wonderful Remedy To Strengthen Eyesight

Say It Strengthens Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

New York.—Dr. Smith, a well-known eye specialist, and Dr. Judkins, a Massachusetts physician and medical author, make the following reports after a thorough test of a popular remedy for the eyes:

Says Dr. Smith: "When my attention was first called to it I was inclined to be skeptical. But it is a rule of mine to give every new treatment a chance to prove its value. Having specialized in eye work for many years I feel qualified to express an intelligent opinion on remedies for the eyes. Since this one has created such a sensation I welcomed the opportunity to test it. I began to use it in my practice a little over a year ago, and I am frank to say that some of the results I have accomplished with Bon-Opto not only astonish myself, but also other physicians with whom I have talked about it, and I advise every thoughtful physician to give Bon-Opto the same careful trial I have, and there is no doubt in my mind that he will come to the conclusion I have, that it opens the door for the cure of many eye troubles which have heretofore been difficult to cope with. I have had individuals who had worn glasses for years tell me they have dispensed with them through the use of Bon-Opto. In my own practice I have seen it strengthen the eyesight more than 50 per cent in one week's time. I have also used it with surprising results in cases of work-strained eyes, pink eye, inflamed lids, catarrhal conjunctivities, smarting, painful, aching, itching eyes, eyes weakened from colds, smoke, sun, dust and wind, watery eyes, blurred vision and, in fact, many other conditions too numerous to mention in this report. A new and striking case that has just been brought to my attention is that of a girl 12 years old. Two prominent eye specialists, after a thorough examination, decided, according to her father, that in order to save the sight of her right eye, the left must be removed. While awaiting an opportunity for the operation and still undecided as to its wisdom, her father was told it would do no harm to use Bon-Opto. In less than three days a marked improvement was noticed. At the end of a week the inflammation had almost disappeared, and at the end of six weeks the eye was pronounced saved. Just think what the saving of that eye means to this little girl. Another case is that of a lady 93 years old. She came to me with dull vision and extreme inflammation of the lids and the conjunctiva was almost raw. After two weeks' use of Bon-Opto the lids were absolutely normal and her eyes are as bright as many a girl of 16."

Dr. Judkins, Massachusetts physician and medical author, formerly chief of clinics in the Union General Hospital, Boston, Mass., and formerly house surgeon at the New England Eye and Ear Infirmary of Portland, Me., says:

"I have found oculists too prone to operate and opticians too willing to prescribe glasses, while neglecting the simple formulas which form the basis of Bon-Opto, which in my opinion, is a remarkable remedy for the cure and prevention of many eye disorders. Its success in developing and strengthening the eyesight will soon make eyeglasses old-fashioned and the use of Bon-Opto as common as that of the toothbrush. I am thoroughly convinced from my experience with Bon-Opto that it will strengthen the eyesight at least 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances."

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and many who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Drs. Smith and Judkins there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable remedy, and many who once wore glasses say they have laid them aside. One man says after using it:

"I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eyestrain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and close work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now, and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited in this easy manner. Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and use from two to four times a day. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little, it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto referred to above is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It is dispensed under guaranty by all good druggists in this city, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson Stores.

How You Can Have "Naturally Curly" Hair

If you will forswear the curling iron and follow the simple plan here suggested, you will be surprised beyond words to see not only the beautiful curl, but the soft fluffiness and lively lustre your hair will acquire. The plan—to apply to the hair before retiring a little pure silmerine (in liquid form), using a clean toothbrush for the purpose. The most effective way is to divide the hair into strands, moistening each of them separately from root to tip.

The delightful wavy effect in evidence in the morning will suggest to any stranger that your hair is "naturally curly." The effect will last a considerable time and if you'll get a few ounces of liquid silmerine from your druggist you will have a supply for months. This, by the way, will leave no sticky or greasy trace and cannot harm hair or scalp in any way. The hair will be quite manageable at all times, no matter how you do it up.

PRESIDENTIAL BEES OF THE BIG PARTIES NOW SEEK TO HIVE

Democratic and Republican Aspirants Buzz Busily and Independents Lay Plans for Trades.

WASHINGTON LOOKING FOR POSSIBLE WINNERS

McAdoo Looms in Democratic Gossip, While There Are 7 Avowed Seekers of G. O. P. Nomination.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The World prints the following comprehensive survey by its Washington correspondent of the political situation insofar as it concrens presidential candidates, active or merely receptive:

With the football season closed, the political season is about to open. A record-breaking list of entries in the presidential handicap is already indulging in practice as a preliminary to the actual opening of the big fight for candidates and issues.

There are a round dozen of aspirants for the nominations by the two major parties, to say nothing of the independent ventures projected by several groups of restless citizens who think the time has come to make war on both machines.

Some of these "new movements" are genuine reform undertakings, but most of them are being exploited for trading purposes. Opportunities for promoting new parties that may have a substantial value later on are not only promising but reasonably certain of handsome returns.

The leaders of the big parties are not paying much attention to enterprises of this character as yet, but they will before the nominating conventions assemble. There is a sneaking suspicion that some of the candidates for the regular presidential nominations are keeping in touch with the promoters of several "new movements" and possibly financing them.

Flirting With Democrats.

Those based on industrial, labor and agricultural unrest, lukewarm Bolshevism, and which voice a demand for a change in political conditions seem to be drifting toward the Democratic party, on the perfectly sound theory that the Republicans will adhere to the "conservative" and reactionary doctrines and traditions of that party.

It is a significant fact that none of the men who are avowedly candidates for the Republican nomination is seeking the indorsement of the unclassified groups intent on the formation of the "new parties." The Republican policy seems to be to force the Democratic party to provide a retreat for all the radicals. This strategy is based on the assumption that the majority of the voters of the country will rally to the "conservative" program that the Republicans will put forth in their platform. Recent events seem to have convinced the Republican leaders that the next Democratic candidate for the presidency will be loaded down with an extremely radical platform and that it will prove distasteful to the greater number of citizens. The Republican leaders think they have sufficient reasons to justify the prediction that the Democratic party will "try to corral" the labor vote, the organized farmers movements like the Non-Partisan League and the independent factions of the "advanced thinking" type.

The fulfillment of this prophecy will be entirely acceptable to the Republicans because the majority of its leaders believe that the country will turn away from such a combination. Incidentally, the Democrats, who are manifestly at a disadvantage because of the lack of adequate leadership, are not doing anything to discourage the impression.

The Leaders Drifting.

The physical incapacity of President Wilson has left the subordinate leaders of his party to shift for themselves. Unless he speedily recovers, these leaders—few of whom have displayed any unusual ability for initiative—are likely to drift along without definite sailing orders until the national convention of that party assembles.

The impression is growing at Washington that President Wilson will be entirely eliminated from further active participation in politics and that Mr. McAdoo, his son-in-law, is not averse to taking over the leadership of the Democratic party. That Mr. McAdoo is an active aspirant for Presidential honors, every Republican and the majority of Democrats are fully convinced. The Republicans credit the President with the desire to name his successor; the Democrats are quite sure that Mr. McAdoo would not aspire to either party leadership of the Presidential nomination without the acquiesence of his father-in-law.

Mr. McAdoo has been one of the few persons permitted to see the President since the latter's illness. Following his most recent visit Mr. McAdoo became extremely active in promoting discussion of his availability for the Presidency.

The former Secretary of the Treasury has an advantage over other Democratic availables in that the movement to bring about his nomination seems to have substantial backing on a skilfully organized basis.

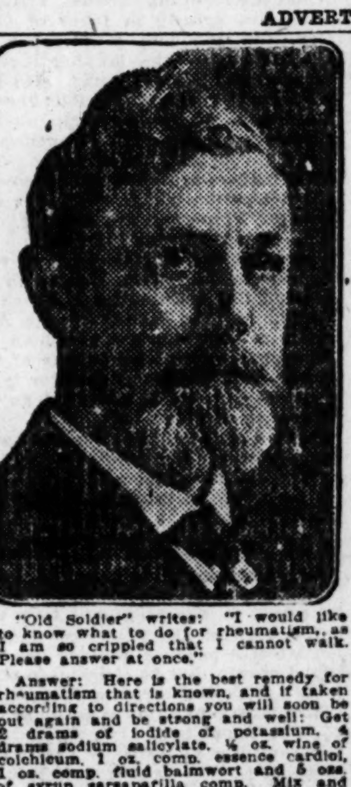
The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker



The questions answered below are general in character: the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers should apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Building, College-Ellwood streets, Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in any answers. The remedies can be obtained at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Old Soldier" writes: "I would like to know what to do for rheumatism, as I am so crippled that I cannot walk. Please answer at once."

Answer: Here is the best remedy for rheumatism that is known, and if taken according to directions you will soon be out again and be strong and well: Get 2 drams of iodide of potassium, 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 5 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla comp. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal time and again before going to bed.

"Laura" says: "Some time ago I contracted a very severe cold and cough. I have tried many remedies, but they do not seem to help me at all. I wish you would advise me what to do."

Answer: What you need is a laxative cough syrup, one that will drive the cold from your system. The following prescription will check your cold and cough: Get a 2¼-oz. package of concentrated essence Mentho-Laxene and make according to directions on the bottle. Take a teaspoonful every hour or two or until your cold is better.

"Poorly" writes: "Being past middle age and observing that my nervous system is in bad shape, I write for a prescription. I do not gain strength from my food, am weak, listless, forgetful, sleepless at times, tired and unable to act the part of a strong man of health, such as I was at one time."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy a sealed tube of three-grain Cadomene Tablets, which are especially made for those needing a strong, harmless, rejuvenating tonic. Astonishing and pleasing results follow and life and hope are renewed.

"Unhappy May" writes: "I suffer constantly with constipation, headaches, indigestion and kidney trouble. My skin is pimply and oily."

Answer: Three-grain Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets) is the best known remedy for the blood. They are made from sulphur, cream of tartar and herb medicines which act directly on the blood purifying it thus causing the pimples to disappear and the skin to become fresh and healthy looking.

"Essex" writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? Have depression, fever, chills, pains like rheumatism and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of Balmwort Tablets. This is a splendid efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use as per directions on each sealed tube.

"Sorrowful" says: "My scalp is covered with dandruff, my hair is oily and straggling. Please help me so that I may look like other girls."

Answer: You can very easily "look like other girls" if you will get at the drug store a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow Minyol and use it regularly according to the directions given. It will stop your dandruff and make your hair soft and fluffy and make it grow. This treatment differs from all others, and I have actually seen the most wonderful transformations when people have used this only two or three times.

"Ann" writes: "Could you prescribe something to increase my weight? I am tall and thin to such an embarrassing degree that I am frequently subjected to slighting remarks."

Answer: Hypo-Nuclane Tablets have been prescribed with great success as indicated by gratifying letters from hundreds of girls who suffer as you do. These tablets can be purchased in sealed packages from any well-stocked drug store and full directions are given inside. These should be taken regularly for about two months.

PRESIDENTIAL BEES OF THE BIG PARTIES NOW SEEK TO HIVE

is not without supporters. His name occurs most frequently in the arguments among leaders in many of the Southern, and a few of the Western States.

There has been no effort made, however, to crystallize sentiment for him, nor for that matter for any other Democratic aspirant for the Presidency. Party leaders throughout the country confess their inability to discover any pronounced sentiment in favor of any one man. There seems, however, to be the same pronounced feeling as prevails in the Republican party against naming any man who has been connected with the Government during the last four years, either in an executive or a legislative capacity.

Washington always proposes candidates. Few of these are ever acceptable. The Republican leaders who operate from the outside are frankly sceptical regarding any of the men now sitting in Congress and who are trying to convince the country that they must be nominated to save the nation.

Against Administration Man.

There is the same sort of prejudice among Democratic leaders who do not take their orders from Washington that it would be inadvisable to name any man who has been connected with the Wilson administration. Outside of Washington the list of available Democrats of executive or congressional experience does not attract any great amount of attention.

Mr. Palmer, the Attorney General, whose administration of the Department of Justice is conceded to be most efficient, has a large number of followers among members of the Democratic National Committee. His activities, which have provoked greater commendation than is given to his two predecessors in the Wilson Cabinet, seem to have made a lot of friends for him among leaders throughout the country, though the same objection is urged against him as figures in discussion of Mr. McAdoo.

Apparently no other member of Mr. Wilson's Cabinet is seriously considered in connection with the nomination. There is talk, of course, of Champ Clark, the former Speaker, just as there was in 1912, though he is not regarded as having as good a chance next year as he had then.

Oscar Underwood, who is rounding out into leadership form in the Senate, is one Democrat in Congress who is regarded as standing a better chance than any of his associates. The chief objection to him is geographical. Northern Democrats do not believe that any Southern man can be nominated on the record made by the Southern wing which has dominated the Washington situation for seven years.

Fight Southern Domination.

The feeling among Southern Democrats against a continuation of Southern control in Congress and in some of the executive departments is pretty bitter.

But Mr. Underwood is less objectionable on this score, perhaps, than any other man from his end of the country. He is highly esteemed for his conservative views of political problems and has proved less reactionary and freer from Southern Bourbonism than any other Southerner in Congress. What is left of the old Bryan wing of the party, which seems to be again coming up for air in various parts of the country, would be sure to antagonize him.

The boom for Secretary of War Baker appears to have totally collapsed. Many Democratic leaders were of the opinion six months ago that President Wilson might throw his influence to his Secretary of War. Of late, Mr Baker seems to have dropped out of sight politically. He may, and probably will, figure in the fight for the support of the Ohio delegation to the next National Convention. The chances there are greatly in favor of Gov. Cox, the Democratic executive of the Buckeye State, landing it. He is serving his third term. He has made a fine party and public record. He has a pretty firm grip on the State organization. He is generally liked throughout the country. The Ohio leaders are backing him to win the delegation which Mr. Baker and Senator Pomerene are seeking.

Senator Owen Talked Of.

Another Democratic Senator who figures in Mid-West discussion of presidential possibilities is Owen of Oklahoma, the father of the currency reform legislation and an ardent champion of the league of nations. The Oklahoma Senator is almost certain to be proposed as the "favorite son" of his State and stands a chance of getting other support from the Southwest.

The latest Democratic "available" to be projected into the Presidential field is Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. The political leaders of his State have not up to date considered him. His boom appears to have been hatched in Washington. It is not probable that the New York organization will propose him for the very good reason that the leaders in other parts of the country would view any Tammany suggestion with disfavor.

The Republican leaders are discussing the chances of seven men who are more or less available for presidential honors. These are Gen. Leonard Wood, who seems to have more support than all the other aspirants combined; Gov. Coolidge of Massachusetts, whose boom is penetrating the New England States; Gov. Lowden of Illinois, who seems certain to be the "favorite son" of his State; Senator Hiram Johnson, who has California "sewed up" and is credited with holding a mortgage on the erstwhile Progressive vote; Senator Harding of Ohio, who will probably get all the delegation votes from his State, and Senator Poindexter of Washington, whose program covers pretty nearly every reform that public discussion makes important, but who is of uncertain strength in his own State.

There Is Always Hoover.

Both Democrats and Republicans continue to speculate regarding Herbert C. Hoover, whose political sympathies are unknown. Both sides claim him and the sponsors for other booms admit that he may prove "dangerous under certain contingencies." Mr. Hoover is keeping his own counsel and letting the leaders take it out in guessing. He appears to be too busy to care what they think of or say about him.

The Republicans will swing into Presidential stride next week The National Committee of that party will meet here on Dec. 10 to select a date and place for their convention. Half a dozen towns are competing for the honor of sheltering it—Chicago, St. Louis, San Francisco, Kansas City, Louisville, Denver and Minneapolis.

The Democratic National Committee will meet here on Jan. 8 to perform a similar duty. The best guessers are picking Chicago for both conventions, though San Francisco is making a sturdy fight for either or both of them.

May Restore Soil With Ashes.

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—The technical authorities for the restoration of France and Belgium announce that they have discovered that furnace ashes from glass, iron and steel works stimulate vegetable growth enormously through carbonic acid fertilization. All plant life is said to be spurred to unusual growth. These ashes may be applied to restoration of the devastated districts.

CIVIL SERVICE TESTS TO BE HELD SATURDAY

Examinations Will Be for Postoffice Positions in St. Louis District and Washington, D. C.

The local office of the United States Civil Service Commission in the old custom house announces a large number of examinations for positions in St. Louis and vicinity and in Washington, D. C. An examination for postoffice employes will be held in St. Louis, Little Rock, Oklahoma City and Springfield, Ill., next Saturday. These positions now pay an entrance salary of 60 cents an hour. A large number of other examinations for postoffice positions for smaller offices in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Illinois are scheduled to be held on Dec. 15, 1919, and Jan. 10, 1920. There will also be examinations Wednesday for messenger boy, first grade clerk experienced in finance and minor clerk for the Subtreasury service. All these positions are held in St. Louis.

One of the most popular examinations given for the Government service is that of railway mail clerk, which will be held in many of the large cities, including St. Louis, on Dec 6, 1919.

The army post at Jefferson Barracks has recently installed a modern fire department, and examinations will be held on Dec. 10, in order to obtain one Fire Chief, one Assistant Fire Chief and a number of fire fighters. There is also a number of examinations under way for positions in the mechanical trades, such as carpenter, painter, baker, fireman, stove repair man, chauffeur, garageman, engineer and elevator conductor.

The Government still needs a large number of stenographers and typists and is holding this examination every Tuesday in the old custom house in St. Louis. A special examination for such positions in St. Louis will be held in St. Louis on Jan. 15, 1920.

One of the examinations under way is for the position of special agent in the Internal Revenue Service. The position pays from $1500 to $3000 per annum, and will be held in St. Louis and other large cities on Jan. 7, 1920.

In addition to the examinations noted, a list of about 500 pending examinations may be obtained from Dr Hendricks, at Third and Olive.

LOUIS WALLIS, LECTURER FOR THE Joseph Fels Commission, will speak at a meeting for men to be held at the North Side "Y," Grand and Sullivan avenues, Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Bethel Evangelical Double Quartet will sing. There will be no collection nor admission fee and all men are invited.

ANTI AUTO-THIEF SOCIETY TO CURTAIL AUTO "RUSTLERS"

Automobile and Insurance Men Form Organization to Combat Theft of Motor Vehicles.

An Antiauto-thief Association, modern prototype of the antihorse-thief associations of frontier days, was organized at a meeting held Thursday in the offices of the Insurance Club, 433 Pierce building. Those present included representatives of the Automobile Club of St. Louis and the various insurance agencies which place automobile risks.

M. W. Doyle of the American Automobile Insurance Co., a St. Louis association, was elected president, and Ernest Reeves, secretary of the Automobile Club, secretary. A committee to draw up the plan of operations consisted of T. J. McDermott of the Automobile Underwriters of America, A. L. Bushman of the Belt Auto Indemnity Association, H. A. Blair of the Aetna Co., P. J. Bierman of W. H. Markham & Co. and E. W. Bentley.

The meeting was the outgrowth of the action of the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club, which at its last meeting set aside $500 for the use of the Police Department in following up clews which might lead to the apprehension of automobile thieves.

Chief of Detectives John P. Hannegan and several members of the automobile squad told their experiences in breaking up markets for stolen cars, and offered numerous suggestions for the consideration of the new organization.

A general meeting of all parties interested in the move will be called on Thursday of next week.

The parties represented at yesterday's meeting have been co-operating for a number of months with the police and detective forces of the city and Chief Hannegan made a partial report of the results of this co-operative effort. Up to Dec. 1, this year, a total of only 1194 automobiles have been stolen in the City of St. Louis, against 2241 for the entire year of 1918. The fact that only about half as many cars have been stolen this year, in spite of an increase of nearly 30 per cent in the number of automobiles owned and driven in St. Louis, over the figures for 1918, speaks well of the activities of the Police Department and its unofficial aids.

Of the number of cars stolen during the current year, 890 were recovered, leaving a deficit of 304. This compares with 1385 cars recovered in 1918, and 856 missing.

St. Louis stood third in the number of cars stolen in 1918. This led to steps being taken by the Automobile Club and the insurance interests which resulted in a material increase in the activities of the authorities. As a result the number of thefts in this city has steadily decreased, while in practically every other large city of the country there has been a very marked increase.

Detroit, which headed the list in 1918, showed 2639 stolen cars for the first six months of 1919, and Chicago, which was second, showed 2611 for the same period. St. Louis' record of 1194 for 11 months contrasts very favorably with these figures.

But 14 of the cars stolen in November, 1919, are still unrecovered by the police, while in the corresponding month of last year 75 were missing.

WORLD MARKET FOR U. S. AUTOMOBILES

Demand for Low-Priced Cars Comes From All Quarters of Globe.

From the fact that 87 per cent of all the automobiles in the world are in the United States, there are two positive conclusions—that there is a huge foreign market as yet unsupplied and that the United States is the logical country to supply it. Adding to this the acknowledged condition that other automobile producing countries cannot meet the demand in their home markets for five years to come and it is evident that American manufacturers have a wonderful opportunity for foreign business.

Commerce reports and communications from abroad constantly call attention to the crying need of cars from practically every quarter of the globe. China, India, South America, Switzerland, Australia, Nigeria, Mexico and nearly all of the countries of Europe have been mentioned specifically in recent consular advices. The lack of good roads is the main impediment to more extensive use of cars abroad, but road improvement is being agitated everywhere that motor transportation is so sorely needed.

By virtue of being nearer the sources of most of the raw materials and producing in quantities American manufacturers can deliver, even against the handicaps of freight and import duties, a product that performs as well or better and costs less than that produced in any other country. Hence the American car is bound to appeal to the common sense of any business man, whatever his allegiance nationally. People everywhere will buy anywhere to get what they want. It is human nature and no amount of argument or appeal to sentiment will change it. Those who want the most motor car for the price are fast learning that the only place to get it is the United States.

Motor Registration Plates for 1920 to Be Green With Black Numerals—Organizations Asked to Assist in Relieving Usual Rush.

Automobile license plates for 1920 will be placed on sale in St. Louis at room 408, City Hall, on Jan. 5, it was announced by James J. O'Connor, supervisor of the automobile registration division of the office of Secretary of State, while in St. Louis last week.

Room 408 is the office of P. J. Schilling, chief deputy of the St. Louis office of the Secretary of State for motor vehicle registration. Automobile and motorcycle license plates and chauffeurs' badges may be obtained there.

There will be a change in both the color and design of the new plates, Supervisor O'Connor said. The background of the 1920 plates will be painted a pea-green color, he said, and the numerals will be in black. To separate the larger numbers so they may be more easily read, a dash will be used to separate the last three figures from those before. For example, numerals on the new plates will appear like this (245-340) rather than (245340) as was the sase in 1919. The letters (MO.) and the numerals (1920) will be under the license registration number instead of to the side, as was done this year. The dimensions of the plates remain the same.

The fiscal year for motor registration plates in Missouri is from Feb. 1 to Feb. 1. This will give motorists little more than four weeks to purchase their new plates before the 1919 plates expire. Automobiles purchased between now and Feb. 1 will require the 1919 license, which can be obtained by paying one-fourth of the annual license fee. The plates for 1920 are not to be used until Feb. 1, Supervisor O'Connor said.

To alleviate a rush at the last minute Chief Deputy Schilling said that organizations in the city which would care to accommodate members by obtaining registration applications that the licenses of members might be obtained in large lots at a time should apply to him for the blank forms.

The Automobile Club will probably handle more than any other organization. The arrangement consists of the organization secretary applying for the number of registration application blanks needed to accommodate members owning automobiles. The secretary then mails or distributes otherwise these blanks to members to be filled out and returned with their personal check to cover the annual fee of their car. The secretary then takes the cash and filled application forms to the City Hall and is furnished with the required number of sets of plates which may be distributed to their owners without the inconvenience of having to wait in line.

Supplies of the registration forms will also be distributed among neighborhood banks, Schilling said.

There has been no change in the fee for automobile licenses for 1920, but there has been a change in the rate for motorcycle license fees which will be reduced from $4 to $2 for the year in accordance with a law passed by the last Legislature. The annual fee for all electric automobiles, both passenger cars and trucks, has been set at $6. The annual fee for automobiles varies from $4 for those less than 12 horsepower to $24 for those of 72 horsepower and up.

There has been an increase of 54,683 motor vehicles in Missouri up to Dec. 1, 1919, over the same period in 1918.

There had been 46,600 motor vehicle licenses issued from the St. Louis office up to Dec. 1.

Supervisor O'Connor said $1,722,745.65 had been placed in the State Road Fund up to Dec. 1 representing fees that have been received for motor vehicle registrations.

There are now in Missouri more than 245,000 motor vehicles.

N. A. D. A. ANNUAL CONVENTION JAN. 26-27

A LITTLE ATTENTION TO YOUR TIRES MEANS MONEY IN YOUR POCKET

NOW is the time to take care of your tires. Winter is when water and dirt wear themselves into cuts and ruptures. When spring comes blowouts and trouble result.

Much annoyance and many dollars will be saved motorists who see that cuts and stone bruises are attended to at once. Cuts should be cleaned thoroughly and then filled with tire putty.

At the close of the summer and fall season motorists who would conserve their tire mileage should change tires from rear to front and vice versa. In fact it is a good plan to switch tires ever so often.

BRITISH FIRM TO SPEND $5,000,000 HERE

Britain is coming to St. Louis for motor cars. E. Bennett representing the Northwestern Motors Ltd. of Liverpool, England, has placed orders in St. Louis within the last few weeks it became known last week for 500 Moon automobiles, 700 traffic trucks and a large supply of Cupples tires, and will place and order soon it was reported for 1000 light four cylindered cars made in St. Louis, which would either be the Skelton or Gardner cars.

The total expenditure for automobiles, accessories and supplies in St. Louis by the British firm will reach $5,000,000 a year it is said. All of this business is to be handled on the basis of sight draft against bill of lading.

MOTOR VEHICLE LIGHTS

AS a safety precaution it might be well to bear in mind that 5:09 p. m. is the hour each day this week when the lights of your motor car are required by a State law to be illuminated. This applies to automobiles parked in any part of the city as well as while in motion.

An Enviable Reputation Already Won

Hundreds of dealers who drove new Cleveland Sixes from the factory in Cleveland to their home cities have written the factory expressing their admiration and confidence in the car. What they all say is summed up in this sentence from one of them, "I can look any man in the face now and tell him the Cleveland is a regular automobile."

And that's what the Cleveland Six is—a regular automobile, an unusual automobile.

Hundreds of Cleveland Sixes, within the past four months, have undergone long, gruelling, cross country drives, with honor. They have passed over great hill drives and long mountain climbs, plowed through mud and washouts and desert sands where other cars stall and stop. Its power and endurance have already won the Cleveland an enviable reputation.

This is not surprising for skill and sincerity are built into this car by men who have contributed their genius to the building up of one of America's finest quality cars.

WHAT MOTOR WORLD OF EUROPE IS DOING

London Times Correspondent Reports Some Obvious Omissions at Paris Motor Show.

The motoring correspondent of the London Times in a recent issue gives an interesting account of what Europe is doing in the way of motor car design and construction as he found it at the Paris Motor Show.

He has written as follows:

Impressions of the exhibition and the cars therein can be summed up readily enough. On the whole, they are satisfactory, but there are, of course, some rather obvious omissions. It is disappointing, for example, to find so little use made of the newer metals evolved out of war experience, though possibly this is due more to difficulties in supplying rather than to any reluctance of the manufacturers to use them.

Vacuum petrol feed is rapidly superseding all other systems, and it is also interesting to note that carburetor design is being rapidly improved. In a few instances these fittings can be adjusted and regulated while the engine is running. Adjustable air inlets incorporated in the construction are more common, the designs are cleaner generally, and provision for heating is made.

Fixed Ignition.

Fixed ignition is still believed in by the majority of the manufacturers, though the time has surely come when users may be trusted to make intelligent use of a variable system. Coil ignition, despite the almost universal employment of electric lighting and engine starting, which necessitates the carrying of accumulators, is rare. On one or two of the more expensive chasses a dual system of magneto and coil is provided.

Unit construction of engine, clutch and gear-box is rapidly becoming current practice, and, considering how rarely these parts have to be dismantled or taken up in these days, apart from the regular seasonal overhaul or deliberate foolishness in driving, the practice is to be commended. With this unit construction goes an increasing employment of central gear and brake-lever location. Tire pumps and speedometer drives, incorporated in the general design, are increasingly common, while the dashboards tend to become more and more filled with "gargets."

Either disc or wire wheels, commonly of the detachable type, are almost universal. The demountable rim is seen here and there, but it is not popular. Artillery wheels are very rarely used. Cantilever springing at the rear is in increasing favor for the faster and heavier cars, but practically none are fitted with facilities for introducing lubricant between the leaves, or grease-retaining gaiters. The ball-spring oiler is rare, and the rather inefficient and inaccessible greaser common. Visible oil indicators to check the engine oil level are general, shock absorbers as a standard fitting are in demand, but very few cars have adjustable brake and clutch pedals. Petrol-tank gauges are common enough, especially on the costlier cars, but centrally-located and inadequate filling orifices, especially on cars fitted with luggage carriers or spare wheels above the tank, are out of place. One not unimportant improvement is in the provision made for setting head lamps by means of adjustable lamp brackets.

Sporting Cars.

An interesting new car is the Gnome and the Rhone, with six cylinders, very clean and distinctive in appearance, and rated at 40 h. p. The unit is of the line ahead overhead-valved type, and is, perhaps, unduly long, though the effective crankshaft and bearing design should damp any vibration or whip. The straight-through drive of dynamo and fan is novel, while the use of the magnetos should dispense with risk of ignition failure. Particularly sound is the design of the inlet and exhaust manifolds. The unit construction is very good, really good-sized inspection covers being provided. A three-speed gearbox is provided.

The Hispano-Suiza is a type of sporting car de luxe. The six-cylindered engine has overhead valves and a strong flavoring of aircraft experience generally, while the detailed care evident in the working out of every detail is worthy of praise. The front wheel brakes strike one as being very efficient. Undoubtedly, notwithstanding its high price, this car will gain a big reputation as a sports model. The six-cylindered Sunbeam is not nearly so elaborate to outward seeming. In fact, were one not aware of the sound design and careful manufacture characteristic of all the Sunbeam cars, this British product would suffer in comparison with its more highly polished rivals. On performance, however, the six-cylindered Sunbeam is the equal of any other chassis shown at the Grand Palais. The lines of this sporting model are particularly pleasing. The four-cylindered Sunbeams on view were of standard types, already very well known.

Chasses and cars by Sizaire-Berwick attracted much notice. These machines lend themselves very readily to effective coachwork, both open or closed. The square radiator, which led to the cars sometimes being confused with the products of another maker, has a slight "V" in the latest models. These chasses are being built both in England and France.

A sporting car which is receiving much notice in France is the Bignan-Sport, which has a four-cylindered monobloc unit rated at 25 h. p., bore and stroke being 85 mm. by 130 mm. The guaranteed speed is 100 kilometers an hour and the chassis price is 21,500 francs (£614). Without being unkind or hypercritical, one cannot help saying that this car is not in the same class as the Sunbeam or the Hispano-Suiza, even when the difference in price is taken into consideration. A clever little car is the D. F. P., which has, for a standard production, a great speed reputation.

Electric Cars.

Several electrics were on view, and for the most part an attempt has been made to conform, so far as outward appearance goes, to orthodox motor-car practice—the Alba, for example, wherein the motor is located amidships in the chassis, driving thence by shaft to a worm-driven axle. For an electric town carriage, which is all that this type of vehicle professes to be in the present stage of development, the Alba should prove popular.

The greatest use of electricity was among the accessory exhibits, where one's ear was deafened by raucous shrieks from hooters, and one's eye blinded by the enormous sparks which are supposed to demonstrate that plugs by the same maker partake of the same wonderful nature. The lamp makers are producing some very artistic specimens of their work.

ROLLS-ROYCE CAR IS TO BE BUILT BY BRITISH IN AMERICA

Site Selected at Springfield, Mass. —Say There Is Great Demand for More Expensive Car.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Demands for a more expensive automobile than is manufactured in the United States have become so insistent that the Rolls-Royce company of England plans the erection soon of a large plant in the United States for the manufacture of the British car.

The site selected for this factory is at Springfield, Mass., and it is understood that the plans of the company have been advanced far enough to contemplate the bringing of skilled workmen from England.

The project is backed by the Rolls-Royce of America Co., of which Thomas Hadin is general superintendent. The purpose of the American factory is to avoid the high duty on the imported machines. Although the demand for the Rolls-Royce is said to be great, only a few have been sold in the United States.

Before any workmen can be brought here consent from the Government must be obtained for an interpretation of the application of the alien contract labor law. The American company argues that the automobile it proposes to build is largely made by hand and that men from the British factory who are experienced with the various parts are needed, as such experts cannot be found here.

MOTOR TRUCKS AS RAILROAD BRANCHES

"The attitude between the railroads and the motor truck is gradually turning from a spirit of competition to a spirit of co-operation," says R. E. Fulton, vice president of the International Motor Co., manufacturers of Mack trucks.

"The present serious financial condition of the railroads and the increased freight rates that will inevitably follow, together with the economic advantages of the motor truck, point to a very favorable effect on the prices of foodstuffs as a result of that co-operation.

"The use of trucks as feeders to the railroads up to a distance of a hundred miles will release their facilities for the increasing tonnage that requires long-distance haulage. It has been specifically proven that because of the duplication of handling in railroad transportation goods can be shipped on short hauls more economically by motor truck. In a few years the truck will be the standard method of short-distance hauling. By acting as a feeder within a radius of terminals, it will provide the railroads with an increased tonnage and assist in making complete delivery, since it will penetrate areas that are now without transportation facilities."

C. S. Armstrong, for a number of years in the automobile business in Virginia, is now a member of the sales force of the wholesale department of the Overland Automobile Co.

ST. LOUIS OIL FIRM BUILDING NEW HOME

Modern Fireproof Building With Storage Facilities for 500,000 Gallons of Lubricating Oil.

A modern fireproof building, embracing storage capacity for more than a half million gallons of lubricating oil and including every facility for advantageous distribution of the product, is now nearing completion at Forty-first street and Park avenue, and will be occupied shortly after Jan. 1 as the new home of J. D. Streett & Co.

This announcement was made yesterday by J. Clark Streett, senior partner of the firm. The present quarters of the company are located at 809 North Second street.

"The removal to a larger and more modern plant has been necessitated by the heavy growth of our automobile lubrication department during the past year," said Mr. Streett. "This will mark the third move made by our company since it was founded in St. Louis 42 years ago.

Center of City.

"Our new home is located in the geographical center of the city and will have every facility for economic and efficient handling of high-grade lubricating oils. It will be one of the most modern and model plants of its kind in the country and will be a credit to the industry in St. Louis.

"Five hundred feet of private switch track on our own property connects with the main line of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad, enabling us to install ample loading and unloading facilities, and precaution has been taken in placing our storage tanks and unloading tracks so as to comply with the proposed Federal requirements that all such equipment be located on our own property and 200 feet from the railway right-of-way. Sufficient ground and facilities are also possessed along the line of the Frisco Railway to provide space for additional buildings and future growth and development of the company."

The Streett company's new plant embodies every necessary equipment, including modern pipe line and pumping features, for the most efficient and economical handling of their product, including a series of large tanks housed in a unique manner so as to be weather-proof and fireproof, and so arranged that they may be quickly filled from tank cars or emptied by motor-driven pumps with an interchangeable pipe system.

General Offices on Property.

In addition to the plant, the general offices of the company will be located on the same property. Special attention will be given to the comfort and welfare of employes. Rest rooms will be replete with every present-day convenience, including lockers and shower baths. A system of heating and ventilating throughout the entire building by means of ventilating fans and direct radiation will permit of maintaining a temperature of 70 degrees in zero weather and the making of six air changes per hour.

The lubrication department was enlarged and reorganized in February of this year, when the services of Samuel J. Hunt, who has since been admitted to membership in the firm, were secured by J. D. Streett & Co. to head this department in the capacity of lubricating engineer.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR TRAFFIC CONVENTION

Extensive preparations are being made by the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation in getting ready to receive the hundreds of dealers from all parts of the United States, Canada, South America and Europe who will be in St. Louis for the National Traffic Convention to be held here next Thursday and Friday, Dec. 11 and 12. Harry H. Hawke, general sales manager, announces that the program is complete. The Jefferson Hotel has been chartered by the Traffic Corporation for both days of the convention, where all visitors will be housed and banquets held.

At the opening banquet of the convention Mayor Henry W. Kiel will welcome the dealers to the city. Guy Wilson, president; T. C. Brandle, vice president; Harry H. Hawke, general sales manager of the Traffic Motor Truck Corporation, and W. C. D'Arcy, president of the D'Arcy Advertising Co., will deliver addresses to the visitors.

On both days of the convention all visitors will have luncheon in the dining rooms of the traffic plant. The new factory and foundry building recently built, covering the block between Second and McKissock, Withers and Talcott streets, will be portioned off in order to take care of the visitors while at the plant. Booths have been constructed in the new plant in order that the visitors from the states might be congregated together and thereby avoid congestion. Touring cars have been chartered by the company to transport the guests from hotel to the plant during the two days.

A corps of experienced guides will be in attendance during the convention to show guests the plant in order that they might receive a thorough knowledge of how Traffic trucks are built. And, in addition, arrangements have been made for spectacular tests showing feats the truck is able to perform.

The Briscoe Truck and Tractor Cales Co., of which Frank Bishop is president, moved into their new quarters at 2824 Locust street last week. A showroom, where trucks will be displayed, and offices will be located in the forepart of the building which was formerly occupied by the McQuay-Norris Mfg. Co. A service department for trucks will be established in the back part of that portion of the building leased by the company.

GARDNER PREPARING FOR EXPORT BUSINESS

A London dealer in automobiles was in St. Louis Thursday, on a special visit to the Gardner Motor Co., with the view to arranging for handling of the Gardner Light Four at that British center. He was insistent upon closing the deal at once, and giving an order for 1000 cars, but as this ahd intimate relation to the general export policy of the company, which President R. E. Gardner is studying at New York, Vice President Russell E. Gardner Jr., in charge of sales, declined to enter into an agreement at this time.

Vice Presidents R. E. Gardner Jr. and F. W. Gardner, the latter in charge of production, will join their father at New York in January, to attend the auto show and study exhibits there to th end that whatever may be disclosed as having advantage for the passenger car may be taken advantage of for the Gardner Light Four. It is probable that while the three are in that city decision will be reached on the question of whether the company shall establish its own export department or take care of that business through one of the agencies having branches in all the leading countries of the world.

The Gardner roadster will come upon the market next April. This was determined the past week, when specifications and blue prints of the body were gone carefully over, and given final approval. Only in the body will there be difference between the touring, sedan, coupe and roadster cars, all of which will be on similar chassis. Production of the sedan and coupe types will follow shortly after the roadster's appearance.

COAL SHORTAGE HITS AUTOMOBILE TRADE

The Reginal Coal Committee has issued some very specific instructions in regard to closing hours of the automobile interests of St. Louis. The enforcement of these provisions have been put into the hands of Robert E. Lee who is appointed Automobile Deputy to the commissioner.

The ruling is that all automobile salesrooms, service stations and shops;all accessory and supply shops; all accessory and supply ice businesses, and all battery stores and battery service businesses must be closed at 5 o'clock, and must not reopen before 9 a. m. the next morning. Public garages for the storage of automobiles are permitted to continue as usual, but with the restriction that they must not sell tires, accessories or supplies after 5 p. m., nor any gasoline after 6 p. m. Gasoline filling stations and garage filling stations are permitted to sell gasoline between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. each day, and at no other time.

TRUCK DEALERS TO HOLD MEETING

Chairman L. H. Amrine of the Commercial Car Bureau of the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association has issued a call for a meeting of the bureau to be held at the City Club Tuesday, Dec. 9, following a dinner at 6:30 p. m. Any commercial car handler in St. Louis will be welcome to the meeting.

HOLMES
Improved Air Cooled

Real Winter Comfort in This Four-Passenger Roadster

PROVISIONS for winter comfort in an open car are amply met in this Holmes Four-Passenger Roadster. Winter curtains that fit snugly to the top and closely at the sides, opening with the doors, give enclosed car protection against storms and winds.

The Holmes Improved Air-Cooled motor—two hundred less parts than in water cooling, and nothing to freeze—eliminates all trouble with the cooling system. Drive anywhere, leave your car standing in temperatures way below zero; it is always ready to start.

In this four-passenger roadster speed is a matter of higher averages over all roads—30 to 40 miles an hour over rough roads where other cars must slow down to 15 to 20 miles an hour.

Upkeep costs show 18-20 miles to the gallon of gasoline; better than 10,000 miles to the set of tires. Roads and weather are no longer masters of a motor car.

High operating costs are no longer necessary in a car of proper size. The price of Economy is no longer cramped discomfort and restricted seating capacity.

ST. LOUIS SELECTED AS CENTER FOR TIRE DISTRIBUTION

Republic Rubber Co. Opened First Distributing Center Under New Selling Plan in St. Louis Last Week.

St. Louis has been chosen by the Republic Rubber Co. of Youngstown, O., as the site of one of their most important automobile tire and inner tube distributing centers.

After a survey of the Middle West over an extended period St. Louis was chosen in a field including Chicago, Minneapolis, Kansas City, Denver and Dallas.

Edgar Evans who came direct from Youngstown to manage the St. Louis distributing center which made its first shipment last week, has been Supervisor of Stores for the Republic Rubber Co. at Youngstown for several years.

The distributing warehouse in which a stock will be maintained of from 25,000 to 30,000 pneumatic castings; 25,000 to 30,000 inner tubes and 1000 solid tires is located at the northeast corner of First and St. George streets. It is a two-story brick building owned by the Busch interests. It has a large concrete basement ideal for tire storage. The floor space is 17,500 square feet. It is equipped with elevators.

L. N. Bartlett, manager of the St. Louis branch of the Republic Rubber Co., will maintain a truck tire service department in a portion of the basement which will be equipped with presses for applying solid tires to wheels of trucks, and cut-off saws for removing the iron rims from wheels. The policy will be to give day and night service. A motor service will be established according to Manager Bartlett so that wheels with tires to be changed may be called for at the customer's garage and the work done during the night so that there is no time lost to the truck user.

The solid tires mounted on iron rims will be stored in the basement. Pneumatic tires will be stored in metal racks on the third floor, as well as the second floor where the inner tubes will be also stored and offices located.

A large store of mechanical rubber goods, such as hose, belting and packing, will be kept on the second floor.

A switch connecting with the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain Railway adjoins the property. It was also chosen because of its access to the water front, a dock for river shipping being located at the foot of St. George street.

The territory to which these rubber goods will be shipped by freight, express, parcel post and river extends from Canada to Mexico and from the Mississippi River west to the Rocky Mountains.

The establishment of the distributing center in St. Louis is the inauguration of a new policy adopted by the Republic Rubber Co. for the distribution of their products.

Similar centers are to be established later on the Pacific Coast and in the East, Mr. Evans said.

In the territory to be reached by St. Louis are 10 Republic Rubber Co. districts, including several thousands of dealers.

The first shipment of tires made under the new plan left St. Louis last Wednesday for Springfield, Mo.

The general offices of the Republic Rubber Co. were moved yesterday from 2018-20 Locust street to suite 1021-1029 Arcade Building. The distributing center will be operated independently of the St. Louis branch, it being supervised directly from Youngstown, O., Mr. Evans said.

Manager Bartlett of the St. Louis branch said the St. Louis sales force would make their headquarters in the Arcade Building also.

SKELTON AGENCY TO OPEN WITHIN 10 DAYS

The Meissner-Skelton Motor Car Co. will open its new agency at 3150 Locust street within 10 days for distribution to the St. Louis trade of the Skelton touring car and roadster, deliveries of which will be made this month by the St. Louis Car Co., 8000 North Broadway, for the Skelton Motors Corporation.

The Skelton will be the first of the new St. Louis built cars to be placed on the market for immediate delivery. It has a standard four-cylinder engine of proved dependability and reputation for consistent performance; full-floating rear axle and spiral cut gears, and rugged body designed along the very latest lines. The first 3000 produced will sell for $1245. It is a light car of high-grade construction, and its producers claim that durability and economy of operation have been embodied by precise engineering.

Edwin B. Meissner, who is president of the agency company, has been vice president and general manager of the St. Louis Car Co. for 10 years, and has placed that concern among the leading manufacturing units of the Mississippi Valley. At the St. Louis Car Co. he will have general supervision of the cars for his agency. His selling force will be headed by John Rogers, formerly of the Post-Dispatch, as vice president and general manager of the agency company.

A force of workmen have been employed on the show room at 3150 Locust street for three weeks.

A few unsolicited orders for the new Skelton have been placed by St. Louisans who are eager to possess the first cars turned out by the new company, but preliminary sales work has been deferred until the agency is ready for occupancy.

Cars of this type, selling at $1000 to $1500, being in excessive demand, it is confidently believed by the Skelton producers that their car will find instant favor with St. Louisans.

SUGGESTS AUTOMOTIVE ASS'N FOR ST. LOUIS

At a meeting of the St. Louis Tire Dealers' Association held at the Marquette Hotel Thursday night, a large number of tire dealers not members of the association were entertained as guests, and four new members were elected during the meeting. P. H. Brockman, president of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, and H. E. Spoeneman, president of the Storage Battery Trade Association, were speakers, and both told of the remarkable benefits that have come to firms through membership in their respective bodies. The curtailment of the abuse of free service on the roads by tire firms was discussed at length. One of Brockman's suggestions was the organization of the Automotive Industries Association of St. Louis, to be composed of an automobile dealers' bureau, a truck dealers' bureau, an accessory dealers' bureau, a tire dealers' bureau and a battery dealers' bureau.

NEW Mitchell SIXES

That Smartest Roadster

Another Mitchell Creation

THERE are many surprises in this new three-passenger model, all of which you will appreciate. In point of appearance, this Mitchell Six leads its class. It is extra roomy; finely finished.

The major betterments are found in the chassis. Over two years of revisions, based on sixteen years' experience, have brought scores of improvements.

Many of them mean more strength, more endurance, lasting newness, longer life. They cut down operating and upkeep costs. They mean more power, more comfort.

Built to Last

Time has shown that old-type Sixes aged too rapidly. Many elements contributed to this fault. So Mitchell factories added now machinery and equipment costing over $300,000 in order to make these new-day cars endure.

Radical tests have been installed. An exacting inspection system has been created. Better materials and finer workmanship are employed.

Many vital parts are larger and stronger. Brake efficiency has been increased. A new-type disc clutch is added. Long cantilever rear springs give greatest riding ease and do not break in use.

Many refinements have taken place in the Mitchell motor. Utter smoothness, balance and fit save much waste of power, give longer life and result in economy.

Throughout the car, new standards are incorporated. Combined, they are creating a nation-wide sensation. They represent a value unapproached in this class. Come see these fine but modest-priced cars.

AUTO NOTES and GOSSIP.

W. A. Nesbitt who has been connected with the Weber Implement & Auto Co. for several years has joined the sales force of the Overland Automobile Co. used car department. Nesbitt has been in the automobile business for the last 16 years.

R. R. Bush, president of the Southwest Nash Motor Co., which has branches in Denver, Oklahoma City and St. Louis, spent last Tuesday visiting S. W. Ramsey, general manager of the local branch. Bush stated that this year's business in all branches of his company was the largest in volume of sales ever experienced. The outlook for 1920 is better still, he said.

Harrison Weber, who has formerly been a city salesman for the Weber Implement & Auto Co., left last week on his first trip as wholesale sales representative in the southern half of Missouri.

In the November issue of the "Auto Era," published by the Winton Company, at Cleveland, O., four pages are devoted to photographs and the account of President Wilson's ride in a Winton Six while visiting St. Louis.

An Overland Four that has been purchased by the American Legion to be raffled at the close of the performance of "Slippery Gulch" has been on display the last week at the Coliseum. Proceeds from the raffle will become part of the fund with which quarters for the American Legion in St. Louis are to be built.

F. W. Ruggles, president of the Republic Motor Truck Co. Inc., formally announces that he has, in conjunction with John N. Willys and W. J. Baxter of New York City, acquired control of the Republic Motor Truck Co. Inc. and the Torbensen Axle Co. of Cleveland, O.

The Cole St. Louis Automobile Co. have established a new used car department at 3034 Washington avenue. Lyman B. Yancey, who handled used cars at different times for two St. Louis distributors, has recently returned from military service.

The used car department is back of the premises of the company at 3021 Locust street.

A new style of radiator, especially designed, is now being shown on some of the latest model Holmes cars. The choice of the new style radiator is optional with the purchaser. It is built of wire mesh construction which resembles somewhat the honeycombed radiator of a water-cooled car. Many motorists have expressed their preference for it over the standard radiator design, according to C. E. Graves, local Holmes distributor.

A four-story building to cost $189,000 is to be erected at 1119 to 1123 Pine street to house the Strauss Motor Car Co., a corporation which has been formed to succeed the Lafayette Motor Car Co., which has been an authorized Ford dealer at Grand and Lafayette avenues. This will be the first Ford sales and service station to be opened in the downtown district.

Cooling System Hints.

If possible, soft water, rain water or melted snow should be used in filling the cooling system. Continual condensation causes a deposit of salts, if the water contains such minerals, and these deposits adhere to the inner surfaces of the radiator metal, reducing the cooling efficiency of the system. Water spilled in pouring it in the radiator will sometimes put a magneto out of commission, break a spark plug porcelain or short circuit the electric system. Carbonate of soda, familiarly known as washing soda, dissolved in soft water, one pound to a gallon, and then poured into the cooling system while the engine is run for half an hour, will clean out the sediment that accumulates and clogs up the tubes of the radiator.

THERE ARE MANY KINDS OF SERVICE

When you see a raveling on a fellow's coat sleeve or his coat collar turned up in the back, don't you feel like letting him know about it so that he might correct it?

It is with that same thought in mind that H. P. Federspiel, manager of the Southern Motor Co., has instructed all of his salesmen to take down the State license numbers of all automobiles that they see with wobbly wheels or wheels that are out of alignment.

Federspiel then has a stenographer look up the name and address of the person having the reported registration numbers, and a letter on this order is mailed them:

"One of our salesmen today noticed that the right front wheel of your automobile bearing State license tag (so-and-so) was running out of true.

"If this continues it will be damaging to the tire as well as the wheel, and might cause a serious accident.

"This is not an appeal for your repair business, as we do not do that kind of work, but a helpful suggestion regarding a matter you may not have known about."

Federspiel said yesterday that he has sent out several hundred such reports, and has received many replies of appreciation.

NEW MODELS

WINTON

The first of the latest series of the Winton Light Six touring cars was on display last week at the Von Arx Automobile Co.

The motor of the Light Six has a demountable head and counterbalanced crankshaft. The motor of the Winton Big Six is cast in block, and does not use a counter balanced crankshaft.

Changes in the motor include a new style gasoline strainer attached to the auxiliary gasoline tank on the dash, and a hot-spot manifold which has a shutter adjustment that may be regulated for either winter or summer driving. The Bosch magneto is still used for ignition purposes. The rating of the Light Six motor is 33 horsepower. On dynameter test it rates 70 horsepower.

The body finish is in battleship gray. The wheelbase of the Light Six is six inches shorter than that of the Winton Big Six, which is 132 inches. The difference is taken up in the length of the cowl and hood. The same models are built on the Light Six chassis as on that of the larger car. The standard colors are royal blue, maroon and Brewster green.

The dash equipment includes an eight-day Waltham clock and compartment under key for gloves or parcels. The body lines are of the latest beveled edge design.

CHEVROLET

The new 1920 model Chevrolet "FB 40" five-passenger sedan was put on display last week in the showroom of the Chevrolet Motor Co. retail store, at Locust street and Lindell cutoff.

The body is of solid post construction with four doors which are all hung from the front. The interior is upholstered in a high-grade French velour of gray color. The front seats are divided. The driver's seat may be adjusted to suit the individual requirements and comfort of the driver. It is upholstered in black leather. Robe cords are at the back of each front seat. There is a dome light which is operated by a switch just inside the door on the right side of the rear compartment. Each of the doors is equipped with automatic window regulators. The regulators are so constructed that the driver with one hand can lower the window in the door to his left to give traffic signals without his attention being taken from driving. Wide pockets are provided on the inside of each door made of the same material as the upholstery, with weighted flaps.

Among other features is a tilting steering wheel, which adds to the driver's convenience in getting in and out of his seat. The right-hand rear door is equipped with Yale lock. The other doors are provided with inside catches. The rear side and back windows are equipped with silk roller curtains.

The windshield, set at a slant, is of three-piece construction, with rain-vision shield and adjustable divided glass.

A hot-spot manifold has been added to the motor of the new model for use of the lower grade fuel.

The wheelbase is 110 inches. Color of the body is dark blue with panels, fenders and wheels black.

TIRES PERFORM BEST IN WINTER WEATHER

Automobile tires wear better and last longer in cold winter months than they do in the warm days of summer. In this one particular, at least, the cost of keeping up a car is less in winter than in summer.

Fleets of test cars operated by the United States Tire Co. have demonstrated that the lower temperatures have a beneficial effect on tires. In spite of bad snows and ice conditions carefully kept records show that tires give much greater mileages in winter than in summer. Heat is one of the worst enemies a tire is called on to face, especially frictional heat. The cold air lessens this heat and makes it possible for a tire to last longer in spite of the extra pounding it gets when snow and ice are on the ground.

This rule applies, of course, where the tire is confronted only with the ordinary bad road conditions growing out of snow and ice and frozen highways. But where the motorist must drive his car over rough roads deeply cut into ruts winter presents a decidedly different problem and only the most careful driving will make it possible for him to get a full return on his tire investment.

To those owners whose cars must travel over rutty roads the United States Tire Co. suggests that tires can be saved best by keeping out of the ruts where possible, by driving slowly and carefully, and by keeping the tires inflated to standard pressure.

An especial effort should be made by the driver to keep out of ruts which come above the rim of the tire. Where progress cannot be made except through deep ruts, do not let the tire grind along the sides of the ruts, because the sidewalls of the strongest tires feel quickly the effects of such treatment. An examination of the alignment of the front wheels should be made once a week, because wheels are likely to be thrown out of true by the jogging they get, and bad alignment means tire injury.

HEAD LAMP GLARE CAUSE OF MANY ACCIDENTS

What is the greatest unsolved feature of the automobile today?

Frank B. Ansted, president of the Lexington Motor Co., says it is headlamp glare which is the cause of many accidents, to say nothing of the strain on nerves of car drivers and passengers.

"What the country needs," he says, "is definite, uniform action to regulate this matter that this last undesirable feature of the automobile may be eliminated."

GOODYEAR SALES INCREASE $37,677,600.38 IN 1919

The annual meeting of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., held at the company's offices, Dec. 1, 1919, showed the past year's business the most successful in volume and profits of any year of the company's history. Gross sales for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, amounted to $168,914,982.83, an increase of $37,677,600.38 over the previous year. Net profits, subject to Federal tax were $23,277,245.29, as against $15,388,190.74 for the preceding year.

W. O. Rutherford, vice president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron, O., announces that for the seventh consecutive year the Wm. H. Rankin Co. of New York will handle their advertising business for 1920.

TRAFFIC COPS COMMEND NEW SIGNALLING DEVICE

A mechanical signaling device electrically operated for use on motor vehicles to warn motor car drivers and pedestrians of the intention to turn or stop met with the approval of the St. Louis traffic police when it was demonstrated to them last week by W. J. Stiritz, local distributer, who has established a service station at 1547 North Ninth street.

The signaling set consists of two small aluminum boxes, one of which is attached to the radiator and the other to the left rear fender. Two push buttons are located on the steering column to control white metal hands that indicate the driver's intention of turning left or right. The stop hand, which is also painted white and stands straight up, is automatically controlled by the foot brake.

Each box carries a light which is connected to the lighting system of the car for night driving. By means of slits in a metal cover light is thrown on the hands when in an indicating position. When the hands are down these lights are not illuminated.

The device is made by the Universal Safety Corporation, Decatur, Ill.

Is Your Motor Trucking Done On Faith or Facts?

A WELL-KNOWN banker recently remarked that he quickly gauged the value of a business risk by the completeness of its cost system.

Can you imagine a successful manufacturer pricing his line without knowing freight rates?

Or a merchant guessing at an item representing twenty percent, or fifteen percent, or even one percent of his costs?

Motor trucking costs are as important as any costs in a man's business.

Of the average cost of ice—46 percent is transportation. Of soft drinks—20 percent. Of brick—20 percent. Of bread and pastry—19 percent. Of laundry work—15 percent. Of coal and wood—15 per cent. Of ice cream—14 percent. Of dairy products—12 percent. Of lumber—6 percent. Of groceries and meats—4 percent.

The operating costs of 1700 trucks which were entered in the Packard National Efficiency Test for 1918 and an equal number in the Test for 1919 were kept on the National Standard Cost System—a cost system which is endorsed by leading truck owners throughout the United States for all businesses and all makes of trucks.

The experience of Packard owners with the National Standard Cost System has proved extremely satisfactory because in the long run it has automatically proved the low cost of Packard transportation.

As one of our owners puts it: "Good work comes from a good truck." He should know for he has been operating a 6-ton Packard seven days a week for fifteen months with an average load of 156 eight-gallon cans of milk weighing 13,260 lbs. And has made his National Cost System records as much a part of truck routine as filling with gas and oil.

All truck owners should know how to get the facts. There is a Packard Freight Transportation department at Packard headquarters in this city. Consult them. There is no charge for the service.

SCHOOLS TO SELL RED CROSS SEALS THIS WEEK

Public Institution to Get Supply Tuesday and Parochial Pupils May Buy Friday.

The sale of Red Cross Christmas seals and Santa Claus buttons for the benefit of the St. Louis Tuberculosis Society to school children will take place Tuesday in the public schools and Friday in the parochial schools. This will apply both to the city and to St. Louis County. The seals sell at 1 cent each, and the buttons at 5 cents, though the price to adults is 10 cents.

Some teachers have reported that their pupils demanded the buttons in advance of the beginning of the sale, and a small number of the buttons was released for such children. At Pope School, Laclede and Ewing avenues, the supply originally allotted has already been exhausted.

Mrs. Arthur Lieber is in charge of the sales in the city public schools and Mrs. W. T. Donovan is in charge of parochial school sales in the city. All county school sales are under the direction of Mrs. O. K. Bovard, as general chairman for the county. The sales force in the city schools will consist of about 800 women.

Money to Pay for Meals.

Money raised in the schools will be devoted to paying for meals of those children in the city's three open-air schools who cannot afford to buy their own meals. Three meals a day, six days a week, is part of the system employed at the day open-air schools, and the same sort of diet is provided at the resident open-air schools. The Tuberculosis Society pays about 71 per cent of the cost of meals at the day open-air schools, and maintains the resident open-air school at its own expense, exclusive of teacher and equipment. These are furnished by the Board of Education.

Today is National Health Sunday, established by the National Tuberculosis Association and observed by churches throughout the United States. In St. Louis it has been approved by Archbishop Glennon, Bishop Tuttle, Protestant clergymen and the Jewish churches. In most of the churches special mention of the day and its object will be made from the pulpit. Many of the pastors have asked the Tuberculosis Society for health literature to be distributed among the congregations. Health Sunday is a part of the annual Red Cross Christmas seal campaign.

Special Sales Days.

Continuous sales of the seals and buttons will be held this week, as last week, in the postoffice and branches, and at Union Station. Specail days in addition to those in the schools will be Hotel day, Thursday, under the direction of Mrs. Herman Steinwender; Theater day, Saturday, under Mrs. J. M. Michaels; and Washington University days, Tuesday and Wednesday, under Mmes. Alexander Langsdorf and Chester Chaplin. All the proceeds will be used in fighting tuberculosis in St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Several counties committees, in writing to the Missouri Tuberculosis Association, have announced their determiantion to exceed their quotas in the sale of seals. Henry County, St. Charles County and Cole Coutny are among these.

The Missouri Tuberculosis Association is carrying on school health surveys and such community work as is shown by the surveys to be needed. It is financed by the sale of the seals.

U. OF I. SAID TO HAVE OLDEST SOIL EXPERIMENT FIELD IN U. S.

Plots on Campus Have Been in Use for Crop Tests for Almost 40 Years.

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Dec. 6.—What is said to be the oldest soil experiment field in the United States is on the campus of University of Illinois.

It is within five minutes' walk of the Agricultural College building, and thousands visit the experiment field every year. This oldest field was started by George E. Morrow, who was a professor of agriculture at the university for 17 years, and the fields are known as the Morrow plots. On a part of the field corn has been grown on the same land every year since 1879, on another part corn and oats have been grown in alternation, and on a third part corn, oats and clover have grown in rotation. On an adjoining tract of land 50 additional experimental plots laid out by Dean Eugene Davenport a few months after he came to Illinois in 1895, a five-crop rotation system with corn, oats, wheat, clover and alfalfa is now in operation. At the end of this year the Morrow plots will have been under experiment for 40 years, and one more year will complete a quarter century of carefully conducted investigations and accurately recorded agricultural facts from the more extensive Davenport plots.

PRESIDENT PROPOSES PLAN TO END COAL STRIKE; MINERS' CHIEFS ACCEPT AND CALL MEETING TO RATIFY IT

NOTE TO GERMANY SAYS PROTOCOL MUST BE SIGNED

Failure to Do So Will Be Met by Military Measures, Supreme Council's Ultimatum Declares.

HEAVY GUNS SAID TO BE MOVING UP

Paris Believes Germany Will Sign — Assumed That Americans Would Aid in Forward Movement.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—In a note drafted by the Supreme Council today, it is demanded that Germany sign the protocol providing for the carrying out of the peace terms, failing which the allies, it is set forth, will be obliged to have recourse to military measures.

The text of the reply to the latest communication from Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German Peace Mission, regarding the signing of the protocol, was unanimously adopted by the Supreme Council. Premier Clemenceau presided over the session.

The utmost secrecy is being observed regarding the terms of the note, but it can be said that it is worded so firmly that conference circles expect the discussion with Germany regarding the putting of the treaty into force will be finally closed.

The note recalls that making the treaty effective means the immediate release of the German prisoners. It leaves the reply to the German representatives regarding the claims for the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow to be dealt with in a further special note.

Dutasta to Deliver Note.

Owing to the importance of the note, Paul Dutasta, the general secretary of the peace conference, will personally hand the note to Baron von Lersner, the head of the German mission.

Baron von Lersner's communication, which was received by Premier Clemenceau, Thursday, declared the allies were misinformed regarding their complaint that Germany was exceeding by far the limit of military forces permitted her under the treaty. Von Lersner declared that the German Government had never sought to conceal the fact that the creation of detective police forces and civic guards would be necessary, and that the German Government was prepared to submit proofs to Gen. Nollet, head of the Entente Commission of Control in Berlin, that these organizations were permissable under the treaty.

The text of Premier Clemenceau's note to Von Lersner concerning the excessive German armament complained of which was made public today shows that Germany was charged in addition to the formation of the Reichwehr (imperial defense troops) with organizing the Sicherheitpolizei (security police) and the Zeitfreiwillige (emergency volunteers) which are declared to be virtually military forces. It summons Germany to reduce her forces strictly to the limits of the treaty.

Speculate as to Americans.

Some speculation is being indulged in as to whether the American forces in the occupied region would join in the carrying out of military measures should Germany refuse to sign the protocol. It is learned, however, that this question has not been raised by the allies, who assume that as the armistice is still in force the Americans would take part in any forward movement, with the British on one side and the French on the other.

Notwithstanding the discussion of preparations for the military eventuality, the impression among the peace conference delegates is that Germany will sign the protocol. The view is taken that the German Government, having been waiting for an ultimatum before yielding, will accept the situation now that the ultimatum has been presented and will sign the protocol under duress.

Marshal Foch's military program, according to the Intransigeant is one approved in June, 1919, by the allied commanders, comprising occupation of the Ruhr Basin and Frankfort. The newspaper says that heavy artillery has been going through Strasbourg and across the Rhine since yesterday.

BOARD RULES THAT SILK SHIRTS ARE NOT FOR POLICEMEN

Commissioners Allow Patrolman Only $2 for Apparel Torn From Back by Prisoner.

Silk shirts are not for policemen.

The Police Board has placed its stamp of disapproval on such expensive luxuries, at least, at the expense of the city.

The question arose when Patrolman James Hanson, Carr Street District, made written application to the board to be reimbursed $7.35 for a silk shirt destroyed, he said, "in discharge of police duty."

He reported that while arresting a negro last week his shirt was torn off his back. The arrest being in the line of duty, he said, he believed the board should make good the loss.

The board, in its official entry of the case, says:

"The application is denied. The officer is ordered remunerated $2, a fair price for a used shirt such as should be worn by policemen."

SPRING SKIRTS 'FRANKLY SHORT' ARE DECREED BY STYLE MAKERS

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6.—The style committee of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' Association recommended skirts from three to four inches shorter than at present for the 1920 season, in its report today at the closing session of the annual convention here.

The committee decreed that skirts next season will be from seven to nine inches from the floor for women, and about 10 inches for misses as compared with four to six inches for women and six to eight inches for misses at present.

Skirts, the style makers say, will be "frankly short," but without abbreviation—one thing to be avoided if one wishes to be stylish, is the extreme. Tunic and plaited skirts will be worn. Fullness at the hips will be a feature of many of the smart spring suits.

"Prices of coats, suits and skirts will stay up," said Michael Printz of Cleveland, chairman of the Style Committee.

GIRL CONVICTED OF MURDER

By the Associated Press.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 6.—Miss Maude Moore, a stenographer, was held guilty of murder in the first degree, with mitigating circumstances, by a jury here late today. The jury fixed her sentence at 21 years in the penitentiary. She was charged with the murder of Leroy D. Harth, wealthy young business man, on the night of Sept. 8.

Miss Moore contended that she shot Harth in defense of her life and honor. The tragedy occurred in a secluded spot on a road near Knoxville. The prosecution claimed that robbery was the motive. At the time of his death, Hart wore a diamond ring and had with him about $2000 in cash.

ARMY OF 300,000 FAVORED

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—No provision for compulsory military training will be contained in the army reorganization bill as it comes from the House Military Committee, it was announced today at the committee meeting. Whether this subject will be treated in a measure to be prepared after completion of one establishing the peace-time strength of the regular army has not been decided, members of the committee said.

ST. LOUISANS HOPE ARGUMENTS WILL BRING G. O. P. HERE

41 Men to Lay Advantages Before National Committee at Meeting in Washington Wednesday.

MUST BEAT OUT CHICAGO MONEY

Illinois City Offers $150,000, but Wants Half of Tickets, Distribution of Which Probably Will Be Factor.

Prepared with convincing arguments why St. Louis should be selected as the place for the next Republican National Convention and why Chicago should not be, a delegation of 41 men prominent in business and politics in Missouri departed yesterday at noon on the Pennsylvania railroad for Washington, where the Republican National Committee will meet Wednesday to decide the date and place of the convention.

St. Louis is basing its application for the convention on the ground that the Coliseum is as conveniently located and will seat as many persons as the Chicago convention hall, that St. Louis is more centrally located than is Chicago and is more easy of access to all parts of the United States, that every desirable telegraph and telephone facility is available, that Missouri is a pivotal State and the holding of the convention in St. Louis may throw Missouri into the Republican column, that it would be unfair to other candidates for the presidential nomination to hold the convention in Chicago, the home of Gov. Lowden, one of the candidates, that signed contracts have been entered into by all the leading St. Louis hotels to charge only the usual rates during the convention, that the convention is certain of fair treatment from the St. Louis newspapers.

High Rates in Chicago.

The delegation is prepared to show to the National Committee that Chicago hotels have always charged rates double or treble their usual rates during national political conventions, and that there always has been complaint by party leaders that Chicago newspapers attempted to control the action of the convention by unfair and misleading handling of the news of the convention.

Chicago is offering $150,000 for the convention, and is demanding that at least one-half of convention tickets be distributed to the donors of the $150,000 fund. St. Louis is offering $40,000 to pay the legitimate convention expenses, and is not asking any tickets for the donors of the fund. If the convention comes to St. Louis the only tickets distributed in the city will be by Jacob L. Babler, Republican National Committeeman, who will receive his proportionate share with the other members of the committee.

It is very probable that the selection of the convention city will depend upon this ticket distribution. The St. Louis delegation will contend that if half the convention tickets are distributed in Chicago, the convention hall will be packed with supporters of Gov. Lowden of Illinois, a candidate for President, and that there will at all times prevail in the convention hall an atmosphere which will be prejudicial to the interests of Gen. Wood and other candidates. Such a situation would be impossible in St. Louis, it contends, because the distribution of tickets would be equitable among supporters of all candidates.

Unusual Booklet Prepared.

For the purpose of laying before the National Committee the advantages of St. Louis in a way they can be quickly understood, a very unusual booklet has been prepared by the Chamber of Commerce and the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau. It is illustrated with pictures of the Coliseum and all of the principal hotels, the Coliseum illustrations showing the desirable seating arrangement and the location of committee rooms.

Accompanying a map of the United States, showing the central location of St. Louis and its accessibility from all parts of the United States, is an explanation of the

$117,000,000 PROVIDED FOR PHILANTHROPY AND CHARITY BY FRICK WILL

Park for Pittsburg and Museum and Art Collection for New York Are Among Steel Magnate's Bequests.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 6.—Henry Clay Frick, Pittsburg steel magnate, art collector and philanthropist, in his will admitted to probate here today, provided for bequests for charity and philanthropy amounting to $117,000,000. All of his philanthropies are endowed, and made self-sustaining.

To the city of New York he bequeathed his mansion, possession to be given after his wife dies, and provided for an endowment of $15,000,000, the income of which is to maintain the "Frick collection." To the city of Pittsburg he bequeathed a plot of ground, comprising 151 acres in the residential section of the city, and provided $2,000,000 with which to improve it into a park for the benefit of the public and to help maintain it. He established the art collection and the park to perpetuate the memory of his family.

One of his largest bequests is to the Mercy Hospital, a Catholic institution, although he was not a member of that church. Included in the charitable bequests are contributions to hospitals, to the Newsboys' Home of this city, to Harvard and Princeton Universities and to the Educational Fund Commission.

Summary of Bequests.

A summary of some of the largest bequests follows:

To his wife and family, friends and servants, $25,000,000.

New York mansion to City of New York, $50,000,000.

To charity, $25,000,000.

Endowment for the "Frick collection," $15,000,000.

Endowment for park to Pittsburg, $2,000,000.

Trustees, Princeton University, $15,000,000.

President and Fellows of Harvard, $5,000,000.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $5,000,000.

William Watson Smith, executor, $250,000.

Henry C. McEldowney, executor, $250,000.

Value of land bequeathed for park purposes, $500,000.

Under the provisions of the will, Mrs. Frick is to have a life interest in the Frick mansion, on Fifth avenue, in New York. During her life a New York corporation is to be formed which, after the death of Mrs. Frick, shall take over the mansion and administer it as a gift to the City of New York for a museum. The collection is to include all of his valuable paintings and art treasures.

Divides Estate Into Shares.

After disposing of his chief public and private bequests, Frick directs that the residuary estate, estimated by H. C. Eldowney, one of the executors, to be worth at present values $50,000,000, be divided into 100 shares. He named the institutions which are to receive these shares, each share representing $500,000, as follows:

Educational Fund Commission or its trustees, 10 shares; Children's Hospital, Pittsburgh, one share; Allegheny General Hospital, Pittsburg, one share; Home for Friendless, North Side, Pittsburg, one share; Kingsley House Association, Pittsburg, one share; Mercy Hospital, Pittsburg, 10 shares; Pittsburg Free Dispensary, one share; Pittsburg Newsboys' Home, one share; West Penn Hospital, Pittsburg, one share; Central Y. W. C. A., Pittsburg, one share; Uniontown Hospital, Uniontown, Pa., one share; Cottage State Hospital, Connellsville, Pa., one share; Westmoreland Hospital, Greensburg, Pa., one share; Mount Pleasant Memorial Hospital, Mount Pleasant, Pa., one share; Braddock General Hospital, Braddock, Pa., one share; Homestead Hospital, Homestead, Pa., one share; trustees, Princeton University, 30 shares; president and fellows of Harvard College, Cambridge, 10 shares; Massachusetts Insitute of Technology, 10 shares; Society of Lying-In Hospital of New York City, three shares.

The remaining 13 shares are left to the financier's daughter, Helen C. Frick, and her heirs.

Estate to Pay All Taxes.

In event of any of the institutions named being unable to accept the gift, the bequest is to revert to Helen C. Frick.

The shares bequeathed are all to be used as permanent endowment, the principal to be kept invested and the income to be applied to the purpose of the gift. All taxes are to be paid out of the residuary estate.

The executors of the will are named as follows: Adelaide H. C. Frick, Helen C. Frick, Childs Frick, Henry C. McEldowney and William Watson Smith. The last two are of Pittsburg, Smith being counsel for Frick. No commission is to be paid to Mrs. Frick and the Frick children for serving as executors. McEldowney and Smtih are to be paid a lump sum each of $250,000 upon final settlement of the estate, this sum to be in lieu of all other commissions.

On the death of Mrs. Frick or her election to relinquish the New York mansion as a residence, the entire property is left to a corporation to be formed to maintain a "gallery of art" on the property for "encouraging and developing the study of fine arts, and of advancing the general knowledge of kindred subjects."

The trustees are directed immediately to form the corporation under the laws of New York State, to be known as "The Frick Collection." The corporation is to maintain in the New York mansion a "public gallery of art." Until the corporation is completed the art collection is to be held in trust by Mrs. Frick, Miss Helen Frick, Childs Frick, the son, and George F. Baker, Jr., J. Horace Harding, Walker D. Hines, Lewis Cass Ledyard, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Horace Havemeyer. Fifteen million dollars are left in trust to the same persons for the maintenance and improvement of the Frick art collection, house and grounds.

Daughter to Distribute $6,500,000.

It was said to have been Frick's intention to distribute to public, charitable and educational institutions all of the 100 shares of the residuary estate. Not having made provision for 13 remaining undecided upon his death, it was Frick's intention to have his daughter arrange for the dispensing of them. In consequence, Miss Helen Frick is bequeathed them—valued at about $6,500,000—to do with as she sees fit. No restrictions are placed on her by the will.

The will expressed the fullest possible confidence and trust in Frick's immediate family, and fullest possible leeway is given them throughout the entire document. Trustees and executors ordered appointed to handle his estate enjoy a like confidence and lack of restriction of action pertaining to their duties. All rights and powers, discretionary or otherwise, imposed on trustees and executors shall devolve on their successors without hindrance, the will provides.

Frick directed that his executors file no inventory of his estate with the Registrar of Wills. Any interest in his estate which fails to be effectively disposed of is to revert to Miss Helen Frick.

A striking paragraph in the document, expressive of the cordiality of the relations of Frick with his wife and children, reads: "It is due to my wife, my daughter and my son that I should express the complete confidence, which I feel, that they will cordially co-operate in bringing about the realization of my wishes as expressed in this, my will."

The minor bequests made to friends and servants were not announced.

JUDGE CALLS HALT AFTER RELEASING 26 FIRMS' WHISKY

Announces He Will Admit No More Intervenors to Suit in Which Injunction Was Issued.

SAYS HE IS "SICK OF WHOLE BUSINESS"

Others May Bring Separate Suits — Three Firms Sell Liquor Worth $395,000 in One Day.

To attorneys who besieged his office with petitions in behalf of clients who have whisky to sell and wanted his order permitting them to sell it, Federal Judge Faris indicated yesterday that thereafter he would be disposed to admit no further interventions in the injunction suit which he decided Friday in favor of distillers.

At 5 p. m. he had admitted 26 retailers and wholesalers as intervenors. The alternative for others whose petitions to intervene may be denied would be an independent suit, which might cause delay in their authorization to offer their wares.

At the end of the day, Judge Faris said to a reported that he was "sick and tired of the whole business."

Meanwhile St. Louisans fast are dispatching the visible supply of whisky in the hands of those dealers authorized to sell it.

The Post-Dispatch yesterday inquired of the five distillers named in the original petition for a temporary injunction how much of their stocks they had sold since Friday afternoon when Judge Faris signed the decree releasing the whisky.

In their petitions the five had valued their stocks on hand at $415,530. Three of the five said that, in a little more than 24 hours, their sales had totaled $395,000. One said that it had obtained $250,000 for 8000 gallons of whisky and 6000 gallons of wine. The other two said that they were "too busy" to check up.

Much of the stocks was taken by saloonkeepers. However, their customers attacked it with the same eagerness which they themselves had placed at distillers'. Last night, though unpleasant as to the weather, had many of the aspects of celebration nights. Bartenders who had doffed their aprons on June 30 donned them again. In many of the larger downtown saloons customers found use for elbows in getting to the bars. Whisky seemed the universal drink.

By the rules of the Regional Coal Committee, 5 o'clock was the closing hour. In many cases saloon men continued open by the light of lamps and candles. In many other cases, they simply continued open. Owl cars once more were filled with roisterers.

Inebriates, Hysteria Victims and Plain "Drunks" Keep Police Busy.

Inebriates, hysteria victims and plain "drunks" drifted into Central Police Headquarters last night, the first Saturday night since the lifting of the wartime whisky ban. A total of 21 persons had been booked at headquarters at 10:30 p. m. Police reports indicated a "wild night" all over the city. Fuel Administration instructions against the lighting of saloons were being disregarded, the reports said.

Fifteen persons were taken to the inebriate ward in the old city hall. Four became patients at the city hospital. One of these was a woman, whose hair hung down her back in the absence of hat, which she had lost. Three men were given temporary lodging in the Central District holdover.

Among those in the holdover was Manuel Warden, 19 years old, Terre Haute, Ind., world war veteran recently returned from France, who told the police that when he arrived in town at 5 p. m. he had $101 and transportation to Fort Bliss, Tex., where he was to be discharged. When he was picked up in a Market street saloon at 10 p. m. he had two or three dimes and a picture of his father. He said an "Indian rolled him."

Hines Asks Public to Avoid Travel on Trains Wherever Possible

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.

WARNING to the public that railway travel will be "difficult and unsatisfactory," until the coal strike emergency has passed, and should be avoided wherever possible, was issued tonight by Director-General Hines of the Railway Administration. Many trains are to be taken off to conserve coal, parlor car service is to be sharply curtailed, and persons forced to undertake journeys should consult railroad agents as to available trains before arranging their plans, the statement said.

STILL FOUND IN RAID AT 1125 LOCUST ST.

Five Men Arrested and Kegs of Liquor Taken in Rooming House.

A squad of police led by Lieut. Kirk who raided the rooming house at 1125 Locust street at 2 o'clock this morning, found an illicit still in operation in the basement.

Faust Salavina, who has been conducting the house, and five other men, who were playing cards in a rear room on the first floor, were arrested.

The police, approaching the house quietly on foot, forced the front door and seized Salavina and ordered the other men to remain seated. They went to the basement and found the still in operation. Under a copper boiler was a pan half filled with liquor. Gas was burning under the boiler. There were two 50-gallon kegs apparently filled with liquor and 4 barrels of mash. There were also many bottles and jugs.

Salavina, who is 22 years old, said he came here from Bear Creek, Mont., a month ago. He said the liquor was not whisky, but Italian wine. He denied that he made it and refused to say how it came into his possession.

HEAD OF ILLINOIS MINERS HELD ON FEDERAL CONTEMPT CHARGE

Farrington Also Charged With Violating Injunction Against Continuance of Strike.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 6.—Frank Farrington, president of the United Mine Workers of Illinois, was arrested at his home here tonight by United States Marshal Vincent T. Dallman on a warrant charging contempt of court. Farrington was also charged with violating the injunction issued by Judge A. B. Anderson at Indianapolis against continuance of the strike. After his arrest Farrington was taken before Federal Commissioner Harvey Culp, who fixed his bond at $10,000. Attorneys for Farrington left tonight for Bloomington, Ill., to attempt to obtain a writ of habeas corpus from Federal District Judge Fitzhenry. Pending their appeal to Judge Fitzhenry, Farrington was held here in the custody of Marshal Dallman.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Dec. 7.—At 1:45 o'clock this (Sunday) morning, Federal Judge Fitzhenry issued a writ of habeas corpus for Frank Farrington.

PITTSBURG, Kan., Dec. 7.—Alexander Howat, president of the United Mine Workers of district 14, was arrested by a Deputy United States Marshal last night and was taken to Fort Scott this morning on a 12:50 train to give bond.

YOUTH SLAIN BY ROBBERS IN EAST ST. LOUIS SALOON

Lester Knight, Son of Commission Dealer, Shot at 18th and St. Clair.

Lester Knight, 21 years old, employed by his father, Carl C. Knight, in the commission business at the National Stock Yards, was shot in the head by two robbers who entered the saloon of William Parridy, Eighteenth street and St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, early this morning. He died at the St. Mary's Hospital.

Knight resided near Collinsville and Ohio avenues in East St. Louis.

There were 20 customers in the saloon at the time. They were ordered to face the wall and to turn one at a time and place their valuables on a table. When this was done one of the men said that they intended to walk from the place and warned the customers not to follow them. Knight started to run out of the saloon and was shot down.

LEADERS TO VOTE ON PLAN TUESDAY AT INDIANAPOLIS

President Lewis and Secretary Green, in Conference With Palmer and Tumulty at Washington, Agree to Urge Men to Accept Compromise Offer.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL TO GO TO INDIANAPOLIS

Nature of Wilson's Proposal Not Made Known, but Government Officials Indicate That Acceptance Is Expected.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Attorney-General Palmer announced early this (Sunday) morning that an agreement was reached here yesterday between Government Officials and John L. Lewis, acting President, and William Green, Secretary-Treasurer of the United Mine Workers, under which a compromise proposal for termination of the coal strike will be submitted to a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mine Workers at Indianapolis next Tuesday.

The compromise, which is not described in the statement, was proposed by President Wilson "looking to a speedy termination of the strike situation and adjustment of the entire controversy," the statement says. Lewis and Green will urge acceptance of the proposal.

The Attorney-General's statement follows:

"A conference was held at the Department of Justice in Washington on Saturday, at which were present the Attorney-General, Mr. Tumulty, secretary to the President; John L. Lewis, acting president, and William Green, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, with a view to reaching an understanding between the Government and the miners which would result in a settlement of the coal strike situation.

Proposal From President.

"At this conference there was submitted a definite, concrete proposition from the President looking to a speedy termination of the strike situation and an adjustment of the entire controversy. The officers of the United Mine Workers, in response to the suggestion of the President, agreed to and have called a meeting of the General Scale Committee, the representatives of all the district organizations and the international executive board of the United Mine Workers, to be held in Indianapolis on Tuesday, Dec. 9, at 2 o'clock p. m., at which time the President's proposal will be considered and its acceptance by the miners urged by Mr. Lewis and Mr. Green. The Attorney-General will be in Indianapolis on Tuesday."

The fact that Attorney-General Palmer talked with President Wilson in the course of the day on the coal situation was known, but no intimation of the nature of the conference was obtainable either from Palmer, prior to his announcement, or at the White House.

Acceptance Expected.

When the announcement was made, officials would not comment as to the nature of the proposals to be submitted at Indianapolis. The text of the statement as well as the general atitude of Government officials indicated clearly, however, that acceptance by the miners was anticipated.

The announcement came as a complete surprise, as Government offi-

INQUIRY BEGUN INTO MANNER OF JENKINS' RELEASE

Man Reported to Have Furnished Bail Is Said to Be Associated With Mexican Official.

TENSION IN OFFICIAL CIRCLES RELIEVED

Resolution Requesting Break With Carranza Likely to Be Held Up Pending Developments.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 6.—J. Salter Hansen, who furnished the bond of $500 for the release of William O. Jenkins, American Consular Agent at Puebla, arrived at Mexico City about 10 days ago. He conferred with Secretary of the Treasury Cabrera, it is understood, relative to the Mexican loan. Later he went to Puebla and negotiated Consul Jenkins' bail. Hansen said on his return to Mexico City that his action had been entirely voluntary. He was reticent regarding his mission to Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Developments today left it still in doubt whether Mexican officials really complied with the request of the United States in releasing William O. Jenkins, the American Consular Agent whose imprisonment at Puebla brought relations between the two Governments to a critical pass.

Press dispatches that the release was accomplished only after bail had been furnished were not covered in official advices to the State Department, which said that Jenkins had reported himself entirely ignorant of the manner in which he was liberated, and that he was making an investigation on his own account.

Upon the answer to this question seems to hinge whether the sharp diplomatic correspondence on the subject is to be renewed, or the incident permitted to pass into history.

Much of Tension Relieved.

Meantime the fact of the release itself apparently has relieved much of the tension of Mexican affairs both at the State Department and in the Senate, where uneasiness over recent developments had produced a determined move towards a severance of diplomatic relations.

The resolution of Senator Fall, Republican, New Mexico, requesting a diplomatic break, was considered at an afternoon conference of Republican members of the Foreign Relations Committee, and it was decided not to press the proposal for action until President Wilson had sent to the committee the memorandum of advice he promised Senator Fall yesterday at the White House conference.

It was indicated that there was some difference of opinion among the Republican Senators as to the expediency of the resolution and that if the President expressed disapproval it might not be pressed for action. The full committee will meet again Monday.

In trying to establish the facts behind Jenkins' release, the State Department is running down a suspected connection between J. Salter Hansen, said to have furnished bail for the Consular Agent, and the Mexican Government. Officials said Hansen was reported to have had some association with Luis Cabrera, Carranza's Finance Minister, and that bail might have been forwarded to Puebla as the least embarrassing method by which the Mexico City officials could extricate themselves from the situation.

Still Waiting for Reply.

While the department's investigation is proceeding, officials here still are waiting for Carranza's reply to the last American request for Jenkin's release. Reports some days ago indicated that it was in preparation, but tonight it had not been received at the department.

The State Department issued the following statement regarding the release of Jenkins:

"American Consular Agent Jenkins, at Puebla, has reported that he was released from the penitentiary at midnight, Dec. 4, but that he was not advised regarding the reasons for his release. It is evident from Mr. Jenkins' report that he had no knowledge of bail being furnished. The department is investigating the facts regarding the furnishing of bail and at whose instance it was furnished."

Carranza Warns Mexican Governors of Intervention Possibility.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The conference of Mexican Governors on Dec. 20, is said by advices from Mexico City to have been called by President Carranza with the word that it was imperative to pacify the country if American intervention were not ultimately to be expected. A plan will be outlined at the meeting for the organization in all the Mexican states of rurales, home guards and militia, it was added. Those hostile to Carranza profess to see a purpose to place Mexico on a war footing so far as possible and to make the unpacified condition of Mexico so apparent as to warrant a suspension of the presidential elections next July.

FUEL ORDERS MODIFIED FOR SMALL RETAILERS

They May Remain Open After 5 P. M. Without Heat, Electricity or Gas—Display Signs Must Be Dark by 6 P. M.

New fuel-saving orders were issued yesterday by the Regional Coal Committee, in view of the daily decrease in the city's coal supply and the lack of any prospect that the mines of Southern Illinois, on which St. Louis and adjoining communities depend for fuel, will reopen at an early date.

At the same time the committee made an effort to lessen the hardship on the smaller retail dealers in residence districts by a modification in the rules which will permit them to keep their places open after 5 p. m. by the use of candles or oil lamps, and without keeping up heat.

The committee's new rules, the first of which applies chiefly to communities outside St. Louis, are:

To officials of all municipalities throughout the southwestern region: You are hereby requested to discontinue immediately any white way or other unnecessary street lighting, both gas and electric lights, throughout your city.

To all users of gas or electric light display advertising, including billboard advertisers, southwestern region: You are hereby directed to discontinue use of gas or electric current for operation or display of such signs, except during period between sunset and 6 p. m. daily.

All retail store business hours (except drug stores) are restricted from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily, except Mondays and Saturdays, when they are permitted to remain open from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. Window lights shall not burn during the day until sunset, with the exception of lights in show windows 12 feet back from the sidewalk, where it is essential in order to light the entrance to buildings. All show-window lights must be turned out daily at specified closing time.

Any retail establishment coming under this ruling may remain open at other hours than above specified if not using gas or electric light, and also not using heat or powder produced by gas, electricity, coal or coke, in excess of such amount as is necessary to prevent freezing of water pipes or sprinkler systems.

Garage Trade Limited.

To the automobile trade:

All automobile salesrooms, service stations and shops; all accessory and supply stores; all tire stores and tire service businesses, and all battery stores and battery service businesses should be closed at 5 p. m. each day, and not opened before 9 a. m. the next morning. The 9 p. m. exception for Monday and Saturday nights does not apply to automobile or gasoline concerns.

Public garages will be permitted to operate as usual, using as little heat and light as possible, but in justice to regular stores and shops which are compelled to close at 5 p. m., the garages must not sell tires, accessories or supplies for automobiles after 5 p. m. nor any gasoline after 6 p. m., or do mechanical work.

Public gasoline filling stations, or garage filling stations, and their tanks, may sell gasoline between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. each day, and at no other time.

R. E. Lee, as automobile deputy for the Coal Committee, notified several automobile and gasoline concerns, which were open last evening, that the Saturday and Monday exception does not apply to them.

Electric Signs Off at 6 P. M.

The new rule regarding electric signs will cut off this form of illumination three hours earlier than before, as the time for turning off the signs has been 9 p. m.

The permission to retailers to keep their places open without the use of gas or electric current, or active heating, was given reply to complaints from the smaller retailers in nearly all parts of the city. The latest protest of this kind came from the South Jefferson Avenue Business Men's Association. A resolution passed by this body said that the enforcement of the order meant "financial ruin and bankruptcy" to the members.

Protest of Retailers.

"Most of our business is done during the evening hours," the resolution said. "We are compelled, under this order, to suffer all the loss, while the large downtown merchant has but one-half hour cut off. We respectfully recommend that all business establishments eliminate all unnecessary light and heat, especially window lights and electric signs, which are even now allowed to burn in the daytime in the downtown section, and thus make the burden fall on all business establishments equally and equitably."

Chairman Greenlaw of the Regional Committee was asked last evening as to a survey being made of coal held in stock by large concerns, in excess of 1000 tons each. He said such a survey had been made, and that stocks of more than 1000 tons had been found, but he said there was no present intention of taking measures to confiscate any such supply.

Policemen yesterday reported 514 violations, Friday evening and night, of the 5 p. m. closing order. About 40 per cent of the violations were by saloonkeepers.

Saloon Men Plan Petition.

Saloonkeepers are planning to circulate a petition asking that the Regional Committee change the opening and closing hours for saloons so that they may be permitted to open at some fixed hour in the afternoon and remain open eight hours, to have the benefit of the evening trade.

In response to the committee's request for the holding of union community services by churches, a few such services have been announced for tonight. The various churches will hold the usual morning services and Sunday schools. The places of union meetings tonight and the other congregations taking part in each will be:

At Central Presbyterian, Delmar and Clara—Pilgrim Congregational, Westminster Presbyterian and Union Avenue Christian.

At Church of the Redeemer, Washington and Euclid—Second Baptist, St. John's Methodist and Second Presbyterian.

At Maple Avenue Methodist, Maple and Belt—West Presbyterian.

In addition to the cuts in train schedules announced by the Frisco, Missouri Pacific, M., K. & T. and Cotton Belt roads, the Wabash (west) has announced the following curtailment, effective at midnight tonight: The St. Louis-Moberly accommodation trains leaving at 7:20 a. m., and 5 p. m., will be discontinued. St. Louis-Kansas City train now leaving at 9:03 a. m., will leave at 8 a. m., and arrive at Kansas City at 6 p. m., making stops formerly made by the 7:20 St. Louis-Moberly train. Train for Des Moines and Omaha, now leaving at 7:30 p. m., will leave at 5 p. m., arriving at Omaha at 10 a. m., making stops now made by the 5 p. m., St. Louis-Moberly train.

County Prisoners Dig Coal.

Prisoners from the St. Clair County workhouse, at Belleville, were taken in a county truck yesterday to a strip mine near Millstadt, and dug out two truck loads of coal for use of the county institutions. Deputy Sheriffs acted as guards. The county pays 8 cents a bushel for the coal, and the prisoners will be kept at work as long as the coal is procurable.

The Belleville public schools have been closed for lack of coal, and the parochial schools are expected to close within a week. The Belleville Township High School, which has a fuel supply, will cut the school day one hour, beginning tomorrow.

The Free Methodist Church, on East Main street, Belleville, is out of fuel, and will hold no service today. The Belleville public library will not be open today, and will close at 6 p. m. on weekdays. All window lights in stores are forbidden.

Miners Vote to Buy Opera House.

At a meeting of the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors yesterday, Peter Gaerdner of Belleville offered a resolution favoring an increase of 31 per cent for the coal strikers. The resolution was not voted upon, as other members held it was not within the board's powers.

The three local unions of miners in O'Fallon, near Belleville, have voted to purchase the Taylor Opera House as a place of free entertainment for miners during the strike period. The building was held at $31,000, and it was decided to assess each miner 50 cents a month, with a veiw to completing the purchase within five years. The locals have 625 members.

Sheriff Little of Madison County arranged today to take prisoners from the Edwardsville jail tomorrow to take coal out of a mine near that place, for the use of the jail and county institutions. The coal is already mined, and will simply be hoisted and loaded by the prisoners.

The Edwardsville courthouse was without heat yesterday. The N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co. resumed work, with oil burners under the boilers.

Work on Mine Shaft Resumed.

In the Bohm Building, Edwardsville, the water has been turned off, at night, to keep the pipes from freezing. Someone left a faucet open while the water was off, and when the water was turned on again yesterday morning, a room over a bakery was flooded, and the plastered ceiling of the bakery fell into the bins where bread and cake were being mixed, ruining the food.

Work was resumed yesterday on the sinking of the new Donk shaft at Edwardsville. The men are to be paid on the basis of 14 per cent over the former wage scale in any case, and will get a higher increase if the final settlement calls for it.

The Alton power plant, supplying electric current to so-called nonessential industries, has obtained permission of the Utilities Commission to run with oil burners. This will avert the closing of these establishments, which pay $500,000 wages monthly.

CROWN PRINCE RENEWS LEASE

THE HAGUE, Dec. 6.—The former German Crown Prince has renewed the lease on his house at Wieringen until next spring.

GARFIELD WILL PERMIT NO HIGHER PRICE TO PUBLIC

cials had not made known the fact that the union leaders had been called into conference or that new proposals were under consideration. The presence of Lewis and Green in this city was rumored during the day, but the report could not be confirmed.

Fuel Administrator Garfield indicated after the announcement that he did not know that the conference had been held.

"I have no knowledge of any compromise proposal to settle the coal strike," he said. "That is all I can say at this time."

Efforts to find Lewis and Green following the announcement of the Attorney General were without success. No information as to their movements could be obtained at the hotel were they have stayed heretofore, and officials of the American Federation of Labor apparently were not aware that they were in the city during the day.

Garfield Against Higher Prices.

Early in the evening Fuel Administrator Garfield had announced that the strike could not be compromised in any fashion that would mean an advance in the price of coal to the public.

"The Cabinet stands back of me on the principle involved," Dr. Garfield said, "though I am responsible for the presentation of the facts which moved their decision."

Declaring himself "sick and tired of proposals to make the people bear additional burdens," Dr. Garfield said the Fuel Administration alone had authority to increase coal prices necessary to pay wage advances in excess of the 14 per cent, proposed by the Government. So long as he was Fuel Administrator, he said, no advance in the price to the consumer for this purpose would be allowed.

Compromise Proposals Made.

The Fuel Administration's statement was made after a day spent in hearing compromise proposals from delegations of business men and others from various parts of the country. Using the most emphatic language, Dr. Garfield left no doubt he regarded compromise proposals as a "monkey wrench" thrown into machinery which he believes will operate to adjust the situation with justice both to the public and the mine workers.

The position of the Government is that no wage advance in excess of 14 per cent is possible under the price of $2.35 per ton, mine run, fixed on coal by the Fuel Administrator. At the same time, it was pointed out that the Government had no authority to fix wages, and that no objection could be interposed if operators favorably situated agreed to pay more than the 14 per cent advance from their own profit without charging the increase to the public. It is not the opinion in the Fuel Administration, however, that enough mines to supply the country with coal can be operated on this basis.

Discussing restrictions imposed in the use of coal, Dr. Garfield said tonight that local differences in the severity of the application of the curtailment orders soon would disappear under measures now being taken by the Railroad Administration, which is acting as the Fuel Administrator's agent in distributing coal. He said, further, that the production of coal had increased every day this week, and indicated his belief that a majority of miners would sooner or later accept the settlement basis which the union leaders have rejected.

Another step was taken today by the Fuel Administration to restrict coal consumption by resuming the fixed prices on coke established during the war period. Distribution of coke also will be regulated. Gas coke, however, will not be affected.

Palmer Confers With Wilson.

While Dr. Garfield was conferring with delegations today and receiving numerous telegrams suggesting a compromise in the strike situation, Attorney-General Palmer conferred with President Wilson on the general coal situation, and took steps to prosecute oil producers in the West who are charged in a complaint made by Senator Capper of Kansas, with increasing the price of oil from $1 to $4.50 a barrel since the inception of the coal strike.

At the same time the Railroad Administration announced an embargo on oil, effective Monday, which is designed to make available a full supply for industries in the West and thus make it necessary to haul less coal to that section from the East. Factories in the East using oil may obtain their supply as heretofore through a permit system and shipments in transit or on order will not be affected.

Reports on coal production served to increase the optimism of officials handling the fuel situation. Additional mines were said to be in operation now and production was steadily increasing, though it continues less than half of normal.

Figures made public today by the Geological Survey showed that, despite the Thanksgiving Day lay off, miners remaining at work since the strike began produced 5,429,000 tons during the week ended Nov. 29. This was about 45 per cent of normal and 1 per cent greater than the output the week before, when the men worked the full six days.

Total production from the beginning of the strike on Nov. 1 to the end of November was placed at 18,815,000 tons, compared with 56,270,0000 tons in October, or about 33 1-3 per cent. The October production, however, was greater than the average, as the mines were operated at full time throughout the week preceding the strike, when coal cars were rushed to the mines as rapidly as possible.

No Delay in Paying for Coal.

Charges of the American Wholesale Coal Dealers' Association that the Railroad Administration was refusing to pay for coal confiscated or diverted, were denied at administration headquarters. Officials there said there had been some delay in making payments, but that this had been obviated by the plan of arranging credits through the Federal reserve banks.

The wholesale association, in its statement said none of the coal taken by the railroads had been paid for because the Railroad Administration did not consider the price fixed by Dr. Garfield as a fair one and that unless payments were made all of the mines would have to close down within a week. Railroad Administration officials denied that the Government fixed prices had been questioned by them.

Requests from European Governments that the embargo against coal exports be lifted were received today by officials. A representative of the French Government laid the case of France before the Central Coal Committee, while Swiss representatives described to Dr. Garfield the urgency of the coal requirements of Switzerland during the next three months.

It was said authoritatively that there was no likelihood of the export ban being lifted until the crisis in this country had passed.

Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, introduced a resolution today asking the Secretary of the Treasury to inform the Senate regarding the income and profits of coal operators during 1917 and 1918, as shown by their income tax returns. The measure went over under the rules.

The Railroad Administration agreed to-night on representations from Illinois to increase the amount of coal for that State by about 600 cars a day, out of an increase of 1,500 cars a day to the Central, Western and Northwestern region. One hundred cars will go to sections outside Chicago.

EMPRESS EUGENIE WANDERS THROUGH TUILERIES GARDENS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 6.—With bowed head and with face of infinite sadness, a modestly dressed old lady was seen walking through Tuileries gardens yesterday. As she walked she stopped to pick autumn flowers, seared and blasted by the cold, but no more faded than her cheeks. Passerby seeing her and knowing the regulations of the park, expected some policemen to admonish her, but she passed on followed by a single maid, unchecked by the uniformed representative of the law.

It was the once proud Empress Eugenie, who bowed beneath the weight of 93 winters, thus plucked withered flowers from a garden that was once hers. She was revisiting a scene recalling the happiness, sorrow and terror, which came to her during the years she was the chiefest jewel of the old palatial mansion.

Empress Eugenie left France on July 23, the fateful day when the then proud and haughty Austria sent an ultimatum to Serbia which was destined to dismember realms and change the whole face of history. She is in close seclusion in her apartments, refusing to meet any newspapermen and seeing only a few of her old friends.

BARTON COUNTY MINES BEING PUMPED FOR DIGGING TODAY

Engineers Employed by State Preparing for Coal Production by Hundreds of Volunteers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 6.—Engineers in the employ of the State were pumping water out of the coal pits at Oskaloosa, Minden and Liberal, in Barton County today, in preparation for the beginning of operations Sunday. Gov. Gardner received telegrams today announcing the reopening of several mines, large and small, in Franklin, Callaway, Monileau and Johnson counties.

Approximately 200 volunteer workers will leave Kansas City on a special train tonight for Oskaloosa and will report to Col. E. M. Stayton for work tomorrow. Blankets and tents to house the workmen have been shipped from Kansas City and St. Louis National Guard depots.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OSKALOOSA, Mo., Dec. 6.—The Third Battalion of the Seventh Regiment, from Kansas City, arrived here today in charge of Col. T. M. Murphy, who at once took command of the regiment. The battalion began guard over eight mines between here and Burgess.

Men were working the pumps at two of the strip pits near here today. All of the pits are filled with water. In many instances the miners, when they went on strike took parts of the machinery with them and all of this must be replaced, the pipes thawed and the pits pumped before the men begin digging.

MAN SERIOUSLY STABS RELATIVE

Victim Says Fight Was Result of Old Dispute Over $3.

Roy White, 33 years old, of 1116 Gano avenue, was arrested last night for stabbing his brother-in-law, William Windehorst, 37, a painter, with whom he lives. Windehorst is at the City Hospital in a serious condition, having been cut three times about the neck and back.

The affair followed an argument about $3, Windehorst said, which had been going on for three or four months. White declared that he stabbed Windehorst because he thought he was about to draw a knife.

strategic position of the city as a convention city.

On another page is a diagram showing the 25 steam and four electric railways entering St. Louis. Complete information as to the Coliseum is given with figures showing that it can be arranged to seat 13,000 persons, which is 800 more than could be seated in the Chicago convention hall at the Republican National Convention in 1916.

Facsimile letters from the managers of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., the Kinloch Telephone Co., the Western Union Telegraph Co. and the Postal Telegraph Co., promising ample telephone and telegraph facilities are given, as well as letters from Mayor Kiel and business organizations inviting the committee to hold the convention in St. Louis.

Hotel Rates Compiled.

Another unusual feature is a compilation of hotel rates. The Convention Bureau has signed contracts from each of the hotels, giving the numbers of the rooms reserved for the convention and the rate which will be charged for each room. These accommodations set out in the pamphlet, giving not the capacity of the hotels, but the number of persons for whom reservations will be made for the convention, and the average rate to be charged by the hotels for the rooms reserved, are: American and American Annex, 660 persons, average rate, $3.39 a day; Bonair, 60, $4.33; Hamilton, 156, $2.50; Jefferson, 634, $4.20; Majestic, 250, $2.50; Marion Roe, 125, $2.50; Marquette, 718, $2.71; Maryland, 416, $2.60; New Laclede, 130, $1.58; New Plaza, 100, $1.87; Planters, 1204, $2.96; Pontiac, 80, $1; Roselle, 40, $3, American plan; Sinton, 40, $1.50; Statler, 800, $3.36; Stratford, 40, $1.12; Terminal, 100, $3; Warwick, 294, $2.64; Washington, 100, $2.25; Westgate, 70, $2, and Windemere, 52, $2.60.

Editorials and news articles from St. Louis newspapers showing how other conventions have been handled are given in the pamphlet, and there is given a record of humidity in St. Louis during the month of June for the last five years, showing that humidity in St. Louis has been lower than in Chicago, New York, Seattle, Boston, Buffalo and San Francisco.

Personnel of Party.

Those in the party for Washington, including a number of delegates to a meeting of the Mississippi Valley Association, who will remain over to boost for St. Louis for the convention, are:

Mayor Kiel, J. L. Babler, Republican National Committeeman from Missouri; G. A. Buder, Paul V. Bunn, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; R. L. Bursch, representing the Advertising Club of St. Louis; R. D. Corlett, Brown Shoe Co.; W. L. LLOYD GEORGE OPPOSED TO RENEWED PARTY DISTINCTIONS

Premier Points to U. S., Where, He Says, Party Strife Jeopardized Peace.

By the Associated Press.

MANCHESTER, England, Dec. 6.—Premier Lloyd George, speaking before the Reform Club, totally rejected the suggestion that the time had arrived for a renewal of party distinction by Liberals and Conservatives.

He pointed to the experiences of the United States, where, he said, party strife had been renewed prematurely, in consequence of which peace was jeopardized and the league of nations endangered in the land which took the most prominent and distinguished part in its promotion. The Premier evoked a storm of applause when he announced "I am a free trader."

Referring to Ireland, he declared he hoped to make a real contribution to settlement of the Irish question, the Unionists being prepared to make great sacrifices in order to preserve national unity.

CASHIER SHOT AND BEATEN, PAYROLL OF $1700 TAKEN

Two Men Hide in Doorway at Jersey Farm Dairy Co. Office and Hold Up Man, 69 Years Old.

ROBBERS ESCAPE IN AUTOMOBILE

John X. Klodt, Though Wounded, Pursued Men and Tried to Hold to Company's Money.

Two men who hid in a vestibuled doorway at the office of the Jersey Farm Dairy Co., 1007 Russell avenue, stole a valise containing between $1700 and $1800 payroll money from John X. Klodt, cashier of the company, at 11:45 a. m. yesterday, after striking him on the head and shooting him in the left arm. They escaped in an automobile which they had left standing at Menard street and Allen avenue, a block and a half away.

Women witnesses said that after jumping into the automobile each man put on a different hat and overcoat from the ones he had worn when the robbery was committed.

Pursued the Robbers.

Though wounded and suffering from the blow on the head, Klodt, 69 years old, pursued the men half a block west to Menard street. Other employes joined in the chase.

The money stolen was the weekly payroll for 42 employes in the factory department of the company. There are three paydays each week for employes in different departments and it was Klodt's custom to use a buggy to bring the money from the Lafayette-South Side Bank.

When Klodt stepped from the buggy at the office entrance no one was in sight. The robbers, concealed in the vestibule, attacked him as he opened the outer door. One struck him on the head with a weapon and the other shot him. The bullet passed through his left arm and buried itself in the woodwork of the vestibule.

Tried to Fight Back.

Despite his injury Klodt held on to the valise and tried to fight back, but one of the men jerked the valise from his hand and the two ran west on Russell avenue.

Several women in the neighborhood saw the men jump into the automobile and drive north. No one had waited for them in the machine, but they had left the engine running.

FIVE FEDERAL JUDGES TO BE GUESTS OF BAR ASSOCIATION

Question of Taking Early Action Toward Changes in Election Laws Will Be Considered.

Judges Sanborn, Hook, Stone and Munger of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and District Judge R. E. Lewis of Denver, will be guests of the Bar Association of St. Louis at its meeting at the University Club tomorrow night. Besides the guests, Shepard Barclay, Chester H. Krum and Marion C. Early, president of the association, are to speak.

The question of taking early action toward changes in the election laws, particularly the primary law, will be considered, and it is expected that a committee will be named to prepare recommendations for the Legislature of 1921. The question of a new State Constitution will also be considered.

DICE GAME IN CELLAR RAIDED

Sheriff Arrests Three Men in Place Under Saloon.

A dice game in the cellar of a saloon at LeMay Ferry and Military roads was raided at 7:30 o'clock last night by Sheriff Bopp and a deputy. Edward Krueger, 116 South Eighth street, Luxemburg, the saloon keeper who is said to have operated the game; Arthur Meine, at the same address, and Robert Baker, 2513½ St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, were arrested.

Dice paraphernalia and $128 was taken. About 20 persons are said to have been in the game.

Bopp gained entrance to the cellar through the back door after knocking down a "lookout" man. He visited the place Friday night and saw the paraphernalia. There were no players present then. Bopp says that professional gamblers are visiting St. Louis county resorts Saturday and Sunday nights and fleecing the players.

REDS EXECUTE CZAR'S SLAYER

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Dec. 6.—The Soviet authorities in Russia have punished by death the individual held immediately responsible for the execution of former Emperor Nicholas and his family at Yekaterinburg in June, 1918, when the Czecho-Slovak troops were approaching that city, where the imperial personages were then being held prisoner, according to a dispatch to the Politiken from Kovno today.

A message quotes the Bolsheviki newspaper, Pravda of Moscow, as authority for this statement. The Pravda's account states that M. Johontoff, a member of the Yekaterinburg Soviet, has been condemned to death and executed at Perm for ordering the execution.

200 VALLEY DELEGATES TO STATE NEEDS TOMORROW

Demand for Joint Rail and Water Rates to Be Submitted to Government by Strong Force of Representatives.

About 200 men representing the Mississippi Valley, from the Twin Cities to New Orleans and from Pittsburg to Denver, will assemble in Washington tomorrow, placing reliance in numbers to impress upon legislative and executive branches of the Government that the valley now is a unit in its demands that certain requisites for its commercial prosperity be granted at once.

One of these demands vitally affects the ability of the Government River Service, which is the barge line upon the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans, to justify its continuance and demonstrate that the Mississippi River is a transportation highway that can be made to work for the business prosperity of the territory which it drains. It is the complete co-ordination of the river with the railroads that touch or cross its banks by the authorization of joint rail and river freight rates more generally than the Railroad Administration up to this time has shown a disposition to grant them.

The barge line now is operating virtually as a service between two ports, New Orleans and St. Louis. Port-to-port river navigation never has been a success in any part of the world, though river transportation continuing by rail to ports inland always has been a transportation cost saver.

Plea of Last June Futile.

Last June the River Service made application for certain rate tariffs that would enable, among other things, the St. Louis jobber to ship to some point on the southern Mississippi by water for transfer to rail lines and delivery to points in Texas, much desired by this city as a market. Similarly, the same privilege would have been expended to Chicago and other cities of the upper valley. These and other rates of similar effect were denied. "Waste of transportation," was the reason assigned.

The Valley delegation has an appointment with Director General Hines to present to him its case in this regard.

The delegation also will appear before the Rivers and Harbors Committee of the House in support of the Newton bill, which provides for the immediate, uninterrupted improvement of the Mississippi from St. Paul to New Orleans for navigation, the Missouri from Kansas City to St. Louis and the Ohio from Pittsburg to Cairo. In this connection the delegation will visit Secretary Baker to ask him to approve of the project of the State of Illinois to connect Lake Michigan with the Illinois River, giving Chicago a waterway to the Gulf of Mexico.

41 Men in Delegation.

St. Louis will have 41 men at the conference, who will act in the dual role of attending the Mississippi Valley meeting on Tuesday and Wednesday and appearing before the Republican National Committee to win the next Republican national convention for this city. Those designated to be the official representatives of the city at the Valley meeting are:

James E Smith, chairman; J. Palmer Clarkson, Marshall Hall, Carl F. G. Meyer, J. L. Messmore, Charles Rippin, R. Bursch, Charles Sutter, W. E. Tarleton, Bonner Miller, Edward F. Goltra, T. J. Kavanaugh and W. K. Kavanaugh.

The delegation departed for Washington yesterday.

5 MEN HOLD UP SALOON AND ESCAPE WITH $105

Knock Saloon Keeper and Customer Unconscious in North Garrison Avenue Place.

Five men entered the saloon of Rudolph Pertici, at 600 North Garrison avenue, at 8:30 o'clock last night, robbed the cash register of $90, took $15 from the pocket of Joseph Rampre, 930 North Tenth street, the bartender, and knocked Pertici and Sylvester Scherell, 3727 Morgan street, a customer, unconscious. They escaped.

Pertici was knocked down after he walked in and asked what the trouble was. Scherell was hit when he turned around after he had been ordered to face the wall. Both were taken to the City Dispensary, where their lacerated scalps were treated.

Four street holdups and the robbery of three homes in South St. Louis were reported to the police.

Thomas Klinton, 611 Hickory street, was dragged into an alley between Seventh and Eighth streets on Chouteau avenue and was robbed of $60 at 7 p. m.

Stewart L. Smith, 4954 Union boulevard, a clerk, was stopped at 5314 Union boulevard at 6:30 p. m. by two men, one of whom drew a revolver and ordered him to throw up his hands. He told policemen that he knocked the revolver from the man's hand and ran. The man picked up the revolver and fired one shot.

Owen Green, 1932 North Leffingwell avenue, a negro, reported that he was robbed of $2 at Jefferson avenue and St. Charles street.

John Davis, 3534 Bernard street, a negro, reported that he was knocked unconscious and robbed of $33 at the south approach of the Grand avenue bridge. He was taken to City Hospital No. 2.

A. V. Reppert, 3862 Botanical avenue, reported that robbers who gained entrance to the house through the basement window while the family was away stole $300 worth of jewelry.

Henry Muenchweiler, 3943 Cleveland avenue, reported that his home was entered and $200 stolen.

The police learned that a home at 4533 Tower Grove place was robbed while the family was away.

WILSON UPSETS PRECEDENT BY SIGNING PAPERS WITH PENCIL

Doctor Says President's Condition Is Good, but He Is Unable to Use Pen Efficiently.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Dr. F. X. Dercum, the Philadelphia neurologist, made his weekly visit to the White House today. He said he found President Wilson's condition good, but that he would not give out a statement as planned, as Senator Fall of New Mexico, who conferred with the President yesterday, had done that for him. (Senator Fall yesterday said the President mentally could handle any question coming up.)

The President transacted some official business, including the signing of a number of pardon warrants and a bill to increase the pay of the police in the District of Columbia.

In signing the measures the President used an indelible pencil because of the difficulty of using the pen in a reclining position. This was the first time in the history of the nation, it was said, that the official documents in parchment had not been signed with ink.

NAVY BANDMASTER HERE TO RECRUIT MUSICIANS FOR SHIP

Battleship Oklahoma Wants Men From 18 to 36 Years Old to Report at Recruiting Station.

J. V. Jerra, bandmaster, and T. J. Cannon, musician, second-class, of the U. S. S. Oklahoma, arrived in St. Louis yesterday to recruit from St. Louis a band or an orchestra for the battleship Oklahoma.

Any man between the ages of 18 and 35 years, who can play any kind of a musical instrument, or who thinks he is musically inclined and able to learn to play in a short time, and who is physically qualified, is invited to report to Jerra at the recruiting station in the Calumet Building, Seventh and Chestnut streets, for an interview. This includes players of wind and stringed instruments, and pianists.

The salaries now paid range from $41 to $125 a month, which includes the war-time bonus. A bill now under consideration by Congress, would make the lowest pay $56 a month. Enlistments may be for two, three or four years.

Men accepted here will be sent to the Naval Operating base at Hampton Roads, West Virginia, for a few months' preliminary training, and after this they will be sent aboard the Oklahoma, at Norfolk, to enter upon their regular duties as musicians.

The Oklahoma will leave Jan. 8 for a trip in Southern waters. Stops will be made at the West Indies, the Barbados, at Colon, where sightseeing tours will be made ashore, and from there the vessel will go to South America.

Musicians on ships of the navy play every day for 15 minutes in the morning, 30 minutes at noon, and for an hour in the evening. They are excused from military drill, but take care of their part of the ship. They have liberty every day and 48 hours liberty on the week ends.

COL. E. H. GREEN BRINGS FRENCH GIRL TO BE EDUCATED IN U. S.

Son of Hetty Green Entertains 11-Year-Old Daughter of Dead Poilu at Waldorf-Astoria.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Col. E. H. Green, son of the late Hetty Green, entertained in his suite in the Waldorf-Astoria last night Mlle. Jenny Turpaud, formerly of Paris, whose Christian name is not really Jenny, but something of less vivacious flavor and a bit polysyllabic.

But nobody, after looking at the little lady's dancing eyes and regular Carpentierish method of gesturing, would think for a moment of calling her by a long front name. Anyhow, the Colonel could not, and he spent several hours making an effort to understand her French, while completely fathoming what she meant by her interpretative pantomine.

You might as well know that Mlle. Jenny is only 12 years old, otherwise there might seem to be ground to suspect that the Colonel might he going to play Prince to her. He has, it is said (he refuses to say so himself) acted in the same princely fashion wit height other little girls of France. She will be educated at the Wilkesbarre Technical School.

Mlle. Jenny's father was a Poilu, Roger Turpaud, and was killed in the early part of the war after receiving all the decorations there were for gallantry and super-gallantry. Her mother, who works in a factory in Paris, was glad to let her little girl go to America to be educated.

PROVIDENT ASSOCIATION OBTAINS ONLY $66,364

Headquarters Will Remain Open Another Week in Effort to Increase Total.

The Provident Association's campaign for $150,000 for its work in the coming season was only 44 per cent successful, the amount subscribed being reported yesterday at $66,364.14.

Thomas H. West, president of the association, issued the following public appeal for supplementary contributions:

"Our week's campaign for the Provident Association is over and we are far short of realizing the amount of $150,000 asked for. We have had over 100 men and over 1000 women canvassers in every ward in the city, have advertised and written hundreds of letters, but have begged and pleaded in vain.

"During the war, under the inspiration of the feeling of patriotism, we raised millions for the help of suffering humanity abroad. Is it possible that the people of St. Louis are to fail to respond to the call for the small sum of $150,000 for the best-known and best-equipped organization of long standing in the city, whose aim is to give relief to distressed humanity at home. It does not seem possible.

Further Contributions Sought.

"We have concluded to keep the doors open for further subscriptions to see if we cannot prevail upon the people to come forward and make up this amount. Some have given liberally, some sparingly, and some not at all.

"We do not intend to try to dictate what you shall give, but if you have a conscience you know better, yourself, what you ought to do, and we make another appeal to you. It is not our job any more than yours. The work will have to be curtailed if the amount is not raised. Can we afford this?

"We ask those who have been overlooked in the canvass and those who think they should increase their subscriptions to please report direct to the headquarters of the association at Broadway and Locust street.

"It would be a discredit to our city to fail to take care of its home relief work, and I believe you will agree with us."

Workers Made 35,000 Calls.

The partial failure of the campaign, according to those in charge, was not due to an insufficient number of workers, or to lack of effort on their part. More than 35,000 calls were made at homes and places of business by members of the various teams. In an unusual number of cases, the persons solicited asked the caller to "return later," as they were too busy, at the time, to give the matter attention.

The headquarters, at the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust street, will remain open this week, and persons who dismissed the solicitors without due consideration, or who were overlooked in the canvass, are requested to bring or send in their donations.

U. R. TOKENS COUNTERFEITED

Discs Are Crude Efforts Without Any Lettering.

Countefeit United Railways tokens have begun to appear in the fare boxes, although in very small numbers, it was learned yesterday. No steps have been taken by the company to discourage counterfeiting the meatal tickets, A. T. Perkins, manager under the receiver for the company, said today.

The counterfeits which have been discovered are crude imitations, Perkins said. No effort seems to have been made to produce the lettering, the counterfeits being simply castings like the genuine tokens in size and form.

Several weeks ago two employes at the factory where the metal checks are made were arrested when it was found that they had been smuggling tokens from the factory.

LITTLE GIVEN TO ACTORS' FUND

Only small amounts were realized at the special matinees given Friday afternoon for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. At the Shubert-Jefferson, where seats were offered for "Chu Chin Chou" at $5.50 each, the receipts were around $600, according to Manager Lighton.

At the American, where "She's a Good Fellow" is running, the receipts were about $1000, said Manager Stoltz. At the Standard the receipts were about $200. Figures for the Gayety were not available.

Subscriptions to the funds are also being taken, and the total will be announced later. The quota set for St. Louis was $50,000.

3 SUPREME COURT PROHIBITION DECISIONS EXPECTED TOMORROW

One Suit, Begun in Kentucky, Questions Constitutionality of Prohibition Act.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The Supreme Court, it is believed, will hand down opinions in the pending prohibition cases Monday.

The important cases to be passed upon include that of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district of Kentucky against the Kentucky Distilleries and Warehouse Co.; one against the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second Collection District of New York, and one against the United States Attorney for the Southern District of New York and the Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District of New York.

The Kentucky case was started to test the constitutionality of the prohibition act. The wets assert that the prohibition question is illegal, void and unconstitutional, in that it operates to take private property for public use without just compensation in contravention of the fifth amendment to the Constitution, and that the act has terminated and ceased to be of legal effect.

The Department of Justice, the distilleries and warehouse company and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, filed briefs in this case.

The case in the Second New York District is a suit by a distiller to enjoin the Collector of Internal Revenue from refusing to accept tax on a quantity of whisky and permit its removal from bond for beverage uses. The whole case is predicated upon the proposition that changed conditions have rendered further enforcement unconstitutional

The case in the Third New York District is an appeal by a brewing corporation manufacturing beer of more than one-half of 1 per cent alcohol, but alleged to be nonintoxicating, to restrain the District Attorney and the collector from enforcing the terms and provisions of the war-time prohibition act, and the national prohibition act.

The claim is made that the manufacture and sale of the beverage was not unlawful under the act of Nov. 21, 1918; that the effect of the act of Oct. 28, 1919, will be to make it unlawful; that the new act is in this respect unconstitutional and if enforced will irreparably damage the brewing corporation and deprive it of its liberty of property without due process of law or just compensation.

The Supreme Court is considering these three cases together.

DR. BLUE ASKS FOR $85,000,000 FOR WAR RISK PATIENTS

Surgeon-General Says More Than 30,000 Beds Will Be Needed by July 1, 1920.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Asking Congress for $85,000,000 to build and equip hospitals to care for war risk insurance patients, Surgeon-General Blue of the Public Health Service today reported that more than 30,000 beds would be needed by July 1, 1920. No sites for the location of the hospitals were proposed, the Surgeon-General urging that selections await appropriation of funds to build the institutions.

In estimating the hospital facilities to be needed, the Surgeon-General took into account the treatment of selective service men passed by local boards but later rejected at camps. Legislation providing for their treatment by the Government has passed the House and now awaits Senate action.

Dr. Blue also recommended that the medical benefits be extended to men who are suffering less than 10 per cent disability from war service, declaring that these men eventually would suffer serious disability unless given proper treatment now.

To provide for 30,000 patients, the Surgeon-General said, it would be necessary to build hospitals for 23,000, the health service now having 7200 beds.

GREAT DANGER TO SHIPPING FROM MANY FLOATING MINES

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 6.—The danger to shipping from floating mines in the North Sea is increasing, according to the chief inspector of the Swedish Mercantile Marine for that district of navigation, who predicts that this winter the mines will constitute a greater menace than at any period since the mine fields were laid.

During the week ended today, the sinking of one American steamer and the damaging of another from striking mines in the North Sea have been reported.

So extensive were the mine fields and so numerous the mines, says the Inspector, that large numbers of them escaped destruction by the English and American mine sweepers.

ST. LOUIS BUILDING FOR SANITARIUM PROPOSED

Jewish Consumptive Relief Society Will Solicit Funds for Hospital at Denver.

St. Louis members of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society are planning to have a building bearing this city's name in the group of hospitals and convalescent camps at Denver, where patients are treated free without regard to creed or nationality. A campaign for funds will be conducted from Dec. 15 to 22.

At the national convention of this society, attended by about 2000 delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada last May at Hotel Statler, $10,000 was subscribed for the St. Louis building fund and a committee appointed to raise $25,000 more. On the committee are Meyer Cohen, chairman; Maurice Weil, treasurer; Samuel Russack, Oscar Leonard, Bernard Greenfelder, Harry Siegfried, Emil Mayer, Ferdinand Bach, and Mmes. Morris Friedman, Samuel Friedman, M. M. Cohen, I. L. Goldberg and Harry Goldman; Mrs. David D. Israel, recording secretary and Miss Lee Lichtenstein, financial secretary.

The building fund movement was started by the St. Louis Ladies' Auxiliary of the society, of which Mrs. Morris Friedman of 4212 West Pine boulevard, is chairman, and has a membership of 200. In the last 12 years the auxiliary has obtained more than $10,000 for tuberculosis patients sent from St. Louis to Denver, and also donated the artesian well which supplies the free hospitals with water. They now have several patients on the waiting list and no accommodations. New York City has erected two buildings and other cities are represented in the group at Denver.

Headquarters for the drive, starting Dec. 15, will be opened in a downtown hotel, and a list of team captains will be announced later. These captains will bear credentials from Scott R. DeKins, secretary of the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, who states he has "investigated the purposes, reliability and trustworthiness of the society. No commissions or salaries are paid, and the purposes of the campaign are worthy."

POLICEMAN FIRED ON CHARGES RELATING TO MERCIER'S VISIT

Is Said to Have Remarked He Had a Hell of a Job in Keeping Street Clear of Autos.

Patrolman Lee O. Proctor, who, until Friday walked a beat in the Central District, was dismissed from the department by the Police Board that evening after trial on charges growing out of his actions while detailed at Union Station on the day Cardinal Mercier, Primate of Belgium, arrived in St. Louis on his tour of the country.

Testimony was that Proctor was assigned to keep the Eighteenth street exit of the station clear of traffic. Sergt. Landy testified he told Proctor to see that automobiles did not park in the space that Proctor was supposed to keep open.

"This is a hell of a job," Proctor is said to have remarked. "Take a man off a beat to take care of these kind of people."

After the reception Sergt. Landy ordered Proctor to make a written report of his conduct. In the report Proctor denied making the remarks, and yesterday before the Police Board testified he did not make them, and also that he did not know the identity of the persons expected in the city on that day.

This observance has been approved by Archbishop Glennon, ministerial associations and the confederation of 200 churches. Jewish temples holding services today also will make mention of the subject.

The St Louis Tuberculosis Society is promoting the observance in this city and will stress the importance of the sale of Red Cross Christmas seals.

The stork outstripped the reaper in St. Louis last week, when he presented 296 new St. Louisans, against the 208 claimed by death. Bright's disease, with 29 victims, proved most fatal. Organic heart disease claimed 28, pneumonia, 26; cancer, 12, and tuberculosis, 12. Influenza claimed but one victim. Eleven deaths resulted from accident, two from criminal carelessness.

There were four homicides and one suicide.

$825,000 SUBSCRIBED FOR JEWISH HOSPITAL

Sum Is Obtained First Week of Campaign for $1,250,000 for New Institution.

Subscriptions of more than $825,000 to the $1,250,000 Jewish Hospital fund were reported at the close of the first week of the campaign yesterday. Of the total subscriptions, $715,000 was given by 150 persons at a meeting of the Columbian Club the day before the official opening of the campaign. One hundred and ten thousand dollars was added by 25 teams of two men each canvassing the city during the past week.

The fund is to be used in the construction of a new building to supplant the present hospital at 5414 Delmar boulevard. The building is to be thoroughly modern and is to be nonsectarian. Sidney I. Rothschild, Aaron Waldheim and Ernest W. Stix are in charge of the campaign.

The three have called a meeting of the solicitors at the Columbian Club for tomorrow night, where plans to raise the rest of the amount will be formulated.

Several large subscriptions by women have been announced. Mrs. Jonathan Rice and Mrs. Max Kahn have given $5000 each; Mrs. Charles Stix and Mrs. William Stix, $2500 each; Mrs. Elias Michaels, $2000, and Mrs. Morris Glaser, $1000. Several other large subscriptions have been pledged. Waldheim reported that a poorly clad man entered his office several days ago and saying that he had been at one time a patient in one of the wards at the Jewish Hospital for a period of several weeks and appreciated the care and attention given him, laid a five-dollar bill on the desk. He refused to give his name.

The present hospital was established 18 years ago at a cost of $300,000, and has room for 125 patients. The board plans to sell the place at a sacrifice. The new building will accommodate 400 patients, it is said.

RAILROAD LEGISLATION REFERENDUM PROPOSED

Program Outlining Eight Different Phases Submitted to Associated Industries of Missouri.

A program for railroad legislation has been submitted to members of the Associated Industries of Missouri by its Executive Committee in the form of a referendum in which eight different phases may be voted upon separately. Votes must be returned to the organization's headquarters in the Security building within seven days.

Following are the proposals:

"1. We urge speedy enactment of legislation for the return of the railroads to private corporate operation, under proper Federal regulation, to the end that the transportation of the country may be re-established upon a permanent and efficient basis.

"2. We approve the principle of a limited number of competitive railway systems to be formed by such consolidation or reorganizations of existing corporations as may be sanctioned by the Government.

"3. We favor definite Government regulation of the issuance of stocks, bonds or other securities by any common carrier and of the expenditure of the proceeds thereof.

"4. We favor Federal jurisdiction over all rates of carriers engaged in interstate commerce and the establishment of sufficient rates to yield returns necessary for proper maintenance, improvements, service and wages, in addition to a fair and reasonable profit on the investment.

"5. We favor a Government guarantee of railroad earnings for a reasonable time after return of the roads to private operation in order to provide for their sound physical and financial rehabilitation.

"6. We favor the creation of a board or boards, composed of representatives of the Government, the owners and the employes, to adjust disputes relating to wages and working conditions.

"7. We believe that a provision should be made prohibiting organized interruption of any part of the nation's transportation service.

"8. We favor a comprehensive plan of waterway development and the co-ordination of waterways with railroads and other means of transportation and the prosecution of such a plan with all proper expedition and vigor."

HOFMAN-DVORSKY IN TREMENDOUS RECITAL

Concerning Also the Mystery of a Famous Pianist and an Enigmatic Composer.

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

A NAME new to St. Louis concert goers appeared on the program of Josef Hofmann's recital last night at the Odeon. It was that of Michel Dvorsky, and his compositions were three very scenic and modernist sketches, "The Penguin," "East and East" and "The Sanctuary."

The pianist, quizzed as to whether Dvorsky were a Pole like himself, replied: "He is thought to be a Pole and part French; it's quite a mixed up affair." Hofmann proceeded with almost clairvoyant insight to tell just what Dvorsky meant by the works. The first, he said, is a fantastic description of the grotesque fowl immortalized by Anatole France; the second pictures the obstinacy of the East against the volatility of the West; and the third limns a Greek temple with an altar fire, but with such modern accessories as a chime of bells and an American bird singing in the forest. He was particular as to the kind of bird whose song is imitated. It is the peabody bird, he said.

When it was suggested that the definiteness of these interpretations was a bit striking, the pianist remarked: "Dvorsky and I are in constant communication." The rumor, indeed, is that these two gentlemen are on terms of closest intimacy, and have no secrets from each other. In fine, according to a report, current among musicians but never conceded by Hofmann, he and Dvorsky are one and the same person.

A Memorable Ovation.

However this may be, the Hofmann-Dvorsky recital was one of the most tremendous exhibitions of piano playing ever heard in this city. The audience was nearly of capacity proportions, and its applause had that deep undertone, so different from the patter of civility, which is always indicative of feelings profoundly moved, and of admiration genuinely aroused. The little giant of the pianoforte was recalled so frequently that one lost count, and the gathering was most reluctant to content itself with only four added numbers.

Three works of his performance won the chief favor of the audience. They were Weber's tour de force, "Perpetuum Mobile," dispatched with incredible swiftness, daintiness and grace; Chopin's "Military Polonaise," the marching measures of which were thundered forth with the superbest arrogance; and the inevitable Rachmaninoff Prelude in C-sharp minor, of which Hofmann makes a far more dramatic poem than does the composer himself, bored as the latter doubtless is with this globe-circling effusion of his twentieth year.

The program began quietly with Beethoven's Sonata in A-flat major, op. 110, which the pianist interpreted with grave, manly feeling; and then came Debussy's picturesque "Soire en Grenade," with its impressionist flashes of a flourish of a dance here and a snatch of a song there, against the luxuriant romance of the Spanish city. The dazzling Weber number concluded the first group.

Chopin Is Resurrected.

Hofmann saved himself from an encore here by remaining on the stage and proceeding without pause to his second group, which was entirely of Chopin—the Nocturne in F Major, the Mazurka in B Major, Op. 56, No. 1, the great Polonaise, and the Scherzo in E Major. This Polish pianist played his countryman's works as if he had written them himself, and for encores he gave another Chopin nocturne and a waltz.

The third group consisted of Hofmann's own works—pardon, the works of the mysterious Monsieur Dvorsky—and a stupendously technical arrangement of the Strauss waltz, "The Bat," by Leopold Godowsky. The last, with its terrific climax, excited a storm of applause, which grew in vehemence when Rachmaninoff's Prelude in G Minor was added. As on occasions when Paderewski or Kreisler has played at the Odeon, the audience either remained seated or crowded down nearer the stage, clamoring for just one more example of the enchanted music. The end came with Rachmaninoff's most celebrated piano piece.

It is not too much to say that Hofmann in this recital came near affording an exposition of the ultimate possibilities of the pianoforte. He summoned forth its full and mighty strength, and he subdued it to the finest delicacy. Now it sang like a violin at its tenderest; again it roared like a quiver of thunderbolts unleashed together. It was as shy and lyric as a girl, or as majestic as the haughtiest emperor. To his task the pianist brought an exquisitely cultivated sense of beauty, an emotional sensitiveness as manly as it is acute, a towering technique and one of the most powerful intelligences at work in music during our time.

BRITISH ENVOY MAY VISIT STATE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Viscount Grey, the British Ambassador to the United States has been invited by Jewell Mayes, secretary of the Missouri State Board of Agriculture, to address the annual meeting of Missouri farmers to be held at Columbia the latter part of January.

Breckinridge Long of St. Louis, Third Assistant Secretary of State, said today that though the Ambassador had not committed himself, there was a likelihood he would accept. Long has been urging the Viscount to avail himself of this opportunity to observe agricultural methods in the Middle West.

SOCIAL AGENCIES COMMITTEE URGES $1,500,000 FOR FARM

Letter to Aldermen Says Present Facilities for Care of Delinquents and Dependents Are Poor.

In a letter to the members of the Ways and Means Committee of the Board of Aldermen, mailed yesterday, the Committee on Survey of Penal Institutions in St. Louis of the Central Council of Social Agencies, points out the reason for an adequate appropriation in the proposed bond issue for the establishment of a municipal farm. The central council has gone on record in favor of a $1,500,000 appropriation for a municipal farm, on which would be placed prisoners of the Workhouse, incipient tuberculosis cases, curable insane from the City Sanitarium, feeble-minded adults and minors.

The reasons the committee has outlined are that present facilities for the care of delinquent and dependent persons is inadequate, antiquated and inhumane; that the City Sanitarium is overcrowded; that provision for incipient cases of tuberculosis is not adequate.

The figure now proposed by the Committee on Ways and Means of the Board of Aldermen is $630,000. The Central Council of Social Agencies urges an apportionment of $1,500,000, pointing out that an increase in the apportionment for this item does not necessarily decrease the apportionment for any other object.

The St. Louis League of Women Voters has passed a resolution indorsing an adequate appropriation for the municipal farm.

HOSPITAL COLLECTION TOTAL NOW IN EXCESS OF $48,000

The $48,000 mark was passed yesterday in the 1919 collection of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association. Sub-totals were announced last night by Treasurer Charles L. Holman as follows: Glass boxes, $20,105.02; trades and professions, $11,128.50; employes, $10,845.45; churches and Sunday schools, $3,471.46; miscellaneous, $128.15; membership due, $2,900; total, $48,578.58.

The total of the committee on employes' subscriptions was passed by that of the committee on trades and professions. Each committee reports that many returns are yet to come in and the committee on churches and Sunday schools likewise expects to final total for its department to be greatly in excess of the present figures.

Reports of the participating hospitals on the relief extended by them during the year ending Sept. 30 last are being checked by the Auditing Committe. The Executive Board will meet shortly to receive the reports of the Committee on Admission and the Auditing Committee, and then the Committee on Distribution will meet and formally apportion the 1919 collection. Checks for the amounts allotted to the hospitals will be sent Christmas evee, as in former years.

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE SEEKS MACHINERY TO REPLACE STRIKES

Delegates Believe Economic Loss Due to Stoppage of Work Must Be Prevented.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Delegates to the second industrial conference concluded their first week's work today. It is the tentative plan now to continue holding 10 and perhaps 12 executive sessions a week up to Dec. 19, by which time it is hoped a preliminary draft of recommendations will have been finished. Recess then will be taken over the holidays.

On their return the delegates will have available the result of investigations by experts into various phases of the industrial situation and will hear the opinion of representatives of labor and capital on the preliminary draft. The conference then will redraft its recommendations and submit them to the House through the press.

Stanley King, of Boston, summarizing the results, declared the procedure of the first conference had been reversed and the discussion of "machinery and methods" was being taken up before enunciating a set of principles.

The subject has been divided as affecting workmen in the service of the Government, public utilities and private industries. As regards men employed by Federal, State and municipal governments, and by public utilities, the conference is discussing whether there is a right to strike and what machinery should be set up to adjudicate grievances. The right of men in private industries to strike has not been questioned, but the establishment of machinery to prevent the tremendous economic loss due to stoppage of work has been discussed. It was said that the conference had a clear feeling that something must be set up fair to all sides, to take the place of the strike.

TESTIMONY THAT LINEMAN IS AN I. W. W. BRINGS $300 FINE

Woman Tells Judge That Husband Has "Red" Literature and That He Beats Her.

Otto C. Hill, a lineman for the County Gas and Electric Co., was fined $300 and costs in Police Court yesterday when his wife testified that he was an I. W. W. and often beat her.

Judge Mix, in fining Hill, said: "If you were on trial for being an I. W. W. and I were on the jury, I'd be in favor of hanging you." Hill was unable to pay the fine and as he was being taken from the courtroom again denied that he was an I. W. W.

Mrs. Hill testified that Hill had a suitcase full of "red" literature at home. Hill admitted beating his wife. They have a three-year-old daughter.

FIVE PERSONS ARRESTED FOR PARKING AUTOS ON LOCUST ST.

Three Men and Two Women Find Policemen Awaiting Their Coming From Matinee.

Five persons, among them two women, who parked their automobiles on Locust street, between twelfth and Thirteenth streets during the matinee at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater yesterday, found another program awaiting them when the performance inside was concluded.

Policemen who had watched the machines during the show were the principals in the post-performance. They arrested each of the five. All explained that they had found Twelfth street and the parking spaces allotted in that vicinity all occupied when they arrived, so they left their machine on the north of the theater. They were allowed to sign their own bonds for appearance in Police Court tomorrow.

Those arrested were Mrs. Bayard E. Silver, Bonair Hotel, Taylor and McPherson avenues; Miss Edith Friedman, 18, 5216 Enright avenue; Harry A. Wiegand, broker, 5630 Pershing avenue; George Neville, cashier, 1312 Laurel avenue, and Whitfield Russell, broker, 4530 Forest Park boulevard.

Locust street, police say, is regarded as the "congested district" all the way out to Theresa avenue. Those arrested were charged with parking their machines over the proscribed one-hour limit.

Four others were arrested in the evening for violating the parking laws in the shopping district downtown.

LANE'S FINE PICTURE OF AMERICA'S WEALTH

Secretary's Annual Report Includes Strong Appeal for Americanization.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—Fuller utilization of national resources in coal, oil, water, power, land and in human beings, as urged by Secretary Lane of the Interior Department n his annual report, issued today. From the observation post that his office affords over varied governmental activities, he draws the conclusion that "far beyond all our possessions is the American man," in a strong appeal for Americanization and education.

"To him, to his spirit and character, to his skill and intelligence is due all the credit for the land in which we live," Lane said. "That resource we are neglecting. Twenty-five per cent of the 1,600,000 men between 21 and 31 years of age who were first drafted into our army could neither read nor write our language and tens of thousands could not speak it or understand it."

Turning to the motive power facilities of the nation, the report says:

"The measure of a people's industrial capacities seems to be surely fixed by its motive power possibility, and the coal strike has brought concretely before us the disturbing fact that we live virtually by unanimous consent. Let less than one-half of 1 per cent of our population quit their work of digging coal and we are threatened with the combined horrors of pestilence and famine."

Lane asks for adequate provision to collect statistical information about the industry, paving the way to better utilization of fuel in future.

Oil and Water Power.

Consideration of water power and petroleum deposits takes Lane to the wider spaces of the West. He states that 70 per cent of the available horse power in the nation lies west of the Mississippi, and places the total oil production in 1918 at 356,000,000 barrels. Passage of public land leasing legislation will make available further rich supplies, he says, and eventually the deposits of oil shale "can be made to yield vastly more oil than has been found in pools or sands."

"Yet with all the optimism that can be justified," the report says, "I would urge a policy of saving as to petroleum that should be rigid in the extreme. If we are long to enjoy the benefits of a petroleum age, we must save this oil."

Ships using fuel oil should be equipped with internal combustion motors, Lane believes, and not be allowed to burn oil to make steam. A foreign oil supply should also be sought and diplomatic and industrial means used to develop it.

A new basis for the operation of the Reclamation Service, which has chiefly been occupied in Western states, with a total of 1,602,000 acres made irrigable, is suggested.

Need of Reclamation.

"The day has come when it (reclamation) must be nationalized and extended to all parts of the republic," Lane says. "To the deserts of the West we have brought the creative touch of water, and we must find a way to go on with this work. But it is of equal importance that we should liberate rich areas now held in bondage by the swamp, convert millions of acres of idle cutover lands to profitable use, and raise from the dead the once vigorous agricultural life of our abandoned farms."

This does not mean more Federal appropriations, the report explains, but assistance to local districts which will provide funds by pledging the value of lands with them.

Lane says that 150,000 demobilized soldiers have applied for public lands. He reasserts his belief that the Government is justified in doing for soldiers what it would do for no other class, as he has proposed in pending measures.

The Alaska Railroad, Secretary Lane says, has been well and solidly built, for "as little money as private parties could build it." Though total costs have been rising, due to general price situation, the report places expenditures at $70,000 and $80,000 per main line mile so far as compared to $151,000 per mile reached recently by some private roads in the United States.

37,259 Patents Issued.

In a summary of the department's work the report shows that the Osage tribe of Indians collected last year $17,000,000 in returns from oil and gas land leases. Up in Alaska, the department mined 55,300 tons of coal. In Washington, the patent office issued 37,259 grants to inventors, while the pension office paid out $222,159,292 to veterans of the Civil and Spanish wars.

At the national parks 755,527 visitors were recorded during the year, and questions as diverse as the feeding of elk in Wyoming and the control of vitriolic gases around Hawaiian volcanoes came up for settlement.

On irrigated lands last year, $66,000,000 in agricultural products were grown, and Lane remarks that a Federal expenditure of $100,000,000 has added close to $500,000,000 to the tax valuation of Western states. The Salt River project of Arizona, where crop values totaled $18,188,000, was the banner producer of the Reclamation Service.

Fire Prevention Expert to Speak.

Conway of the Underwriters' Salvage Corps of Cincinnati, a leader in fire prevention, will address the Insurance Club of St. Louis to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock in Parlor A of the Planters Hotel. The club has invited city officials, members of the fire department, Salvage Corps, Board of Aldermen, Chamber of Commerce and other similar organizations to attend.

DENTIST GETS $7000 VERDICT AGAINST TERMINAL RAILWAY

A. S. Wolff Sued for $10,000, Alleging Gateman Assaulted Him and Broke His Nose.

Andrew S. Wolff, 3057 Marcus avenue, a dentist, yesterday obtained a jury verdict in the Circuit Court for $7000 damages against the Terminal Railroad Association for an alleged assault committed upon him by a gateman at Union Station Aug. 23 last, in which the dentist's nose was broken. Wolff said he had gone to the station to meet his 9-year-old child, who was coming from Fulton, Mo., on a Frisco train, but was stopped at the train gate by gateman James O'Hearn, a former policeman, who said he could not go through the gate until the train came to a standstill.

Wolff, it was alleged, forced his way past the gateman, but in the meantime the child had gotten off the train and became lost in the confusion. When Wolf started to pass through the gate on his way out the gateman, it was alleged, struck him on the nose. The gateman denied that he assaulted Wolff and said he acted in self-defense, after Wolff called him a name and struck him.

Judge Hartmann instructed the jury that insulting language is not an excuse for the one to whom it is applied resorting to physical violence. In behalf of the defense he gave an instruction that the gateman had a right to require the plaintiff to remain outside until the train was at a standstill. The suit was for $10,000.

The Kralemans were married Aug. 29, 1901, and separated June 17 last. She alleged that he neglected her and associated with other women. Since the separation she has been cashier in a meat market at 5852 Easton avenue. A character witness pronounced her "an elegant cook—the best a man could want."

C. OF C. DIRECTORS INDORSE 'OPEN LETTER ON PEACE' TANGLE

Document Was Put Into Circulation Here Recently After Meeting at Noonday Club.

The "open letter on the peace situation," which was put into circulation recently by a group of St. Louisans, Democrats and Republicans, after a meeting at the Noonday Club yesterday, was approved by the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce.

Announcement of the action was accompanied by a statement by John F. Shepley, acting president of the Chamber: "This action of the Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce does not in any way pass upon the controversial issue regarding the Peace Treaty, nor does it place this organization in the position of asking that the treaty be approved with or without amendments. It is to emphatically emphasize the importance of an immediate peace settlement. We feel that the general conditions in our country and the commercial interests in particular, would be best served by immediate attention and an official closure of the war, such as would be represented in an adopted peace treaty.

Her husband, Gerhardt Bourscheidt, was a contractor and did much of reconstruction work at Jefferson Barracks. He also built most of the stands in the city parks. He died nine years ago, shortly after celebrating his golden wedding.

"Gosh! I never knew before how good these little pork sausages were." Thus says the man who thought his stomach was gone for all time, but who tried the simple expedient of a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet after eating. And with this for a starter, he goes in for a cheese sandwich, a piece of hot mince pie, eats ham and eggs—in fact he forgets his stomach and thinks only of the energy and good feeling that follow eating the foods that make most people ravenously hungry even to think of them. And all of this without sour risings, no gas, no belching and none of that drowsy heaviness that so often follows indigestion. Try these tablets after eating. They are used extensively wherever good eaters are found, and are on sale almost everywhere in the United States and Canada.

TELLS COURT HUSBAND SAID FRENCH WOMEN WERE NICER

Mrs. Florence Adele Marshall Divorces Former Lieutenant Who Left Her.

Mrs. Florence Adele Marshall of 6629 Kingsbury boulevard, University City, obtained a divorce yesterday at Clayton from Charles Merritt Marshall, son of John D. Marshall, president of the Marshall Brothers' Livery Co.

Mrs. Marshall testified that on her husband's return from France, where he served as a First Lieutenant in the Quartermaster's Department, his attitude towards her had changed. He frequently suggested, she said, that she obtain a divorce, and compared her unfavorably with French women whom he had met. For a month he did not speak to her, she stated, and then, on Oct. 13 last, he left her, going to his father's home, 5500 Clemens avenue.

ANARCHISTS DON'T WANT TO BE "KICKED OUT IN STEERAGE"

Berkman and Emma Goldman Willing to Go to Soviet Russia If They Pay Their Way.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Efforts to free Emma Goldman and Alexander Berkman from Ellis Island on bail will be made Monday if their writs of habeas corpus are dismissed by Federal Judge Mayer, their counsel, Harry Weinberger announced today.

While both his clients are ready to go to Soviet Russia if permitted to pay their own expenses and select their own method of going, Weinberger said they have authorized him to carry to the United States Supreme Court, if necessary, his efforts to prove that their deportation would be illegal.

"They do not want to be kicked out of the country in steerage," he said.

Should Judge Mayer uphold the deportation proceedings, Weinberger said, he would move for a stay of deportation and for release of his clients on bail pending appeals.

Furniture, Rugs, Stoves & Musical Instruments

Briefly enumerated, the policies of this concern are the buying of a limited number of patterns, but large quantities of each pattern, thereby eliminating many patterns that do not move and large overhead and handling space. All goods are marked in plain figures and one price, the very rock-bottom price to all. Dignified credit will be extended to all those deserving of credit, thereby eliminating credit losses which under the present system the public whose credit ratings are AA-1 are forced to pay. You will be able to obtain bigger values at the store of Welch & Co. than anywhere else. A trip to this store will quickly convince you of this fact. We invite you to come and see the home of high quality home-furnishings and musical instruments. Come Monday if you possibly can.

BUSINESS WOULD GO ON IF COAL IS USED UP

With Keokuk Power Available, St. Louis Has Advantage Over Other Cities.

St. Louis has a resource not common to other large cities which in the extremity of a complete lack of coal would enable it to continue in a business way where other cities might suffer business paralysis—hydro-electric energy generated by the Keokuk dam, which now furnishes light and power and might, in a larger way than it now does, give the city heat.

If St. Louis were wholly without coal, its business nerve center, that district lying between Jefferson avenue and the river and Wash and Spruce streets, could continue to function, in the opinion of Louis H. Egan, vice president and general manager of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., through the use of electricity generated wholly by water power.

Keokuk furnishes about half of the electric energy consumed here or 1,000,000 kilowatt hours a day. Translated into terms of tons of coal required to generate that amount of electricity the city is now profiting in the emergency of a coal shortage by saving 1500 tons of coal a day.

Compares With Chicago.

Egan makes a comparison of the situation in St. Louis as compared with any other city, say Chicago, in the event of the failure of coal. Chicago is dependent totally upon coal-generated electricity. If coal should fail there the street cars could not run. In St. Louis the street cars still would continue to deliver people to their places of business and otherwise would give partial service. In Chicago the Western Union Telegraph Co. would be compelled to suspend. In St. Louis Western Union Telegraph company lines are energized by electricity developed by water power. The ability of postoffices to handle great volumes of mail depends upon the use of electric sorting devices. Chicago would experience a clogging of its mail. St. Louis would have unimpaired postal service. In similar essentials of business life employing electricity, St. Louis would profit over Chicago.

Twenty-four industries outside the downtown zone now use hydro-electric energy exclusively for power. These employ, in round numbers, 10,000 men, including the Missouri Portland Cement Co., the St. Louis Screw Co., and others of similar size and industrial importance. The plant of the General Motors Company, which will employ at least 5000 men, will utilize water-generated electricity as its power.

Virtually half the electricity consumed in St. Louis at this time is water generated.

A few industries are using crude oil under their boilers now and others, in the emergency of lack of coal, are seeking to adopt fuel oil for power. However, in normal times, St. Louis, because of its proximity to coal, is not a city for the profitable burning of oil. The shift from coal to oil under boilers is of sufficient expense to justify the change only if oil is continued to be used. Oil in St. Louis today is about 12 cents a gallon.

Advance in Crude Oil.

HOUSTON, Tex. Dec. 6.—An advance of 25 cents in Gulf Coast Crude Oil was announced today by several of the larger operators in the coastal fields of Texas and Louisiana.

HEAD OF PAN MOTOR CO. CONVICTED OF MISUSE OF MAILS

S. C. Pandolfo Found Guilty After Long Trial and 12 of Associates Are Acquitted.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—S. C. Pandolfo, president of the Pan Motor Co. of St. Cloud, Minn., was found guilty of misuse of the mails on four counts of a Federal indictment by a jury in the District Court late today, and 12 of his associates in the company were acquitted.

The indictment contained eleven counts, two of which, the sixth and seventh, had been dismissed early in the trial, which began six weeks ago. The jury found Pandolfo guilty on the first, second, third and fifth counts, disregarding the remaining counts.

"I guess it might have been worse," was Pandolfo's first comment on the verdict.

Carl Cummins, attorney for Pandolfo, obtained a stay of sentence from Judge Landis. He made a motion for a new trial and the Judge set the hearing for Dec. 15.

The other officials and directors who were acquitted are, Charles D. Schwab, Peter Thielman, G. E. Hanscomb, bankers; Hugh Evans, wholesale grocer; H. C. Evans Jr., miller; Fred Schilpin, publisher; Charles S. Bunnell, real estate dealer; Charles F. Ladner, vice president; John Barritt, secretary; all of St. Cloud; Norman A. Street and George Heidman, Chicago patent attorneys, and H. S. Wigle, of Spokane, Wash., former vice president and chief stock salesman of the company.

10-Per-Cent Extra Sugar Dividend.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Great Western Sugar Co. today declared an extra dividend of 10 per cent in addition to the regular quarterly dividends of 1¾ per cent on the common and preferred stocks.

CHURCH FEDERATION TO ELECT OFFICERS

Annual Dinner and Meeting Will Be Held Tomorrow Night at Y. W. C. A.

Officers will be elected and the report of the executive secretary will be presented at the annual meeting and dinner of the St. Louis Church Federation tomorrow night at the Y. W. C. A., Fourteenth and Locust streets.

Among the speakers will be Prof Louis Wallis of Chicago, a member of the Joseph Fels Commission, and the Rev. Z. B. T. Phillips, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church.

The report of the executive secretary, the Rev. Arthur H. Armstrong, will show that, as the result of the change in the constitution last spring to admit women delegates to the meeting with equal standing with men, the women have taken an active part in the federation work during the year. It is not improbable, it is said, that a woman will be nominated for the presidency. Mrs. Louis A. Brooks, president of the Board of Religious Organizations, is one of the members of the board of directors.

The report will reveal the progress that is being made by the Interchurch World Movement in surveys in St. Louis, St. Louis County and Madison and St. Clair Counties, Ill. The object of the survey is to assist the churches of various denominations in revising their programs of work and adapting themselves more completely to the requirements of their communities.

The city has been divided into 13 districts, the report states, of which seven have begun work. The Water Tower district, in the East Grand avenue section, with 600 canvassers, completed the work in one day.

The report will also show that the Community Training School for Church School Workers, now in its seventh year, conducted by the federation at the Y. W. C. A. has grown to such an extent that it holds the distinction of being the largest of its kind in the world. The school has 25 courses of study and 32 teachers who are leading ministers, public school and college instructors. Other organizations co-operating in the conduct of the school are the Y. M. C. A., the St. Louis and the Missouri Sunday School Associations.

Among the other accomplishments of the year are the following: Shop meetings, 226, with total attendance of 16,978, conducted by 86 pastors and laymen; street meetings during the summer, daily visitations of the Rev. Howard Billman at the Juvenile Court, four great rallies during the year, a league of nations rally and a later spring rally, both at the City Club, a ministerial rally at Central Presbyterian Church, and an Evangelistic rally at Union M. E. Church.

REPRESENTATIVES OF 300 PROTESTANT CHURCHES TO MEET

Surveys Made in St. Louis Will Be Made Public at Meeting of Federation.

Representatives of 300 Protestant churches in St. Louis and adjoining towns will attend the annual dinner and meeting of the St. Louis Church Federation at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow night, at the Y. W. C. A. building, Fourteenth and Locust street. Prof. Louis Wallis of Chicago, member of the Joseph Fels Commission and a lecturer and writer on religious and social subjects, will be one of the speakers on the theme, "Religion and the World Awakening."

The Rev. Dr. Z. B. T. Phillips, rector of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, will speak on "The Challenge of the World to Protestant Christianity." The Rev. Dr. Samuel H. Woodrow, president of the federation and pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, will preside.

Surveys made in the entire church field of the city recently, by the Interchurch World Movement, results of which will be made known at the meeting, are about completed, and will show some minute and interesting details along the lines of need and achievement. There will be the annual election of officers, reading of reports on finances and other features of the federation work for the past year.

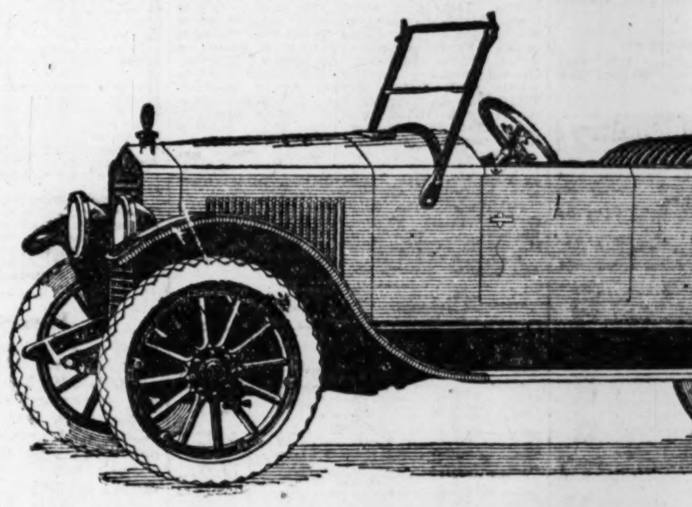
ESSEX MOTOR CARS



The Roadster Now Shares

Particularly Suited for Business Needs; Dependable Transportation, Economy, Smart Appearance and Comfort at Moderate Cost

Praise for the Essex

The Essex Roadster is not only a favorite with those who love speed, power and grace above all.

A large class of its buyers are business men. They choose it for utility, for dependable transportation.

It becomes in fact, a part of their business system. It must be on the job, keep all engagements on time, and be as responsible as an engineer's watch.

18,000 Owners Attest Essex Dependability

Durability, economy and train-like regularity are the standards set by Essex.

More than 18,000 owners have learned this advantage. Many cars run 16,000 to 20,000 miles without the least repairs. Such proofs multiply daily.

Today Essex durability is as unquestioned as its ability to out-perform any car of its weight, and to surpass many that are larger and cost far more.

Note, These Special Business Conveniences

The Essex Roadster is particularly suited for salesmen, visiting representatives, inspectors and others who must make widely scattered calls.

Though not large, the Roadster is commodious. There is plenty of room for passengers, and special arrangements for carrying sample cases unseen, and even a trunk if desired.

Consider comfort, too. Men who use a car much in business appreciate the value of riding ease. They know how motoring fatigue takes the drive out of a man, towards the fag end of the day. They appreciate the riding comfort of the Essex. It is comparable to no other light car. Only among large, high-priced cars, owners tell you, will you find such smoothness of action.

But for such a car as might give you the speed, power and endurance of the Essex, you would pay far more. And you would not get the Essex advantages of nimbleness, low upkeep, tire and gasoline economy, which result from its light weight.

Big Car Comfort Light Car Economy

The size of the Essex makes parking space easy to find. It allows free handling in crowded traffic, both important these days. The quick pickup easily escapes "pocketing" behind slower cars.

Whether for long tours cross country, or for the nimbler requirements of city use, the Essex Roadster has proved itself worthy in endurance, hill-climbing, acceleration, speed and comfort. Its place is established among the fine cars of motordom, not only as a jaunty, graceful car for pleasure or sport, but also as dependable transportation that squarely meets the test of business.

Keeps Its New Car Appearance

Despite its pleasing grace the Essex is solidly built. Thorough care is evident in every detail of finish and appointments. The Essex keeps its appearance. Even after months of service its smartness of finish is practically unimpaired, and its performance as true, smooth and quiet as when new.

Come see the Essex Roadster. Ride in it. Try its paces. Whether you want to for pleasure or business, you will appreciate the reasons why more than $30,000,000 has been paid for Essex cars by more than 18,000 owners. That is a record that no other car ever equalled in its first year sales.

SMALL STOCKS CAUSE HIGHER CORN MARKET

Futures Gain Over 3c on the Week's Trading; Oats Also Are Higher.

Anxiety regarding the coal shortage, together with the fact that the visible supply of corn is one of the smallest on record, tended last week to make corn prices average higher. Quotations at the close yesterday compared with a week ago, varied from steady to gains of 3⅝c. Oats showed an advance of 1⅝c to 3⅝c.

Although month-end liquidation on the part of holders who had no Government license brought about something of a tumble of prices in the corn market, the drop was soon more than offset by attention to the scantiness of the stock of corn here and at other primary centers, and by anticipations that as a result of coal strike developments, the movement of corn from rural sources would be more restricted than had before seemed likely.

Shutting down of big industries, however, as well as new low records for British exchanges, did much to temper bullish sentiment later, and so likewise did evidence that reduction of general freight had enabled the railways to enlarge their handling of corn. Yesterday, however, the market rallied when shorts endeavored to cover contracts. Strength in rye also helped the upturn.

Export sales gave some independent firmness to oats. Trade also was helped by light receipts. Yesterday's market was strong.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash corn yesterday was steady to 4c lower, compared with yesterday's close; demand fair.

Cash oats were ½c higher; demand good.

Quote: No. 1 red winter wheat, $2.49; No. 2 red winter, $2.47@2.48; No. 3 red winter, $2.43@2.44; No. 4 corn, $1.45@1.46; No. 1 yellow, $1.55; No. 2 yellow, $1.55; No. 4 yellow, $1.44@1.46; No. 5 yellow, $1.41; No. 6 yellow, $1.36; No. 2 white, $1.56½; No. 4 white, $1.44@1.48; No. 2 white oats, 81c; No. 3 white, 81@81½c; No. 3, 79½c.

STRENGTH OF BARLEY AND RYE HELPS TO LIFT CORN PRICES

CHICAGO, Dec. 6.—Unusual strength in the rye and barley markets, a condition ascribed to active export demand, had a bullish effect today on corn. The close for corn was unsettled, ¾ cent to 1¾ cents net higher, with January $1.36 to $1.36¼ and May $1.33⅜ to $1.33½. Oats finished ⅝ cents to ¾ cents up, and provisions unchanged to a decline of 27 cents.

Before the advance due to the influence of rye and barley, the corn market was on the down grade. Continued liberal receipts of corn, together with lower quotations on hogs was chiefly responsible, although some selling resulted from fuel shortage interference with the operation of grain elevators here. Gossip, however, that big purchases of rye were in progress on foreign account gave a different aspect to the corn trade, especially as barley was sympathizing with rye, and there was also much talk of the high cost of spring wheat flour. Need of week-end adjustment of open deals tended further to lift corn as the session neared the close.

Oats followed the leadership of corn. Besides, a reduction in the oats visible supply total on Monday was expected.

In provisions, the effect of grain strength did not fully counterbalance depression caused by a material setback in the price of hogs.

COTTON MARKET CLOSES EASY AFTER AN OPENING ADVANCE

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—A better feeling over the Mexican situation helped an early advance in the cotton market today, but there was nervousness over the threat of another longshoremen's strike and talk of an easier spot basis in the eastern belt. The continued weakness of foreign exchange was also a disturbing factor and after selling at 34.55 March eased off to 34.00, closing at that level with the general list easy, net unchanged to 50 points lower.

The market opened steady at unchanged prices to an advance of 27 points with January selling at 37.04 and May at 32.50 after the call. There was some domestic trade buying and covering and early reactions were followed by a bulge with the near months relatively firm. Bullish reviews of the goods situation and rather a bullish view of the week-end figures helped the advance, but the South was a considerable seller and the market weakened in the late trading under increased offerings from Wall Street and local traders' reports of a further decline in foreign exchange. January sold off from 37.05 to 36.60, while May declined to 31.92 and last prices were at the lowest point of the day.

An eastern belt spot firm estimated the crop at 10,440,000 bales excluding linters. There was nothing to indicate any change of sentiment as to the probable showing of the census report on Monday giving the amount of cotton ginned prior to Dec. 1, and traders showed comparatively little interest in forecasts of either the ginning or the crop estimate scheduled for publication next Thursday. Reports that Italian manufactures are offering cotton piece goods here led to considerable comment in connection with claims that foreign-made goods are beginning to compete with domestic products.

LARGE RECEIPTS CAUSE LOWER CATTLE MARKET

Week's Prices Are Off 75c to $1 at the National Stockyards.

	Last week.	Previous week.	Last year.
Cattle	43,114	29,515	36,890
Hogs	111,498	66,494	102,601
Sheep	18,397	6,630	9,223
H. & Ms.	3,999	6,898	3,882

Liberal receipts of cattle, with discouraging reports on the Eastern beef market, were two potent factors in last week's cattle business. These two causes were responsible for a sharp decline on practically all but a few prime cattle, which held steady.

The break on plain and good steers was $1 and more in spots, but the bulk of the sales averaged 75c to $1 lower. One load of Missouri baby beeves at $19.25, put a new top on the year's market, and was but 25c under the record. Bulk of sales were in a range of $11 to $14.50.

Heifers and yearlings were hard sale after Tuesday, and the market broke a $1 late. There were draggy days in the trade and salesmen had difficulty in cleaning up their holdings. Bulk of the sales cleared in a range of $8 to $11, with a load of mixed yearlings at $15.

Cows were unevenly lower, ranging to $1.50 under last week's best time. The choice heavy weight grades showed most decline. Medium cows ranged 75c to $1 lower, while canners and cutters were 50c to 75c under a week ago. Bulls were slow and draggy all week.

It was a good trade all week on feeder cattle and the market was well patronized by buyers from both Missouri and Illinois. The class of cattle shown preference were heavy, quality feeders, and values while 50c lower in sympathy with killers would have held steady had other conditions leading up to this branch been normal.

Vealers opened around $1.50 higher, with a top of $17, but the market lost the advance and trade was around $2 lower late. The bulk of the veals sold from $14 to $16 this week. Yearlings dropped 50c to 75c and more in places.

On an unprecedented run of 111,500 hogs here last week, prices declined 25@50 cents. At Friday's close the market stood practically where it left off a week ago, but in the week's final session a decline of 25@40c was imposed, which sent the top down to $13.80, as against a $14.10 top last Saturday.

The gain in receipts over last week was about 45,000 head. Market, despite this large increase, was active throughout the period, city butchers setting a red-hot pace for the big packers. The big market was active and strong the fore part of the week, but closed dull and a big 50c lower. Best quality and weight at present is worth $13. Choice rough sows are worth $12.35@12.50.

With a run that almost trebled previous week's volume, prices on all grades of sheep and lambs scored a sharp rise here the past week, and top closed at the highest point in several months. Fat lambs, yearling wethers and fat sheep are about $1 higher, dull lambs $1@1.50 higher and canner grades of sheep about 50c higher for the period.

Quotations are as follows: Fat ewe and wether lambs $16@16.25, fair to good $15.50@16, medium lambs $13.50@15, cull grades $7@10, fat yearling wethers $13@13.50, plain to good $11.50@12.75, fat sheep $9@9.25, medium to good sheep $7.75@8.75, canners $3.50@4 and choppers and bucks $6@6.25.

With receipts fair in volume and buyers fairly well represented, responsibility for the weakened condition of the horse market the past week must be placed largely on the present difficulties attending the industrial life of the country.

A material loss in receipts resulted as compared with shipments during December of past years shows a total of good size. Approximately 3999 horses and mules combined were unloaded during the six-day period.

A slow session was experienced in the mule department again the past week, action proving limited on all classes. Fat cotton mules were inclined to lose some of the activity evidenced several weeks ago, while it was a hard matter to dispose of medium classes and bad-haired material.

London Market.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—"The break in our exchange at New York is disconcerting, but had been expected. Rates will probably touch their lowest level this month. The first recovery may come through modified action at Washington on the treaty.

"The basis for this belief is the political and financial condition of Europe, which is threatening and which requires strong, united action on the part of America, Britain and France. Following the adoption of the treaty in some form by the Senate, it is expected that your markets will grant moderate credits to France, Belgium and possibly Germany.

"This, with the turn of the year, will possibly cause a rally in the exchanges, but there will be no lasting improvement until Europe's productive activity is fully resumed.

"The credits which we have been extending to impoverished countries are entirely banking and commercial transactions. Many manufacturers have grown so rich that they are enabled to extend long credits on high prices without banking assistance.

Loans by the Banks.

"Loans by the banks to the commercial community for the purpose of promoting trade with devastated countries are growing. However, the public flotations of capital, which are numerous, are not connected with financing the impoverished countries. New capital creations this year, apart from Government borrowings, are approximately £200,000,000, against £58,000,00 last year. The public is absorbing the new issues well, thus far.

"The fall in our exchange at New York, to new low levels, has occasioned some American buying of stocks here, especially short-term Government issues. Some Japanese bonds have also been taken.

"Influences affecting the money market in December were so abnormal that an explanation is adbisable. Last Monday the Government borrowed probably £50,000,000 by Ways-and-Means advances to meet interest payments. Ordinarily, this would have been quickly absorbed by fresh purchases of Treasury bills. Owing, however, to the fact that the banks are holding on to their funds to bolster their balance sheets, the effect will be to cause artificial ease in money during the greater part of the month, but abnormally weak Bank of England returns, due to expansion of the bank's liabilities. This condition will be purely temporary, but it is regrettable, especially in view of the position of the exchange."

New York Curb Market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The feature of the Broad Street Curb during the past week was the strength and heavy trading in many of the independent petroleum stocks. New high records were made on several of those issues and the development work which has been in progress, especially in the Homer Field, furnished incentives for aggressive buying of many issues.

Simms Petroleum was bought on a large scale, advancing from 50 to 58¼, and White Oil, which now reports two large producing wells, moved up from 35 to 42, both stocks making new high records.

Gilliland Petroleum, which appeared on the curb at 40, advanced to 45, but later lost part of this gain.

Dominion Oil was another strong feature, moving up from 32⅝ to 35. Commonwealth sold at 41 to 46.

Carib Syndicate, one of the sensations of the trading, representing 100 shares of new stock for one share of old stock, ranged from 44 to 52. Carib trading for which subscriptions at 100 were recently closed, was traded in at 200 to 320.

Houston Oil ranged from 146 to 152. Alto Oil and Gasoline, one of the low-priced issues, was active, reflecting an increased demand as a result of the announcement of contracts.

Following is a list of the day's highest, lowest and closing prices for the most active stocks dealt in on the Broad Street Curb:

Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The market for coffee futures opened at a decline of 10 to 18 points under scattering liquidation or realizing after yesterday's advance. The official cables from Brazil seemed more unsettling than otherwise as the decline in Milreis prices was accompanied by an advance in the rate of Rio Exchange on London, but domestic trade interests were buyers on the decline here and prices rallied later in the morning with March selling up from 15.05 to 15.23. Apprehensions that imports would be restricted by a scarcity of ocean freight room were a factor on the advance. The market closed 5 to 7 points net higher. December 14.80; January 15.00; March, 15.23; May, 15.38; July, 15.43; September, 15.28. Spot coffee nominal; Rio 7s, 15¼; Santos 4s, 25@26c.

Bradstreet's Review.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Bradstreet's review says:

"Reports as to trade distributions and those reflecting industrial conditions as affected by the bituminous coal strike show even more of a contrast than has been hitherto noted. In the former buying, both at wholesale and retail, is still eager, only cheerful reports emanate from most large centers as to early holiday buying and complaints as yet come mainly from those who have not been able to secure adequate supplies of wanted goods. On the other hand, the industrial situation has retrograded rapidly.

"The pinch of want of coal has caused many shutdowns, especially in East and West Central States, and zero weather has caused much suffering to prairie state communities whose fuel supplies have been reduced or disappeared. Especially acute supply conditions are reported at Chicago, where hundreds of thousands of workers have been put down in working time or have been rendered idle, and in smaller industrial centers east and west of that city."

UNITED STATES RAILROAD ADMINISTRATION
DIRECTOR GENERAL OF RAILROADS

PASSENGER TRAIN SERVICE REDUCED AVOID UNNECESSARY TRAVEL

Shortage of coal necessitates a material reduction of train service.

A large number of passenger trains will be discontinued after Sunday, December 7, 1919, and schedules of some remaining trains changed on all railroads in the Southwestern Region, which is the territory St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha south and southwest, and west of the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans, including the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, Texas and some lines in Illinois, Colorado and Nebraska, and the Frisco between Memphis and Birmingham.

Detailed information will be given through the newspapers and by Ticket Agents.

In this emergency, the public is earnestly requested to avoid unnecessary travel within and through the Southwestern Region.

It is very important that those who must travel, and especially those who have made advance purchases of tickets or sleeping car space for any day in December, shall promptly make inquiry of local Ticket Agents and ascertain whether or not trains or cars they contemplate using have been discontinued or their time changed.

The limited train service available will serve to carry only essential travel.

Regional Director.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

QUOTATIONS IN STOCK MARKET FAVOR BUYERS

Week's Range Is Higher Despite Low Record for Foreign Exchange.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"This week's great decline in exchange on London, from $4 to the pound sterling last Saturday to $3.85 yesterday afternoon, brought the rate to a level which represented nearly 21 per cent depreciation. This is possibly the largest discount at which the pound sterling has been quoted in a foreign market since the modern system of international credit was established.

"The famous 'bullion report' to Parliament, drawn up a year or two after the Napoleonic wars, and examining into the currency, the gold premium and the foreign exchanges of that period, cited a 20-per-cent depreciation as the extreme. That discount was quoted on sterling at Hamburg. It occurred during the war and not on return of peace; indeed, while the gold premium in Lombard Street was falling, the foreign exchanges moved rapidly in London's favor as soon as the war was actually over.

"This present extraordinary fall in the pound sterling, as valued in American currency, has occasioned a good deal of vague talk as to what must be happening in financial Europe. Occasionally one hears, even from bankers who ought to know better, the off-hand remark that the recent belligerent states of Europe, not excepting England, are 'insolvent.' A Goverment whose present annual revenue is $6,000,000,000, while its annual interest charges are $1,650,000,000 (the yearly charges on its debt to America are approximately $215,000,000) is scarcely bankrupt. That profound view of the situation had best be left to our weekly organs of the Soviets and the New Social order. But the position which has arisen in foreign exchange is one which needs to be dealt with very soon and very comprehensively.

The Exchange Situation.

"It would have been thus dealt with months ago, but for the fact, set forth emphatically on Thursday by the Chamber of Commerce, that 'pending the ratification of the treaty,' thus establishing a known basis for the continuance of international trade, no adequate credit plans can possibly be established.

"The chamber's resolution goes further, warning both Congress and the commercial world of what is happening and what must happen, in the way of losing our legitimate export trade, so long as the Senate refuses to make peace with Germany and to arrange the status of our future relations with the rest of Europe.

"Coupled, as these warnings from the most responsible quarters are, with a movement as this week's in all the foreign exchanges, it is easily possible to foresee the treaty controversy as a paramount influence before very long, in all the financial markets.

"If, indeed, the entire episode could be considered as an isolated political phenomenon, and without relation to the various incidents and cross-currents which have gradually accustomed the American mind to the course of affairs at Washington, the wonder might more reasonably be, why the Stock Exchange and the other markets had not been governed by it many weeks ago.

"Admittedly a critical economic situation exists as to American trade and industry, as well as to those of Europe. And admittedly it is a situation for which a remedy is possible; the fact that application of the remedy has been prevented for political reasons would seem on its face to be an element of grave importance in financial calculations.

"To what extent it will rise to such a position it remains for the markets to discover. Wall Street, including in that designation all the large financial, industrial and investment interests of the country, is undoubtedly divided in its view as to 'amendments' or 'reservations.' It is as evidently divided in its attitude towards the opposing factions of the Senate. But a time often arrives in such controversies when the business community's knowledge of the actual financial and economic issues, which are immediately at stake, supersedes all other considerations."

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—Oils, steels, equipments and motors represented the heavy issues in today's brief stock market session, while motor specialties and food and tobacco shares represented the firm to strong stocks.

In the main, however, trading consisted of the usual week-end settlement of outstanding contracts, including moderate covering of shorts.

The coal shortage and the Mexican situation were again factors to the extent of reducing dealings to comparatively limited proportions.

Investment rails and sugars were in active demand later. The closing was firm. Sales approximated 500,000 shares.

Flyweight Wilde Isn't the Only One Who Would Give Away Ten Pounds to Get $14,000

BANTAM SHARKEY EASILY OUTPOINTS FLYWEIGHT WILDE

Showing of British Fistic Pride in 10 Round Bout Disappoints 7000 Fans.

By John E. Wray,
Sporting Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

AUDITORIUM, MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 6—Jimmy Wilde may be a world beater, but about 7000 persons assembled here tonight to see the British fly weight champion battle for the first time in this country will never believe so.

Jack Sharkey, the New York bantamweight fighter, swarmed all over the Englishman for the ten rounds of the battling this evening and had a majority of the rounds in his favor.

Entering the ring about nine pounds heavier than his rival, he used his superior strength and stamina to good purpose and bore Wilde round the ring time after time with his powerful rushes.

At the close he was fresher and stronger than his flyweight rival, and so pleased the crowd that they stood up aat the close of the final round and gave him more than a minute of continued cheering.

Wilde's showing was a big disappointment to the thousands of fans who gathered here to watch him display the widely press agented wares. While he showed splendid skill and coolness, and far better boxing ability than his rival, his famed knockout right hand was never in evidence and he failed to land a single blow during the contest that even rocked his American foe.

Sharkey Lands Repeatedly.

On the other hand, Sharkey repeatedly landed heavily on the Briton, and there were times when to the fans at a distance from the ringside it must have appeared as though the visiting fighter were in serious distress. This was not the case, however, as Wilde gave a splendid example of slipping and blocking, and escaped without a scratch or any serious damage other than that incident to the roughing by a 10 pounds heavier foe.

Wilde boxed differently than any little man seen in this country within the memory of man. He stood flatfooted almost all the time, rising on his toes as he stepped in. His leads were accurate and he landed frequently on Sharkey, but without hurting him.

In the point count the experts at ringside varied. Almost without exception, however, they credited Sharkey with at least five rounds and Wilde with an average of three. A more careful estimator of points might have found reason to give Wilde four rounds.

The bout itself was a surprise in many ways. Sharkey surprised every one by the strength he displayed notwithstanding the low weight. He also agreeably astonished his critics by boxing fairly, cleanly for the first six rounds of the fight. After that he fell back into his old and distasteful habit of holding, and marred his margin thereby.

Both Boxers Cheered.

Wilde entered the ring first and was given a fine ovation, which he took serenely, as one to the manner born. Sharkey hopped in a moment later and was given an even greater round of applause than the world's flyweight titleholder. He looked good and showed no traces of the effort made in getting down to the bantamweight limit. The Briton wore gray woolen trunks, while the Italian boy's apparel consisted of Nile-green silk.

As they met in the center of the ring to receive instructions from the referee, Wilde appeared slightly the taller, with perhaps a slight reach advantage. Sharkey seemed deeper of chest and more ruggedly constructed. Wilde's arm development was not so good as Sharkey's.

It was this rugged strength that stood Sharkey in good stead from the first. He opened with a rush in the first round, and just to prove that his stamina was good, he was driving the tired but cool Briton before him like a leaf in a gale as the final gong rang out.

The bout round after round unfolded along the same lines. Each period saw Wilde stepping in coolly and crowding his foe before him around the ring, poking frequent but feeble lefts at the American's head.

Wilde Shows Superior Skill, Science and Generalship Against Heavier Opponent

Sharkey began the first round with a rush, but that was the only round in which he began with this, his customary tactics. Instead, he fought in flashes, resting from time to time and giving ground systematically.

The very first round proved that Sharkey was to be Wilde's master. As Sharkey rushed at the gong he bore back the Briton easily, notwithstanding the latter stabbed him rapidly with lefts to try to hold him off.

But although Wilde's aim was true, the difference in size was against him, and his blows barely checked, without stopping Sharkey. The Briton was overborne, and while off balance took several hard blows. He quickly recovered, however, and came to step into his opponent.

Sharkey leaped and bounded in and out of reach, however, and although Wilde made him miss many blows, he more than held his own.

Each succeeding round to the sixth saw the same tactics by both. Neither man could get knockout weight behind his blows, although Sharkey added to the force of his arm the impetus of his rushing body. Despite this, his blows to Wilde's jaw did not carry fatal force.

Sharkey Does Good Work.

Sharkey, jumping in and out like an angry wildcat, did some surprisingly good work. He found no difficulty in reaching Wilde's head and body with both swings and hooks, time and again. His rushes appeared ferocious, but those close to the ringside observed that Wilde did some remarkable slipping, shifting and swaying his head and body to meet Sharkey's alternate rights and lefts.

The bullrushing to which he was subjected did more to exhaust him than Sharkey's blows, and by the fifth round the roughing had begun to tell.

At this point Wilde for the first time began to give ground voluntarily as Sharkey advanced. He braced in the seventh and held the American even, but in the eighth and ninth he appeared to be succumbing to the rough-and-tumble tactics of his foe. He looked tired, but cheerful, and did not shirk an opportunity to put in a left stab with an occasional right.

Sharkey in the last four rounds, believing himself a winner, began to take liberties with Wilde and put on a little grandstand stuff. He also began to hold, and in this he injured his own cause.

When the tenth arrived Wilde gamely gave all he had left, in an effort to overtake his bounding foe. But Sharkey was fresh as a daisy. He wove in and out, landing swings hard to the Briton's head and body. Twice Sharkey swept his foe to and almost through the ropes. He pulled the Briton back into the ring and the crowd applauded him.

Wilde Shows Great Skill.

In this round as in the ninth Sharkey thought so little of his foe's heralded punch that he dropped his guard and put out his head for Wilde to punch at will. Wilde took him up and nailed him with several hard ones squarely on the noggin. Instead of hurting Sharkey it merely caused him to grin and then tear into Wilde like a tornado. The final gong found him crashing home a blow to the head that sent the Briton reeling back. The referee rushed in just in time to prevent him landing another wallop.

Sharkey's superior weight and strength made his victory possible. At all points of boxing, generalship and defense the Englishman was his superior. It is probable that a British referee would have given Wilde a draw.

Both Men Land Frequently but Neither Shows Enough Force to Score Knockout

There was practically no wagering. Although mythical odds of 3 to 1 on Wilde were mentioned, the doubt as to Sharkey's condition and the fact that his record for three years past does not show a single bout in which he gained a knockout or an official referee's decision, did not incline the speculative fraternity to risk its Christmas shekels.

Those who were present at the afternoon weighing-in conducted by officers of the State Boxing Commission were still less inclined to wager on the Sharkey end of the venture. Sharkey was under a $2000 forfeit to do 116 pounds at 7 o'clock for Wilde. In addition to this, he was forced to weigh in at 3 p. m., a commission rule in this State being that no fighter in the bantam division may weigh more than 10 pounds more than his opponent. As a result, Sharkey trained far below this figure. At noon today he weighed 113 pounds and at 3 o'clock he tipped the beam at 114. Wilde, who weighed a moment later, scaled 107¼. I saw the weights adjusted and know that these figures are exact.

The necessity of staying within the 116-pound limit for four hours longer prevented Sharkey from taking solid food, to any extent, before that hour, and undoubtedly worked a hardship on the boy.

Sharkey was far from being a skeleton, but he seemed drawn at the weigh-in hour. He was very nervous in contrast to Wilde, whose face was placid as a cow pond.

Wilde Gets $11,000.

The commission's physician examined both men and pronounced both without blemish and fit to fight. However, at the 7 o'clock weigh-in Sharkey increased about two pounds. With the bar placed at 116 pounds, he barely moved it.

Wilde received $11,000 for his share. Sharkey was gambling with the management, by a graduated arrangement of percentages which would have assured him about $4000 had the house been filled to capacity. His share was about $3,000.

The attendance fell short of expectations, reaching about 7000. Capacity was said to be 9000. Bad weather conditions were responsible for the failure to pack the building. Snow fell throughout the day.

A richly upholstered crowd viewed the contest with plush hats and 100,000-watt necktie ornaments in evidence on all hands. A few dress suits were noticed among the spectators and a considerable number of women saw the event. Many notables in the pugilistic world were on hand and the demand for press reservations occupied the available accommodations.

The first preliminary was a merry jest. Al Thompson of Cincinnati, aided by the referee, tried in vain to induce Tony Dennis to fight; but all Tony would respond with was one hug after another. The referee threatened to disqualify Tony several times, but failed to make good.

Otto Wallace of Milwaukee found a more willing opponent in the semi-wind-up in Johnny Mendelson, who put up a good bout, but was outpointed in 10 rounds.

Referee Heisner Disappointed at Wilde's Showing

Future City Official Expresses Opinion Kid Herman Would Kayo Briton.

BY WALTER HEISNER,
Referee of the Future City Athletic Club.

AUDITORIUM, MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 6.—Judging Jimmy Wilde by reports preceding his appearance here tonight, he was a big disappointment on his showing against Jack Sharkey. The Englishman's defense for blows to the head is very poor, and had Sharkey been a good puncher he would have stopped the Briton on several occasions.

Wilde carries both hands low at most times, and depends on avoiding leads to the head almost entirely by slipping or ducking. This style of defense failed miserably, as Sharkey landed to the head repeatedly.

Wilde is about the slowest on his feet of any boxer of his weight I remember seeing. His feinting is also poor. What feinting he does, is accomplished by shifting his head from one side to another to draw a lead.

Although Jimmy landed his famous right cross to Sharkey's jaw numerous times, it failed to affect the New York boy in every case but one, in my opinion. The exception was a right cross which the Britisher landed in the seventh round. As was to be expected, Wilde is of the type I call the English school of boxing, and as Sharkey depends mainly on hooks and swings, it was conceded that Wilde would have comparatively easy sailing on this account.

Like Jack Britton.

A straight hitter almost invariably wins from a boxer who depends on hooks or swings. The one impression the boy from Wales did make was that he was willing to trade punches at all times. His coolness under fire was also wonderful.

To give the St. Louis boxing fans an idea of Wilde's style, the best way to convey this information is to refer to the contests Jack Britton took part in at the Coliseum. Britton, it will be remembered, also carried his left hand low and brought it up from his waistline instead of shooting it straight from the shoulder. Britton, of course, is much better on the defense than Wilde.

As to comparing Wilde and Pete Herman, the bantamweight champion, I do not think it is even close from any standpoint of boxing. And if it had been Herman who hit the Englishman on the jaw tonight in the third and fourth rounds with left and right hand swings and hooks instead of Jack Sharkey, who is known to be admittedly a weak puncher, I feel certain that Jimmy Wilde would have a K. O. after his record at this time. Sharkey deserves a great deal of credit for fearlessness, in being willing to take the Briton's much-heralded right on the jaw in order to land a punch himself, and also fooled a lot of wise ones by making the required weight of 116 pounds at 7 o'clock and retaining his strength while doing so.

VALLEY CONFERENCE SCHOOLS ORDERED NOT TO PLAY WITH HUSKERS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 6.—Nebraska will not be allowed to engage in any athletic contest with a member of the Missouri Valley Conference if the members comply with the sentiment of the Board of Governors of the conference which announced after their meeting here today that it is the sense of the board that all athletic relations between conference members and Cornhuskers should be severed.

Kansas has a game scheduled with Nebraska for next November and wants to play the game. The Jayhawkers are the only ones scheduling any contest with Nebraska. K. U. has not intimated what action will be taken but it is likely that the game will be canceled.

The board also announced after the meeting that Oklahoma U. must cancel its contract with Texas U. to play in Dallas or not become a member of the conference. S. W. Byers of Ames, was appointed representative of the conference at the National Collegiate Athletic Association in New York, Dec. 29 and 30.

COAL SHORTAGE DELAYS BASKETBALL OPENING

High School League authorities announced yesterday that the opening of the scholastic basketball league would be postponed until after the Christmas vacation. This action was necessitated by the present coal shortage in the schools.

The schedule was to have been started next Saturday night, with Central meeting McKinley and Soldan playing Cleveland. The squads, however, are expected to continue practice until the opening of the season. Yeatman has received permission to use the North Side Y. M. C. A. for its workouts.

Inter-City Pin Match.

D. J. Sweeney is negotiating with H. J. Bergman of Philadelphia for a home-and-home bowling match between Harry Schaefer of St. Louis and Harry Trucks of Philadelphia. Trucks is one of the most famous bowlers in the East and Schaefer is conceded to be bowling the best tenpins in St. Louis at present. If the match is arranged it will be for 60 games, total pins, 30 games in Philadelphia and 30 in St. Louis, for not less than a $500 purse.

Yeatman Team Banquet.

Thirty-seven Yeatman High School students who have won their athletic letter during the past year in football, baseball, basketball, rack and tennis were guests at a dinner at a downtown hotel last night. The "Y" dinner has become an annual custom at the North Side school. It was announced by the athletic heads that a captain of the 1920 football squad would not be elected until next September.

The Kansas City man tonight did not play up to his usual standard and Greenleaf led during the majority of the 27 innings by 50 points or more. Greenleaf's high run was 20, while the best Allen could do was 19.

Suit to Prevent A. L. Meeting in Chicago Dropped

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—The New York American League Club today withdrew its application for a temporary injunction restraining Ban Johnson, president of the American League, from holding the annual meeting of the league in Chicago next Wednesday. The hearing was held before Justice Samuel Greenbaum of the Supreme Court here last Thursday and an early decision was expected.

According to the New York club some legal points came up which made is advisable to withdraw the injunction.

"The board of directors, however, take the stand that the meeing called for New York next Wednesday is the only legal meeting, and that if five other clubs meet in Chicago at Johnson's call their meeting is illegal," Col. Huston, half owner of the club, said today.

"We base that view on the decision of Justice Wagner in the Mays case, also on the opinion expressed by Justice Greenbaum in open court last Thursday, that the board of directors was the real authority in the league."

Princeton Wins at Soccer.

PRINCETON, N. J., Dec. 6.—The Princeton soccer team today defeated Swarthmore, three goals to two.

Pikers Face Most Strenuous Year in Athletic History

Hard Schedules Arranged in Football, Basketball, Baseball, Tennis and Track.

As a result of the activities at the Missouri Valley Conference annual meeting of coaches and athletic directors at Kansas City, Friday and yesterday, Washington University faces for 1920 the biggest athletic year in its history.

Plans for football, basketball, baseball, tennis and wrestling competition were completed by Coach Dick Rutherford. Temporary arrangements for track and field athletics were made, but these will not reach a definite form for several months.

The most attractive athletic feature that Pikeway followers may look forward to is the next football schedule. The 1920 Pikers will compete against seven schools, five members of the conference, St. Louis University, and either Rolla or Drury. This means that Rutherford's men will start their major competition on the second Saturday of the season and not let up until St. Louis University is played on Thanksgiving day. This plan was adopted by Coach Zuppke the past season, when Illinois met a stiff conference adversary every week.

Kansas Team to Call.

Either Kansas or the Kansas Aggies will call for the first important game. Coach Rutherford will learn definitely from Director Hamilton within a week whether the Jayhawks can call. If it is impossible to arrange a game with the Lawrence eleven, the Kansas Aggies will be the attraction.

On the following Saturday will come Oklahoma, the school which was admitted to the M. V. C., Friday. A week later the first trip of the year will be made, the locals traveling to Ames, Io., to meet the Iowa State College. This will be the first time that Washington has ever met Coach Mayser's team.

Drake will make its biennial call on Nov. 6, this being the Washington homecoming. On the thirteenth the Red and Green will make its first trip since 1916 to Columbia, Mo., to meet the Missouri Tigers.

Heavy Basketball Schedule.

The basketball schedule is also the heaviest one ever arranged for Washington. Five Valley quints will call at Francis Gymnasium, and four will be met on the road. Every school in the circuit with the exception of the Kansas Aggies will be met next winter. The schedule is as follows:

Basketball—Jan. 16 and 17, Missouri at St. Louis; Jan. 28 and 29, Ames at Ames; Jan. 30, Drake at Des Moines; Jan. 31, Grinnell at Grinnell; Feb. 4 and 5, Drake at St. Louis; Feb. 6 and 7, Grinnell at St. Louis; Feb. 13 and 14, Oklahoma at St. Louis; Feb. 20 and 21, Kansas at St. Louis; Feb. 27 and 28, Missouri at St. Louis; March 5 and 6, Grinnell at Grinnell.

Washington will also have its first conference baseball for a decade. Rutherford completed plans with his fellow directors to meet three M. V. C. nines during the season. Missouri, Ames and Drake diamond teams will be played both on the local field and at Columbia. Ames and Des Moines, respectively.

The Conference tennis tournament was awarded to Ames and Washington will send a team which will be favored to win the championship. A dual meet between the Piker and Tiger net stars was arranged by Rutherford and Dr. Meanwell, the squad being scheduled to play both in St. Louis and at Tigertown.

Ames and Washington are interested in wrestling and as a result of the mutual interest a team of wrestlers will be sent this winter to meet the Iowa grapplers in their own gymnasium. Washington and Ames are the only schools of the set which are interested in the mat game.

How St. Louis Won Its Only World's Title

Browns Victors in Winner-Take-All Series

Wild Pitch in Tenth Inning Decided Championship

All the Thrills of the Modern Baseball Classic Abounded in Historic Diamond Struggle in September, 1886, in Which Von der Ahe's Club, Piloted by Comiskey, Won Four Out of Six.

Synopsis of Preceding Chapters.

CHARLES COMISKEY, a sand-lot pitcher, caught the eye of Ted Sullivan, a baseball promoter, over 40 years ago and Sullivan took him under his wing. After playing semi-professional ball at Dubuque, Io., he appeared with that club against the St. Louis Browns in St. Louis where he made a "hit." Owing to an injured arm he had ceased pitching, but had developed into a wonderful first sacker.

The following year he joined the Browns. Only a year later he became the team's manager and assembled a galaxy of stars around him that soon won the hearts of the local fans.

Comiskey introduced several novelties into the game and changed the style of play so much that it opened the eyes of Chicagoans, when his team played there in the 1885 world's series.

Comiskey had set his heart on gaining a world's championship and in 1885 succeeded in tying the series with Anson's colts. The following chapter tells how in the 1896 series, with the same team, he finally succeeded, giving St. Louis its only world's title.

THE BROWNS' GREAT TRIUMPH

There is no doubt that the team assembled by Comiskey at the beginning of the 1886 season was a powerful organization. Even the opposition recognized the fact. "Cap" Anson, leader of the team that tied the 1885 Browns and lost the following world's series to them had this comment to make:

"The St. Louis Browns was a strong organization, a very strong one, and when we met them in a series of games for what was styled at the time the world's championship, in the fall of 1885, they would have been able, in my estimation, to have given any and all of the (National) League clubs a race for the money."

The 1885 series had been a seesaw affair with the base hits scattered between the Alleghanies and the Mississippi River. The first game, which was played in Chicago, was a tie. Of the next three at St. Louis, Chicago took one and the Browns two. Then followed a contest at Pittsburg, which was forfeited to Chicago in six innings. The followers of the Browns always claimed that it was a species of robbery. Of the two games at Cincinnati, which closed the series, each took one, the final result being three apiece with one drawn.

City Agog Over Series.

Owing to the tied series of 1885 St. Louis was all the more worked up over the prospect, when the 1886 championship event drew near.

Riotous, indeed, was the scene at the St. Louis depot when "Der Boss President," and his "Browns" gathered for the trip to Chicago, where the White Stockings were to be met in a winner-take-all struggle, for the world title. All the crackerjacks of the sporting world were there. Bearded men joined with street gamins in lusty cheers whenever a carriage drove up and emptied another hero into the surging mob that had gathered to bid the diamond warriors goodbye and good luck.

"Wrap 'em around their necks, Dave," shouted an admirer, as Foutz made his appearance. And there were cheers for Caruthers, "Doc" Bushong, Latham, and each individual and for the team collectively.

"Make 'em like it, Chris," some one shouted as the justly celebrated president hove into view.

"Bring back two games and we'll have the city hall on wheels down here to haul you uptown when you get back," shrieked another wag.

As the train pulled out the crowd let up a tumultous roar, and then gradually dispersed to the downtown pool rooms, hotel lobbies and bars to stay far into the night, talking over the prospects of the Browns in the great sporting event that was to start the following day, Oct. 18, 1886.

Chicago was extremely confident, Spaulding and Anson having issued an ultimatum of "winner take all or no series."

The White Sox bagged the first game, 6 to 0. Clarkson and Kelly formed Chicago's battery, with Foutz and Bushong working for the Browns. Chicago made 10 hits and four errors with the Browns collecting five safe drives and making as many errors.

"Coaching" New to Chicago.

The game marked the introduction in Chicago of coaching, which at that time was an unheard of practice in the Illinois metropolis.

One of the Chicago papers, commenting on the capers of Arlie Latham, said that "despite the score and the outlook, which never was anything but gloomy for the St. Louisans, Latham refused to be down-hearted and kept up a running fire of conversation that was highly amusing and which immediately won a host of admirers for the visitors, especially Latham."

"It is indeed refreshing," the writer continued, speaking of Latham's capers and the general snappy action of the Browns, who shifted and moved for each batter and play, "after gazing at the silent, statue-like Chicagos."

St. Louis turned the tables on the White Stockings in the second game and Chicago sport writers agreed, after the 12—0 St. Louis victory, that the Browns presented an article of ball and an appearance on the field never before seen on a Chicago diamond.

Caruthers pitched for the Browns and held the White Stockings to one hit, and that bingle, as described by one of the sport writers "was extremely soft, of the scratchy variety."

Caruthers Tries to Repeat.

The next day the Browns made the mistake of letting Caruthers go back into the box. After holding the Chicagoans to one hit Caruthers was so confident that he begged to be allowed to make another shot at the enemy, but he was unequal to the occasion and Chicago took the lead in the series by taking the third game, 11 to 4. Clarkson and Williamson pitched for Chicago, with Gore relieving Caruthers.

Crowd of 12,000 Turns Out to See Browns Whip White Stockings in Fourth Contest

Despite the return with a one-game margin against them the St. Louis fans turned out in force to welcome the Browns to their home town and there were 12,000 persons crowded in the stands and lined up 10 deep around the field when the fourth game was started at Sportsman's Park.

Comiskey and his men responded by coming from behind in thrilling fashion and romping home with a game that almost ruined the cardiovascular systems of the St. Louis rooters. With the score 5 to 2 against them in the fifth inning, the Browns started a rally that netted three tallies. Hundreds of hats were ruined in the celebration when the St. Louis heroes came back in the sixth frame and scored another trio of 8 to 5, the game being called in the seventh inning on account of darkness.

Fans in Fist Fights.

Feeling ran high in this contest. At one critical moment a Chicago sympathizer, to quote a writer of the time, made a casual remark about "St. Louis cranks." Immediately he was the center of a writhing, mauling, punching, mass of humanity. At sight of the mauling match belligerent fans throughout the stands sought out hostile spectators, with whom they had been exchanging verbal hot shots, and simultaneously a score of fist fights started in scattered parts of the stand. Finally the police restored peace and the game proceeded.

Hudson pitched the Browns to a 10-3 victory the following day, giving the Browns a one-game margin and setting the stage for the historic sixth game, in which the Browns cinched the only world's championship that St. Louis ever has owned. Very few St. Louisans of the baseball persuasion got much sleep that Friday night. Pool rooms and gathering places throughout the city were thronged until late hours. The spirit of betting was rampant. Everybody bet until they couldn't find takers.

There was a large element that figured Chicago was merely toying with the Browns. That the present-day charges of "fixing" that follow every big sporting event on which large sums of money are wagered, are not new, is shown by the newspaper accounts of the games. Admirers of the Chicago team cried "Hippodrome" when the Browns won the fourth and fifth games, saying that the White Stockings knew they could beat the Browns whenever they chose and that their choice in this instance was to string out the series to make a seventh game necessary, to swell the gate receipts.

The Chicago News printed a quarter-column attack on baseball in general and the Browns and White Stockings in particular, saying the way games were fixed and the public's credulity expoited was a disgrace and that the two cities should get out the well-known fence rail, tar and goose clothing and give a party for the members of the teams and all parties directly or indirectly connected with the series.

The Deciding Contest.

Chicago started the sixth game as though there were strong basis for the belief in their superiority. They made a run in the second, fourth and sixth innings, while the Browns were helpless. The score was still 3 to 0 against them when the St. Louisans came to bat in the eighth. Tip O'Neil made the first hit off Clarkson in the seventh but was out when he overran third base.

In the eighth, however, the Browns began to land on Clarkson's offerings and set the stage for Arlie Latham to win a place for his picture in every household in St. Louis. One run was in, two men were on base and the call was three balls and two strikes when Latham connected with one of Clarkson's offerings and sent it far into left field, over Dalyrimple's head, for three bases, sending in the two runs that tied the score.

Both teams went scoreless in the ninth and the White Stockings failed in their half of the tenth.

Curt Welch opened the tenth inning for the Browns. He crowded the plate and was waved to first base when Clarkson hit him with a fast one.

Anson of the Chicago team raised a noisy protest and players carried on wordy war on the field rambunctious spectators waged wrangles in the stands. After 15 minutes of barking back and forth the umpire changed his decision and recalled Welch, Anson's declaration that Welch tried to get in the way of the ball having been delivered in the louder tone.

Welch then singled to center field. Foutz was the next batter. He banged one back of the pitcher's box and Williamson, in his eagerness to field the pellet, fumbled and both runners were safe.

Robinson sacrificed, Williamson to Anson, putting men on second and third with only one down. Pandemonium of the 1886 variety, but no less "pandemonious" than the 1919 product, to judge by the 1886 writers' descriptions, was rampant in the stands.

Clarkson, who had been cool and collected in previous crucial moments, was plainly nervous. He rubbed the ball on his sleeve, on his trousers and on the ground, apparently loath to let it leave his hand.

Finally he threw. The pitch was so high that Catcher Kelly didn't even try to stop it, but, like the other members of the White Stockings, stood in a dazed manner as Welch romped in with the winning run.

Then, as an 1886 sport writer tersely cut off his story at this point "the Chicago players packed their bats and got out of town as quickly as possible."

Just as in Games of Today Wordy Wars Were Waged in the Stands and on Field

The gate receipts for the games were as follows: Chicago, Monday, day, $1720.50; St. Louis, Thursday, $2481.62; Friday, $2348.20; Saturday, $2500.

The total receipts were $13,920.10 and the total paid attendance was 40,000.

Half of the total receipts was divided among the 12 members of the Browns, each getting $580 as their share for giving St. Louis its only world's championship.

The other half, $6960, went to Von der Ahe, who out of this sum had to pay expenses of the series.

Statement by Comiskey.

Concerning this exciting struggle Comiskey has dictated the following statement:

The score stood a tie at 3 to 3 in the tenth inning with Curt Welch on third. His own single, an error and an out had put him on the far corner. In order to worry Clarkson, who was pitching, Welch took a long lead off third, too long in fact, for which I was partially responsible as I was coaching. On the first ball pitched Welch was so far away from the bag that Mike Kelly, who was catching, could have nailed him easily. Bushong had let it go by without offering to swing at it.

It was then that Welch showed his usual brainwork. Curt figured that if he kept at the same risky distance from the bag Kelly would signal for a high ball on the inside in order to have the advantage of a quick throw to Burns. It turned out just like that. Clarkson burned one by Bushong's shirt and Kelly in his eagerness to get the ball away to catch Welch slightly fumbled it and it rolled about 10 feet. Welch must have divined the fumble, for he was off like a flash towards the plate. Never in my life, I believe, have I seen a man go as fast. He seemed to skim over the ground.

No one knew better than Kelly what that run would mean. Over $15,000 hinged on it. If Welch made it, it would probably be the day coach for many of the White Stockings as they had backed themselves well if not wisely. If Kelly could get the ball on him Chicago still had a chance, not only at the game, but at the series. If he lost the race, all was over, as it would make the fourth win for us.

As it actually happened Kelly never had a chance, either to get the man or the ball. As Welch slid into the plate I pounced on the ball. Kelly was reaching for it, but I beat him to it, as I was right on the heels of Curt. The ball is still in my possession, plated and boxed.

Great Combination Wrecked.

Von der Ahe's brainstorm wrecked the wonderful combination during the winter of 1887, Foutz, Caruthers and Bushong being sold to the Brooklyn American Association team and Bill Gleason and Curt Welch to the Philadelphia Athletics.

Nothing brought out Comiskey's genius for leadership as the campaign of 1888, and it is doubtful if such a feat has ever been equaled in the annals of baseball as he performed that year. Five of his greatest players—over one-half of his regular lineup—had been transferred to other teams in his own league.

Few of the baseball wiseacres expected the Browns to do much better than last, and Von der Ahe, from having been one of the most popular men in St. Louis, found it convenient to keep out of the sight of the enraged followers of the champions.

Despite the terrific handicap Comiskey did his best to mollify the fans, although his friends tried to persuade him to sever his connection with Von der Ahe. He started out at a fair pace and finished the season like a whirlwind, in first place, with this team:

King, Hudson, Chamberlin and Devlin, pitchers; Boyle and Milligan, catchers; Comiskey, first base; Robinson, second; Latham, third; White, short stop; O'Neill, left field; Lyons, center; McCarthy, right.

Brooklyn, which had profited by the trade for Foutz, Caruthers and Bushong, finished in second place, 52 points behind the winners, while the Athletics, who had been strengthened by the acquisition of Gleason and Welch, beat out Cincinnati for third place.

The next year the race simmered down to a contest between the Browns and Brooklyn, into which the personal element largely entered. Toward the close of the season two games, forfeited by the Browns to Brooklyn, came near breaking up the league, as the board of directors in a special meeting upheld the action of Comiskey in withdrawing from the field in one game and refusing to take his chances against the Flatbush rowdies on the Sabbath, in another. Brooklyn won but the Browns were behind only two games at the finish with this team:

With the end of the '89 season Comiskey's career in St. Louis practically came to a close, although he returned in 1891, after the Brotherhood war, for one season. The final drive for an association pennant saw the Browns in second place—as low, with one exception, as Comiskey ever fell in the association while manager

"Old Rusty" and "The Outlaw"

Being a Story of How Two Sportsmen, With Modern Weapons Were Beaten in Hunt for Giant Gander by Sportsman Who Clung to Hunting Piece Born When Factory-Loaded Shells Were a Novelty.

By Ross Kiner

Ye who love the haunts of nature,
Love the sunshine of the meadow,
Love the shadows of the forest,
Love the wind among the branches.
—Longfellow.

It was in the old days—long before factory-loaded shells were common in the country stores—that Nate bought her. Nate ran a hardware store in the little Illinois town—a sleepy inland village, perched turtle-wise on the edge of the Green River lowlands.

Many's the night I've sat upon a nail keg, big-eyed beside my grandpa, and watched the old-timers come in after shells, the old 10-gauge, 10-pound hammer boys, they were. "Nate! Gim'me 50 shells loaded with 3's." Out would come the 50-hole loading block from its place beneath the counter. In would go the empty cases; then, with funnel and powder scoop, the five rams of "Eagle Ducking" and the ounce of No. 3 shot (if in sky-scraping pintail time) found their respective places; while, as a bass obligato to the soft tenor Zzzz! of the powder and the harsh staccato rattle of the shot, came the Thud-thud-thud! of the mallet on the rammer as Nate forced the black edges home.

Admired by Natives.

It was in the heart of those days that Nate bought Old Rusty. Far from being old and rusty was she when Nate unpacked her, fitted stock and barrels together and snapped the fore-end home. As racy a 10-gauge Damascus, 30-inch hammer Parker as one could wish, and many were the complimentary remarks, such as "She comes up just right," "I'll bet she's a shooter," etc., etc., and many were the covetous glances I—as barefoot boy—bestowed upon her as she stood new and shining in her spick and span factory dress on the gunrack near the window.

Those were the days when pigeon shooting was much in vogue—the days when a man facing the traps with a 12-gauge was laughed at and told to take his popgun to the woods and shoot the little sparrows. Old Rusty bore out the prophecies of her many admirers. A shooter she certainly was. If a friend of Nate's missed a bird or two with his own gun and Nate was on the ground (as he almost invariably was) he was asked for the loan of Old Rusty, and if again he missed, no word of condemnation was uttered—no villification of the gun; they knew full well that anywhere, within and up to a range of 60 yards Old Rusty, if held aright, was deadly.

* * * * * * *

I have told you a little of Old Rusty's advent. Of the gun's subsequent life I can tell you little, but I distinctly remember the last time I heard her voice reverberate along the river marsh—the time she wiped out a cherished hope of mine. It was during the interval between Nate's disposal of the gun and the last time I heard its hollow-throated boom-boom—the boom-boom! that all the old duck hunters knew—that she acquired the title of Old Rusty. Going from hand to hand, sometimes for cash, more often in trade—rebored and restocked—she soon became Old Rusty in truth, but she still could slam the 6's as in the days of her polished youth.

Hunting "the Outlaw."

Bill King and I had been camped on the river since Monday and the luck had gone against us. It was in March, sultry and warm—much more like May weather than the March of other years. Oh! how we wished for a norther to drive the spring flight back. Our wish was gratified with interest. Saturday morning when I awoke I found an inch of snow upon my blankets—snow that had sifted through the chinks in the weather-beaten shanty; while outside the north wind screamed and howled, tore through the scrub willows and beat with icy breath upon the river's breast.

'Bill! Oh Bill!" I yells. "Git up! It's snowing like the deuce. Hike out! We'll nail that gander today."

"The Outlaw," as the boys called him, was a lone Canadian gander—a giant of his race that had haunted the river bottom all the preceding fall and winter, and, so far, no one had been able to get lead into him—although several of the boys had once in a while taken a crack at him with their rifles, but at extremely long range as he sat alone on some snow-covered field.

Re-enter "Old Rusty."

Perhaps a mile down river Hi was camped. A sweeter, gentler spirit and a truer sportsman never lived than Hi—a born musician and a fine shot. Hi had that spring obtained Old Rusty in exchange for a Winchester pump. A born musician I said—why, the only time I ever was really homesick for the old town was, when home on a visit, I sat one evening in his barber shop, listening to some old waltzes that he played for me on his favorite violin. Hi is "asleep" now (may he rest in peace!) and the heart of me is saddened with the memory of him.

All that day and until 4 o'clock Bill and I cut pintail, mallard and bluewing out of the scurrying flocks as they drove hither and thither—blinded by the fast falling snow, confused by the changing wind. About 4 it cleared away and stopped snowing, except for an occasional belated flurry that would form a blue-black cloud against the western sky—miniature snow squalls that would screech and hustle past; then all would be clear again.

The flight had almost ceased and Bill had come over to my blind—a natural one. I had simply dropped down in the thick marsh grass at the mouth of the bayou, kicked around a trifle, and shot from there—anything answered that day with such a storm raging. We were crouching side by side, shivering—debating whether we had better stay a while or head for camp, but all the time keeping watch in case another bunch come in sight, when Bill, who was facing west, dropped like a shot.

The Gander Makes His Appearance.

"Down!" between set teeth he hissed. I did not need the warning; the movement was sufficient. Squirming carefully around, I soon was facing west beside Bill.

"The Outlaw!" Bill whispered, and sure enough, perhaps a mile down-river and a good 70 yards above the marsh, with steady sweep of powerful wings, straight toward us came that gander—etched against the burnished copper of that March sunset and ever drawing nearer.

Fumbling with cold-stiffened fingers for some shells of BB's, we waited—tense with expectation. Of a sudden as we watched—peering Indian-like between the blades of dead slough grass—the Outlaw crumpled. A spurt of fleecy smoke—boo-oom! —and as the report reached us I could have sworn I heard the thump! as that gander crashed stone dead upon the half-cut meadow.

"Come on," growled Bill, staggering stiffly to his feet; "let's hike for camp. Hi and Old Rusty have beat us out."

KLONDIKE 'SOURDOUGH' RETURNS HERE ON VISIT

Charles Spann, Absent 25 Years, Struck It Rich in Gold Fields of Alaska.

Charles Spann, a real "sourdough" from the Klondike, with his face seamed and reddened by 22 years of continuous Arctic weather, but hale and vigorous at 54 years, stopped in at the Post-Dispatch yesterday to see how it had changed since he last visited it, 25 years ago, and incidentally told a tale of adventure in the gold fields that makes some of the frontier fiction look pallid and stale.

He has been snowbound, eaten raw dog meat, worked for a grub stake, struck it rich, been cheated out of everything, struck it rich again, fought a rifle battle with claim jumpers, smashed a bank that tried to "law" him out of his claim and all the rest of it. At present he is visiting his brother-in-law, Porter Jones of Kirkwood, but he is going back to Alaska in March.

Spann was born over in Venice, Ill., and lived there until he ran away from home at the age of 15. He knocked around the country until, in 1896, he found himself in Walla Walla, Wash., working as a railroad mechanic.

Had Dead Man's Map.

"One of my best pals," he said, "was Burt Coile, a train dispatcher. His dad was an old timer from the Klondike. One day an old prospector was hauled into a hospital in Walla Walla, ready to cash in. Before he died he sent for Burt's dad and gave him a map of a claim in the Omenika country, up in British Columbia. He said he hit it rich down there, but got sick on canned meat and had to come out. He told Burt's dad he could have the claim.

"Well, none of us knew anything about prospecting, but it looked good to us, so Burt and myself and another fellow got 27 ponies and a stake and lit out on the 1500-mile overland trail in June of '96.

"We couldn't make it through. Forest fires turned us off from the Omenika country, and we decided to push on for the Klondike. A blizzard caught us and all but one of the ponies died. We had to leave most of the grub behind. We shot porcupines and ate the meat raw, and both my partners got meat fever. We made it to a settlement, and I left them there and pushed on. I got there."

Made Strike in 1905.

Spann sketched rapidly over the vicissitudes which marked his search for gold up to 1905, when he made a strike on Dome Creek. He sank a shaft more than 100 feet deep to bed rock.

"There's where I began taking out money," he said. "My partner and me took out $4000 in two weeks, and we were just getting started when the bank tied us up with an injunction. It seems the bank claimed some sort of a title on our claim. We busted the injunction and in three weeks we took out $38,000 more and they tied us up again.

"Then the lawyers and the Judges began squabbling over it and I took to the hills and left it with my lawyer. I made a little strike now and then and came back to pay it to my lawyer.

"Well, sonny, it took just 12 years for the Judges to figure out that we was entitled to our claim. Then we went back to work the hole, and what do you reckon we found? The damn thieves had sunk a hole on the next claim, tunneled under us and took about $350,000 out of there.

Fought Claim Jumpers.

"My pal, 'Caribou Bill' Dietering, and me still had a little fraction of a claim right near there, and we started sinking a hole on it. The second day we seen 15 gunmen moseyin' around, and Bill and me got our rifles and went down to where our men was diggin'. Jack Ridenor was the chief gunman.

" 'Where you and Bill a-going to?' he says to me and Bill; and I says: 'Why, jest down the creek a ways, to see if we could scare up a rabbit,' I says, slippin' a soft-nose shell into my gun.

" 'Well, I w'sh you luck,' he says, and turned to go.

" 'I drawed drawed a bead on another one of them, and told them to put up their hands. When I done that, Ridenour reached for his gun, and Caribou let him have it, right under the arm. He dropped him, and the rest of them run.

"The U. S. Marshal come up there right shortly and told me I was under arrest. I told him I wasn't under no arrest until I called up my lawyer, which I done right away.

" 'Shall we fight it out?' I asks him, 'or give in to that feller?' and he told me to give in to the Marshal, and he would bond me out.

Robbed Mine of $165,000.

"Well, sonny, it took the jury jest eight minutes to let us out of that scrape. Then we finished sinking the hole on the fraction, and blamed if thed hadn't tunneled under that, too, and took $165,000, leavin' it as dry as a bone.

"We lawed 'em and lawed 'em, and the banker, that was at the bottom of it all—we busted him and his bank. He tried to save a little of what he had stole from us, and he gave his wife $100,000 in dust, which she didn't do a thing but sew up in her dress and run away to Seattle with another feller, and now that banker is fishin' for salmon down on the coast, and a-wearin' patched overalls."

Spann fumbled reminiscently with his watch chain, which, incidentally, is composed of small gold nuggets and fragments of a mastodon's tusk, which he dug out of one of his claims.

"It looked like I was pretty well busted, too, but there's always a way to get a stake again. I come down out of the hills in the summer of 1917, and I found out we'd been at war two or three months, so, like a good Yankee, I done my bit by going to work for the Railroad Commission. While I was doin' that, my pal made another big strike over in the Kantisinar country, and when the war was over I went over there."

VETERAN OF KLONDIKE VISITING AT KIRKWOOD

CHARLES SPANN ...

By way of showing that there are more ways than one of turning an honest penny, Spann told how he bought a $12 phonograph at a settlement store, and two records, namely: "I Love a Lassie," and "The Cowboy's Lament." He took the outfit up into the hills, and in the evening, when he played it, the chief of the local Siwash tribe came in.

He inspected the house carefully, to see that there was no other source of the "music," and then he talked trade with Spann. The prospector finally consented to trade the phonograph and records to the child of the forest for $700 worth of beaver pelts. The chief took it home and played it all night, and then broke the spring, which Spann repaired the follwing day—for $200 worth of additional pelts.

He and his partner are still working the Kantisinar claim. Spann declined to say how much it is paying.

"I'm not a millionaire yet," he said, "but if things goes right in the next few months, I wouldn't trade jobs with anybody. We're taking out some money there."

While commenting on the many changes that have taken place since he left the country, Spann was asked what he thought about the high cost of living.

"It feels right natural," he said. "You know, we don't use anything less than a quarter in Alaska. I hadn't seen a dime for 20 years. We pay $67 a day for a team there. Yes,, the prices here come right natural."

PROMPTLY REPORT FAILURE TO RECEIVE ANSWERS.

$100,000 PAID FOR TRACT TO ENLARGE FORD MOTOR PLANT

Large Site Acquired on North Side of Duncan Avenue, Separated From Previous Holding Only by Railway Switch.

RUMORS OF MANY DEALS NEAR CLOSE

Negotiations Reported to Be Progressing for More Spacious Quarters for Big Banking Institutions.

By Berry Moore.

The Ford Motor Co. has bought 482.3x193x10 feet of ground on the north side of Duncan avenue, beginning about 93 feet west of Sarah street and bounded on the east and north by a railroad switch connecting with the tracks of the Wabash Railway in Mill Creek Valley.

The Ford company has a plant at the southwest corner of Forest Park boulevard and Sarah street, occupying a site with a frontage of 300 feet on Forest Park boulevard, 244.7⅝ feet on Sarah street and 52 feet on Duncan avenue. It is only separated by the railroad switch from the ground on Duncan avenue acquired by the company. While there has been no announcement on the subject, it is understood that the company has plans for extending its plant on a large scale.

The Duncan avenue plot comprises 82,000 square feet and was owned by the Quality Realty Co., of which Richard A. Boyle and James E. Fogg are the principal stockholders. The consideration for the ground, is is understood, was approximately $100,000, all of which was paid in cash. The plot is embraced in a tract extending from Sarah street to Boyle avenue and from Duncan avenue to Forest Park boulevard. It was formerly owned by Mrs. Grace A. Leathe, widow of Samuel Leathe, who disposed of it to the Quality Realty Co., which has equipped it wtih rail facilities and subdivided it into sites for industrial plants.

Among the interests represented in this industrial section, are the American Radiator Co., the Linde Air Products Co., the Ahrens & Ott Manufacturing Co., the Bradbury Marble Co., the Mutual Brewing Co., the Studebaker Automobile Co. and several others of more or less importance.

Luyties Plot in Demand.

Offers have been made recently for the northeast corner of Forest Park boulevard and Boyle avenue, 300x187 feet, listed for sale with the Switch Property Department of the Mercantile Trust Co. This plot is owned by Herman C. G. Luyties, and adjoins the site of the plant of the Sanitol Chemical and Laboratory Co., of which he is president, at the southeast corner of Laclede and Boyle avenues.

According to realty circles, several deals have been virtually concluded for the establishment of extensive plants in St. Louis, as well as for the erection of large structures in the wholesale district of the business center of the city, but details in these connections were not available. R. King Kauffman, vice president of the Mercantile Trust Co., is arranging two transactions that will vie with the most important of the year.

There are also progressing negotiations in behalf of large banking establishments which require larger quarters, but owing to the difficulties to be surmounted and the price differences to be harmonized, developments, in these instances naturally lag. The site sought in one instance embraces a half block in the retail center of the city, and a multiplicity of ownerships and leases or lease holds. This operation is being engineered by Paul Jones Jr.

Vacant Trust Company Building.

There is more or less conjecture as to what will be the future of the American Trust Co.'s building, on Locust street, between Seventh and Eighth streets. The trust company, which has been bought by W. R. Compton & Co., of which W. R. Compton is president, on Jan. 1 will occupy the first floor and basement of the new Compton Building, formerly the Mercantile Club Building, at Seventh and Locust streets, while the Title Guaranty Trust Co., which formerly held the majority of the stock in the American Trust Co., with which it shared the American Trust Co. building, will shortly remove to its former quarters on the first floor of the Title Guaranty Building, at Seventh and Chestnut streets, of which it has taken a five-year lease.

As was told in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, Henry C. Hopkins, vice president of the American Trust Co., will be connected with the Compton company as vice president of the new and larger trust company. J. C. Van Riper, former president of the American Trust Co., will continue as president, and Mark A. Anderson and James M. Rohan as vice presidents of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., which is said to have the only complete set of abstracts to titles of real estate in St. Louis.

Edward L. Bakewell has concluded several large transactions, one of more than ordinary importance. So pressing has become the activities of his office that he has added several salesmen to his staff, including his brother, McNair Bakewell.

Many West End Sales.

Theodore L. Coleman Jr of J. I. Epstein has effected a record number of sales during the week, which soon will be ready to announce. These include residences, apartments and flats of all types and several choice lots in the West End which hive been acquired for sites for handsome homes.

LARGEST LOAN OF WEEK BASED UPON $800,000 PROPERTY

The largest loan of the week, recorded yesterday, was made to the Seventeenth Street Realty Co., the deed naming Edward K. Love as trustee for the bondholders, the money having been advanced by the Edward K. Love Realty Co. The trust deed covers the property at the northeast corner of Seventeenth street and Washington avenue, occupied by a modern nine-story business building valued at $800,000, and regarded as exceptional security for the $350,000 loan.

The building was erected by George Warren Brown of the Brown Shoe Co., whose building operations in the city have been on a large scale and who has been the moving power in the upbuilding of upper Washington avenue and Locust street.

The bonds secured by this building and site are in $500 and $1000 denominations, bear 5½ per cent interest and run from one to 10 years. The rate is considered very good considering the excellence of the security.

LIEBKE 5-ACRE PROPERTY IN COUNTY SOLD FOR $35,000

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. announces the sale of the Liebke property at the northeast corner of the McKnight road and Clayton division of the United Railway car line. It contains five acres fronting 554 feet on the railways right-of-way and 350 feet on the McKnight road. It is improved with a residence containing 10 rooms and two baths with hot water heat. Also several outbuildings, including a four-room cottage. The tract contains numerous fruit and shade trees and shrubbery. The purchase price was in the neighborhood of $35,000.

The company also reports having sold the 11-room residence at 5959 Clemens avenue for John W. Thompson to Daniel Breck, represented by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

Also sold a lot 67x140 feet on south side of Delmar boulevard, 200 feet west of Clara avenue for Robert W. Powell and sisters to Harry Horowitz.

ABOUT HALF OF 600 LOTS IN HOMESITES SOLD IN TWO WEEKS

The Olive Street Terrace Realty Co. claims to have established a record in the sale of subdivision property in St. Louis. About 300 lots, aggregating $300,000 in value, have been sold in two weeks. Old real estate men say that this record has never been equaled in St. Louis. As there are approximately 600 lots in Homesites, about one-half of it has been sold in less than 15 days.

Although it has been officially stated that 14,000 men will be employed in the new industrial district, real estate men and others in a position to know say this is too small an estimate, their opinion being that there will be more than 25,000 men employed there when the factories under way are completed.

24-SUITE APARTMENT SOLD BY TEXAS OWNER FOR $125,000

The Bottorff Realty Co. reports having sold the Ettrick apartments at the northwest corner of Forest Park boulevard and Euclid avenue, comprising 24 suites and three stores, to the Varnham Investment Co. for A. S. Everest of Pharr, Texa represented by O. V. Parkinson. The apartments have four and five rooms and built-in buffets and book cases, and bring an annual rental of $14,500. COAL STRIKE COST TO BE EXTENDED FAR INTO FUTURE

Home Builders and Renters Will Be Paying for It a Year Hence, American Contractor Says.

APPEAL MADE TO CONTROL BODIES

Shortage of Building Trades Labor Noted Despite Unfavorable Weather and Reduced Volume of Activities

Home builders and renters will be paying for the current coal strike at this time next year, is the matured judgment of the American Contractor editor, who says: "Construction work has slowed down in all parts of the country. Serious as is this delay in providing housing and factory facilities, far more serious in its future effects on rents and the cost of homes is the complete suspension of the production of building materials, such as brick, tile, lime and the curtailed production of steel and steel products."

Much of the high cost of building experienced in the United States since the armistice was signed, resulted from the fuel restrictions placed on material manufacturers during the war, the editor of that periodical says. There were no stocks of these materials to take care of the abnormal demand when construction began to revive. During the summer just past production did not meet the current demands, to say nothing of building up reserve stocks. Now comes the coal strike and a determined shortage of fuel in glass plants, steel mills, brickyards, tile and lime kilns. Many of these now are closed down, and more are closing daily. The spring building activities will be faced with an unprecedented materials shortage and the price trend will continue upward.

Heavy Price for Economic Folly.

The more it costs to build homes and apartments, the fewer will be built; the fewer built, the higher will go the rent level, is his conclusion. On top of present ills and inconvenience incident to the coal strike, the public must look ahead to these future embarrassments, and count them in as part of the price to be paid for this economic folly.

Vigorous representations to the Fuel and Railroad Administrations were made the past week by the National Federation of Construction Industries, to the end that the construction industry and manufacturers of building materials might enjoy the most favorable consideration possible under the circumstances on the fuel and transportation priority lists. Assurance was forthcoming in Washington that no unnecessary interference would be made in the industry.

Douglas fir lumber advanced last week from $2 to $7 per 1000 feet, according to grades and sizes. Brick in the Eastern markets advanced as much as $2 per 1000 in some instances, and in the Western markets, notably Kansas City, the quotation on common brick stood at $20 per 1000, and the supply scant. St. Louis authorities also report brick stocks very limited.

Noticeable Labor Shortage.

There is reported to be noticeable shortage of building trades labor in all the larger cities, notwithstanding the fact that unfavorable weather conditions and the coal strike has greatly reduced the volume of building activities.

During the last week in November the contracts actually awarded in the territory east of the Missouri and north of the Ohio rivers, according to the F. W. Dodge Co. statistics, totaled $55,360,850. While this is approximately $1,000,000 more than the total for the preceding week, it is much less than the weekly average for October, which was in excess of $70,000,000.

Classified according to purposes for which the structures are to be used, industrial leads the list in money value, at $21,546,200, with residential building second at $13,258,550. Residential building has been first for the greater part of the spring and summer.

The money market, in so far as real estate and building mortgages are concerned, shows a tendency to tighten.

ST. LOUIS WINS BIG CONCERN FROM OMAHA

Cleveland Drug and Surgical Co. Decides to Transfer Its Headquarters to This City.

The W. G. Cleveland Drug and Surgical Co. has leased the four-story building at 1109 Locust street, opposite its present quarters. This company opened its St. Louis branch in March, 1918, and in the intervening period has outgrown its original home.

W. G. Cleveland, head of the company, is also president of the W. G. Cleveland Co. of Omaha, Neb. So satisfied is he with the growth of the house here, that he has convinced the stockholders that St. Louis is the logical headquarters for his business, and it has accordingly been decided to largely increase the capitalization of the local concern, and to merge with it the Omaha corporation. St. Louis, being the drug center of the United States, and a central point for the distribution of surgical and hospital supplies, has therefore become headquarters of the new corporation.

The Omaha house, which covers practically all the Western and Northwestern states, will be operated as a branch establishment. The force of traveling salesmen will be materially increased.

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. represented the W. G. Cleveland Co. and George Streif of the Mercantile Trust Co. represented Thomas Dunn, owner of the property.

The Martin-Breitt Co. also reports that the Conrad Grocer Co. has leased the basement in the Victoria Building and also extended its lease on the store at 409 North Eighth street. The basement contains more than 12,000 square feet, and will be used as a retail salesroom, bakeshop and for storage.

It further reports that the Crystal Electric Shop, a new corporation, organized by W. P. Kelley and E. G. Egbers, has leased the store at 503 North Ninth street from Ed and Louis Melshiemer.

MARYLAND TERRACE SITES DEMAND KEEN

Development of That High-Class Homes Addition a Feature of Realty Market.

The Davis Realty Development Co. reports renewed interest in Maryland terrace, in University City, which is being offered by the company in lots to suit for homes of high type.

Absorption of sites in this addition for high-class homes has been a feature of the realty market, and there is no cessation in the demand for the lots with the advent of winter, according to Everett Davis, president of the company.

Many imposing homes have been erected in the addition, and plans for others are being made. Not a few of these homes have been erected by the Davis Realty Development Co., which has resold them to families who now occupy them.

SITES IN SHAFTESBURY HEIGHTS SELLING ACTIVELY, AGENTS SAY

Notwithstanding the inclement weather, Knobeloch & Prettyman continue to report sales of lots in Shaftesbury Heights, an attractive subdivision in the northwestern part of University City, owned by the Balson Realty and Auditing Co. A total of 75 lots of this addition has been sold since the property was offered at special sale. As a rule the purchasers are erecting homes.

The special sale will be continued, the sales agents state, until all the lots have been sold.

Special sales of lots in the winter are an innovation in St. Louis, but are a regular thing in Los Angeles and Detroit, according to Prettyman, who has directed sales of this type in those cities.

CITY REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

The Best Christmas Gift

Suppose someone had made you a present of a corner lot on King's Highway and Delmar twenty-five years ago. It could have been bought for a song then and would mean a fortune to you now. The best Christmas gift for the boy, the girl, the wife, the mother or for yourself, is a lot in HOMESITES, in the heart of St. Louis' new Industrial District.

Twenty million dollars are being spent on 37 factories which will employ 14,000 men. These men with their families and dependents—50,000 people—will want homes in walking distance of their work to save carfare. HOMESITES is the only first residence district in this section. Shrewd investors are buying lots in

Homesites

Nearly three hundred of St. Louis' best business men—natural-born money-makers — have bought lots in HOMESITES. They know the big boom is coming in this District. They know that by buying good land here now they are taking no risks and can be certain of a quick profit, as values rapidly advance. Many purchasers will erect moderate priced homes for sale. Come out today and look over this new Industrial District. It is the most interesting and most remarkable development St. Louis has ever known. Take Union Av. car to Natural Bridge. See our representative at Natural Bridge and Goodfellow. Salesmen on the ground all day Sunday.

Of 5 rooms on Kirkham and Hull av., convenient to car line; large lot; cheap.
DOSENBACH REALTY CO., Maple and Hodiamont.

HOUSE—For sale. The average buyer starts out looking for a house in perfect condition —no repairs necessary, no painting necessary, decorating, etc.—and passes up many a bargain because at first sight the property is not attractive; there is a 6-room house at 119 W. Cedar av., Webster, that offers such an opportunity; this location is splendid—school is just around the corner, churches and stores, picture show and transportation are all within two blocks; the lot is 50x150 and is worth $1500; the house is frame, 2-story, has a sleeping porch on the south; plumbing and heating plants are in good condition; minor repairs only are necessary; what this property needs more than anything else is personal attention, painting and decorating; the owner is a nonresident and appreciates the fact that he cannot properly care for the property; he has therefore reduced his price to $3250 cash; we can arrange a first deed of trust for $1800; it will take $1450 cash to swing the deal; study this proposition; come out and look the house over; picture this house painted white with green trim, front porch glazed and the yard shaped up, trees trimmed and artistic shrub planting; there is an opportunity here for the man who is willing to take hold of a house and shape it up for the spring market, and you can live in the house while you are shaping it up; chances are, however, that you will not want to sell, as it can be made over very cheaply into an attractive and cozy little home.

IMPROVED PROPERTY FOR SALE

A General Increase in St. Louis R. E. Values has not yet reached its zenith. Look these over carefully.

One of the cleanest pieces of income property it has been our privilege to list for some time is that at 1365-67 Hodiamont Av., northwest corner Minerva; two stores, one with living rooms in the rear; two flats on the second floor; steam heat; lot 50x90. The construction of this building and its general location suggests that it is a first-class piece of property in every respect. The rentals are $1,470 per annum, which is very low considering the quality of the property.

We invite the attention of the small investor to the N. W. cor. of Hickory and 18th street—two and one-half story brick building, 10 rooms, gas, bath, furnace—all street improvements. This house has been a steady renter; not a vacancy in twenty years. It is clear, and can be purchased on very liberal terms. Price $4,500.

Over in the Cathedral Parish we have for sale 4209 Maryland Av., substantially built; 9-room residence, furnace heat, bath, combination lighting fixtures. It is a very good home and very well located. Price $5,500.

The owner of 4060 McPherson Av. advises us that her home is very much too large, and that she is very anxious that we should dispose of it. It is a substantial three-story brick, 11 rooms, hot-water heat, hardwood floors; a very good home and convenient to excellent car service—not very far from the Marquette School; in the Cathedral Parish; and many other advantages. At the price offered it seems most reasonable. The owner is not going to haggle over a small difference. Now priced at $6,000.

We can make a very good proposition to anyone interested in a small home like 1218 Shawmut place. This is a two and one-half story brick residence; 7 rooms, bath, finished basement and laundry, furnace, all street improvements; convenient to the Page or Wellston cars. The property is clear and the owner will take back a liberal deed of trust. Price $4,500.

You can buy 1365 Temple Place on very liberal terms; two and one-half story brick residence, 7 rooms, reception hall, hardwood floors, electric lighting fixtures, bath, furnace, street improvements made. It is convenient to the Page or Wellston cars—which enables you to get downtown to the business centers very promptly. Price $5,000. Can arrange very liberal terms.

If you are employed in the General Motors Plant or any of the numerous new concerns going into this district, it would be well worth your while to look at 2607 Union boulevard—a neat little two-story brick residence, 7 rooms, combination lighting fixtures, hardwood floors, tile bath, finished basement and laundry, steam heat, street made—everything in spick and span condition. Price $5,500. Can arrange liberal purchasing conditions.

You have no idea how attractive this home is until you see it—5583 Vernon Av., southern exposure, two and one-half story brick, hardwood floors and finish cabinet mantels, electric lighting fixtures, bath, finished basement and laundry, furnace heat. Most excellent home, in a first-class locality. Convenient to Hodiamont car or the Page car. Priced $6,300.

Write for catalogs of flats, residences and other Real Estate we have for sale.

ITALIAN ROLE LATEST FOR LAURETTE TAYLOR

Distinguished Actress Stars in New Manners Play, "One Night in Rome."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—One vaguely recalls a one-act play at the Cort Theater several years ago in which Laurette Taylor acted the role of an Italian woman. The matter of the play has entirely faded from memory, but the manner of the actress remains curiously vivid. Possibly a similar recollection led J. Hartley Manners to write "One Night in Rome," which was produced at the Criterion Theater Tuesday night, a drama which evidently has been fashioned to display to best advantage his talented wife's virtuosity. Surely the husband-playwright left no opportunity unimproved for Miss Taylor to impress herself upon her audience in what, for her, was an unusual character.

Through two of the three acts Miss Taylor moved as an Italian woman of evident culture, whose past life was wrapped in mystery. She was known as L'Enigme, a charlatan, who conducted a fortune-telling establishment in London and whose moods were as changeable as the colors of a chameleon. She could purr at her clients with sleek amiability, or she could assume toward them a manner of utmost brusqueness. It was evident at all times that she was a woman of uncommon mental alertness.

So much of the opening act was given to L'Enigme's reading of the palms and foretelling the future of the members of a house party—the locale of the play was England and the house party was in a state of British ennui—that the story gathered impetus slowly. At length she read the palm of a young Englishman, Richard Oak, who was about to depart on a mission to Africa. He interested her at once. The crystal told her that he was struggling in indecision over a loveless engagement to a young woman and that he also was indecisive by nature.

In the next act Richard has invited this Italian sorceress to his uncle's house in the country as an attraction at a society bazar, and here, by a plausible set of circumstances she is suspected of an attempt to steal an opal of great value. The strange demeanor of another Italian guest at the party gives emphasis to the atmosphere of mystery which the author was always at pains not to relieve, though by this time Mr. Manners had established his supposedly Italian heroine as a linguist of rare attainments and a woman of vast experience with the world.

A Surprising Denouement.

In the last act, when Richard's loveless engagement has been broken and he has come to the wrongly suspected Enigme's aid before asking her to be his wife, the labored mystery of the woman is dissipated. She is not, as the Italian guest had hinted, an adventuress who was responsible for her titled husband's death one night in Rome seven years before. Her profligate husband had taken himself off by the pistol route for reasons that Eugene Brieux has already discussed in one of his sociological plays.

The path to happiness was thus opened to Richard and L'Enigme, but not until she had disclosed, by the simple process of removing her wig and changing her accent, that she was not an Italian at all, but an English woman. Thus Mr. Manners' new play ended with a fresh surprise and also with a tour de force for Miss Taylor.

Miss Taylor portrays the character with evidences of her extreme versatility and with full reliance upon that personal distinction which has made her one of the most popular of our stars. In manner, gesture, volubility and speech she gave a close imitation of the Latin race from which supposedly she sprang. The feeling she put into the portrayal seemed sincere and deep, and she claimed her audience's sympathy even in those episodes when to all appearances she was a charlatan. It was an adroit exhibition of acting.

There was not much opportunity in the play for her associates, though they were nearly always in view. Philip Merivale, H. Cooper Cliffe, George Mahorerie, Barry Baxter, Mrs. Felix Morris, Louise Beaudet and Helen Blair were some who shone, but only in the reflected light of the star.

Elsie Janis Stands 'em Up.

"Elsie Janis and Her Gang" returned to Broadway Monday night at the George M. Cohan Theater, to the tunes of "Over There" and "Madelon." Miss Janis, as will be remembered, spent more than a year among the men of the A. E. F., and scarcely anyone else has so much right as she to stage a soldier show.

In an introductory speech she said she could not get anyone to write the lines, because no one would have anything to do with a war subject. So she wrote them herself, and added that she could steal jokes as well as anyone. And the old jokes are all there. The M. P. is roasted and booed, the buck private from Painted Post, N. D., finds his French vocabulary inadequate; the private fails to salute the Second Lieutenant, and the negro soldier who ran away tells of hearing the roar of a German shell twice, "once when it passed me and once when I passed it."

But the first-night audience, largely of overseas men and their wives and sweethearts, cheered the little star deliriously, cheering as they used to cheer for "Elsie" when she dropped into a hut, climbed upon a table and started things going. And everyone will get his last cent's worth out of this "bombproof revue" who can rise to the spectacle of a dynamic young woman taking a show and glueing it together and putting it over as a worth-while entity through sheer force of personality. Miss Janis is sometimes a young French Lieutenant in uniform; but again she dons a white silk dress and is the Elsie Janis of 1914. In her company are several overseas men, some with wound stripes on their tunics, who never acted before and who, as Miss Janis put it, may never act again. But they're having a great time now.

In addition to the great spectacle drama, "Aphrodite," which has been discussed in these columns, there were two other new plays during the week. "Three's a Crowd," by Earl Derr Biggers and Christopher Morley, appeared Tuesday night at the Cort Theater, and "My Lady Friends," a farce by Emil Nyitray and Frank Mandel, made its bow Wednesday night at the Comedy Theater.

Wash with Marseilles soap, dry with a chamois skin, and finally render bright with an old piece of silk. To can pumpkins, cut pumpkin in small sections and peel, place in a pan with enough water to cover and cook until soft, then put in jars, screwing the lids on tightly so the air will not get in.

ANXIOUS HOUSEWIFE.—(1) See answer to M. E. L. (2) Boiled Ham: soak several hours or overnight in cold water to cover. Wash thoroughly, trim off hard skin near end of bone, put in a kettle, cover with cold water, heat to boiling point and cook slowly until tender. A ham weighing from 12 to 14 pounds should cook for 4 or 5 hours. Remove kettle from range and set aside, that ham may partially cool; then take from water, remove outside skin, sprinkle with sugar and fine cracker crumbs, and stick with cloves one-inch apart. Bake one hour in a slow oven.

CONSTANT READER.—Aluminum is a metallic element, next to oxygen and silicon, the most widely distributed. It is not found native, but in combination chiefly as an oxide. The elementary nature of aluminum was recognized by Davy and others, but the metal was not isolated until 1828. Aluminum forms alloy with most of the metals. Those with copper, silver and tin are much used on account of their color, hardness and stability, and the ease with which they are worked. Those with copper are called aluminum bronzes. The aluminum bronzes contain no other metals besides aluminum and copper.

McGINNISS.—Chocolate Fruit Cake: One-third cup butter, 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup breakfast cocoa, yolks of 3 eggs, ½ cup of cold water, 1¼ cups bread flour, 3 teaspoonfuls baking powder, spoonful of cinnamon, ¼ teaspoonful salt, 1-3 cup candied cherries, 1-3 cup raisins, seeded and cut in pieces, 1½ tablespoonfuls of brandy, 1-3 cup of walnut meats, cut in picees; whites of 3 eggs, 1 teaspoonful of vanilla. Cover fruit with brandy and let stand several hours. Mix ingredients in order given, and bake in deep cake pan 50 minutes. Cover with White Mountain Cream, and as soon as the frosting is set, spread as thinly as possible with melted chocolate.

Molasses Cookies: 1 cup of molasses, ½ cup of shortening butter and lard mixed, 2½ cups bread flour, 1 tablespoon of ginger, 1 tablespoon of soda, 2 tablespoons of warm milk, 1 teaspoon of salt. Heat molasses to boiling point and pour over shortening. Add dry ingredients mixed and sifted. Chill thoroughly. Toss one-fourth of mixture on a floured board and roll as thinly as possible; shape with a small round cutter, first dipped in flour. Place near together on a buttered sheet and bake in a moderate oven. Gather up the trimmings and roll with another portion of dough. During rolling the bowl containing mixture should be kept in a cool place, or it will be necessary to add more flour to dough, which makes cookies hard rather than crisp and short.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of dear son and brother, Private Charles H. Herpst, who died at Chemical War Service Camp, Willoughby, O., Dec. 7, 1918, where he bravely gave his life for his country.
In his lonely grave he's sleeping,
As the shadows onward fall,
And our lonely hearts are weeping;
No more his presence we can call.
Do not ask us if we miss him;
Oh, there's such a vacant place;
Oft we think we hear his footsteps,
Or we see his smiling face.
Not gone from memory, not gone from love,
But gone to a Fatherly home above.
Sadly missed by
HIS PARENTS, SISTERS, BROTHER AND BROTHER-IN-LAW.

In memory of Otto F. Schmidt, who died Dec. 5, 1918:
Just one year ago you left me,
How I miss you, Otto, dear,
And remember all your kindness
As I drop a silent tear.
You are gone from earthly sorrows
And your daily toil is done.
But remember, dearest husband,
We are coming one by one.
WIFE, MARGARET SCHMIDT.

In loving memory of my son, William Kindermann, who departed this life Dec. 6, 1918.
A shadow fell upon my life
When death, the reaper, came,
And took my darling William
Away from earthly care and pain.
But some day my eyes shall see
The face I loved so well;
My hand shall press in his
And never say farewell.
Where the sunshine loves to linger
And the raindrops gently fall,
Sleeping here so peacefully
Is William, waiting for us all.
Sadly missed by his MOTHER, MRS. MARY KINDERMANN, AUNT, UNCLES, COUSINS AND ALL THOSE WHO LOVED HIM.

In loving remembrance of our dear wife and mother, Caroline Holzborn, who departed this life two years ago, Dec. 2, 1917.
In her lonely grave she sleeps
As the shadows onward fall,
And our loving hearts are weeping
No more her presence we can call.
Do not ask us if we miss her,
Oh, there's such a vacant place;
Oft we think we hear her footsteps
Or we see her smiling face.
Though she is gone,
Love lingers on,
For all of us she did her best,
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, BROTHER AND DAUGHTER.

In loving memory of our dearly beloved ones, Anna Kanta, who departed this life Dec. 5, 1918, and Charles Kanta, Aug. 22, 1919.
In their lonely graves they're sleeping,
As the shadows onward fall;
And our lonely hearts are weeping;
No more their presence we can call.
Do not ask us if we miss them;
Oh, there's such a vacant place,
Oft we think we hear their footsteps
Or we see their smiling face.
Rest in peace, our dearest ones,
Years may go, but memories stay;
They are gone, but not forgotten,
And we'll all meet again some day.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of my dear wife and mother, Emily Pustmueller (nee Ehrler), who departed this life one year ago, Dec. 5, 1918.
Dearest mother, how we've missed you
Since from earth you have passed away.
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory
Of your sweet and smiling face;
Peaceful be your sleep, dear mother,
It is sweet to breathe your name.
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
God in His wisdom has recalled
The boon His love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in heaven.
Sadly missed by her
HUSBAND, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILD.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Minnie Weitzel, who departed this life Dec. 2, 1917.

Angels uncurtained that repose,
And the next waking dawned in heaven.
BEREAVED FAMILY.

In loving memory of our darling, Margaret Flanagan Connolly, who departed this life Dec. 6, 1918, aged 8 years and 10 days:
Another little lamb has gone
To dwell with Him who gave;
Another little darling girl
Is sheltered in the grave.
God needed one more angel
To join His shining band,
So He bent a loving smile
And clasped our Margaret's hand.
Sadly missed by
BROTHER, SISTERS AND FOSTER-PARENTS.

In loving memory of our dear daughter, Mrs. Emma Mildred Marx (nee English), who died Dec. 3, 1918.
Dearest Emma, how we miss you,
Since from earth you passed away.
Sad our hearts, but sweet the memory
As we think of you every day.

We miss your coming footsteps,
We miss you everywhere.
Our home is no more what it used to be
Since our Emma is not there.
Sadly missed by PARENTS, BROTHERS AND SISTER-IN-LAW.

In loving memory of my dear daughter, Mamie Husser, who departed this life Dec. 8, 1918.
It was just a year ago today
Since the hour you passed away.
The time you spent on earth in pain
Can never come to you again.
'Twas very hard to part with you,
But God knew what was best to do.
You did your part and did it well,
So he took you where the angels dwell.
I know you are happy up in heaven,
Your time with the angels now is given,
Although you've gone and a place in heaven filled.
Your memory will always linger and cling to me still.
Sadly missed by her broken-hearted
MOTHER, SISTERS AND DEAR LITTLE CHILDREN.

BELMONT'S Dance Talks: At a recent prize dance given by a prominent society, a Belmont graduate walked away with the first prize. Forty-two of our graduates were on the floor and were considered the best dancers in the hall. The reason is, we give the very best instructions in the city regardless of price. The famous Belmont method makes graceful dancers out of awkward people irrespective of age. Just think, all of the very latest dances taught at the low tuition of $3 for a dozen long lessons. Your age makes no difference. Class lessons Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights at 8 o'clock. Private lessons any time of day or night by appointment. Belmont School, Odeon Bldg. Established 1912.

THE "LAW" of supply and "demand." We can "supply" your "needs" and don't demand" a high price. The Rule-of-Reason—out of the high-rent district, no expensive habits, no "heavy overhead expenses," but solid values. "More than your money's worth on high-class suits and overcoats. "Adopt our close-to-the-shore profit system. We can save you 20 to 40 per cent on your clothing bills. Suits, overcoats and mackinaws. If your "money is going to count" with you spend it here. "Take it from us." "We'll take it from you" and give you a long run for your money. "Where your dollars will bring the limit for clothes." If there ever was a "time" when a man should make every "dollar" bring the "limit," time is now. "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you:" These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you $5.00 to $7.50. We're "lowering" the "high" game cost of "living;" we claim with our "5 big stores" eliminating all unnecessary expenses. You save the difference. Never in the "history" of these "United States" will you "see prices" as "high" as this fall. Don't "tread the old beaten path," where you have spent your money for "friendship" and not for "clothes." We'll sell you clothes "at the price, not friendship." Play the "new game." All we ask of you, "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." We are the only store in St. Louis showing "real" plain and silk-lined $30 and $35 blue, green, brown flannel waistline suits at these prices; $24.98 and $27.98. Don't spend "a dollar for clothes" unless you see our "fall line." "Pay less; buy more." To the "Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop." Five big stores in one. Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. A "price concession to our returning soldiers:" "Sample suits," $19.45, $21.89, $24.98, $29.98, Sample pants, $2.48, $2.58, $3.46, $4.98; tailormade suits cost up to $35; our price; $22.50, $26.75. MOVING - MOVING
MOVING
We are moving into our new home soon, and we wish to reduce our stock of used automobiles before we leave our present quarters. This stock includes automobiles of all popular makes. They are in excellent condition, having been overhauled, repainted and put in the best of condition possible; in fact, they are practically as good as new cars. There are also a few of the SERIES 19 LIGHT SIX STUDEBAKERS, which are but slightly used, and wonderful buys.
Now Listen
On the first 15 of these cars sold we are going to offer a special inducement which will mean a saving of $100 to $140 each, and we therefore Know It Will Pay You to come and see us at once regarding one of these automobiles, even though you were not contemplating placing your order until Spring.

New and Easy Way to Learn Music

Learn to Play and Sing in Spare Time at Home—Every Step Made Simple as A B C by Print-and-Picture Lessons That You Can't Go Wrong On.

TRY IT ON APPROVAL

Entire Cost Only a Few Cents a Lesson—and Nothing Whatever to Pay Unless You Are Satisfied.

How often have you wished that you knew how to play the violin or piano—or whatever your favorite instrument may be—or that you could take part in singing?

How many an evening's pleasure has been utterly spoiled and ruined by the admission "I can't sing," or "No, I am sorry, but I can't play."

At all social gatherings, some one is sooner or later sure to suggest music. When the others gather around for the fun, the one who can take no part feels hopelessly out of it—a wall flower—a mere listener and looker on!

Or those long and lonesome evenings at home, when minutes seem like hours—how quickly the time would pass if you could spend it at the piano or organ—or in making a violin "talk," or in enjoying some other instrument.

And now—at last—this pleasure and satisfaction that you have so often wished for can easily be added to your daily life.

No need to join a class or pin yourself down to certain hours for lessons or practice. No need to pay a dollar or more per lesson to a private teacher. Neither the question of time nor expense is any longer a bar—every one of the obstacles that have been confining your enjoyment to mere listening have now been removed.

My method of teaching music by mail—in your spare time at home, with no strangers around to embarrass you—makes it amazingly easy to learn to sing by note or to play any instrument.

You don't need to know the first thing about music to begin—don't need to know one note from another. My method takes out all the hard part—overcomes all the difficulties—makes your progress easy, rapid and sure.

Whether for an advanced pupil or a beginner, my method is a revolutionary improvement over the old method used by private teachers. The lessons I send you explain every point and show every step in simple Print-and-Picture form that you can't go wrong on—every step is made as clear as A-B-C. My method makes each step so easy to understand and practice that even children only 7 to 10 years old have quickly become accomplished players or singers under my direction by mail. Also thousands of men and women 50 to 70 years old—including many who have never before tried to play any instrument or taken a lesson of any kind—have found my method equally easy. My method is as thorough as it is easy. I teach you the only right way—teach you to play or sing by note. No "trick" music, no "numbers," no makeshifts of any kind.

SUCCESS

"Since I've been taking your lessons I've made over $60 with my violin. Your lessons surely are fine."—Melvin Freeland, Macopin, N. J.

"When I started with you I knew nothing about the Cornet or music, but now I can play almost any piece of music." — Kasson Swan, Denmark, Col. Co., Nova Scotia.

"I want to extend the heartiest approval of your Piano Course. It has done more for me than years of other lessons." — Moxie N. Lewis, 319 Jefferson, Neosho, Mo.

"The folks at home are delighted to hear me play the Organ so well. You have a wonderful system of teaching music.—M. F. Allard, Caraquet, N. B.

I call my method "new"—simply because it is so radically different from the old and hard-to-understand ways of teaching music. But my method is thoroughly time tried and proven. Over 225,000 successful pupils—in all parts of the world, and including all ages from boys and girls of 7 to 8 to men and women of 70—are the proof. Read the enthusiastic letters from some of them, which you will find printed at the left—samples of the kind of letters I am receiving in practically every mail. My file contains thousands of such letters. Largely through the recommendations of satisfied pupils, I have built up the largest school of music in the world.

But I don't ask you to judge my methods by what others say or by what I myself say. You can take any course on trial—singing or any instrument you prefer—and judge entirely by your own progress. If for any reason you are not satisfied with the course, or with what you learn from it, then it won't cost you a single penny. I guarantee satisfaction. On the other hand, if you are pleased with the course the total cost amounts to only a few cents a lesson, with your music and everything included.

When learning to play or sing is so easy, why continue to confine your enjoyment of music to mere listening? Why not at least let me send you my free book that tells you all about my methods? I know you will find this book absorbingly interesting, simply because it shows you how easy it is to turn your wish to play or sing into an actual fact. Just now I am making a special short-time offer that cuts the cost per lesson in two—send your name now, before this special offer is withdrawn. No obligation—simply use the coupon, or send your name and address in a letter or on a postcard. Instruments supplied when needed, cash or credit.

Madam, How Old Are You? How Much Do You Owe on Your Home? Can You Read and Write?

Enumerators for 1920 census, beginning next month, will ask more questions than a cross-examining lawyer, and if you refuse to answer you may be fined $100 — 85,000 agents to list not only every man, woman and child, but every horse and chicken, locomotive and wheelbarrow, farm and mine — Cities to know by June how they rank in population -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

And the Lord spake unto Moses in the wilderness of Sinai, in the tabernacle of the congregation, on the first day of the second month, in the second year after they were come out of the land of Egypt, saying:

Take ye the sum of all the congregation of the children of Israel, after their families, by the house of their fathers, with the number of their names, every male by their polls;

From twenty years old and upward, all that are able to go forth to war in Israel.—Numbers, i, 1-3.

MANY centuries have passed since the first census on record, and beginning next month the United States Government will begin an enumeration which will surpass all others in thoroughness and detail. The numbering of the males of fighting age, which was the purpose of the command to Moses, will be only one particular among many others. The census takers are going over the entire country with a fine-tooth comb, and the list of questions to be asked resembles a cross-examination by a lawyer.

The Government does not expect the citizens and their wives to object to these queries, for it gives its word of honor that the answers will be scrupulously regarded as confidential. But in case anyone refuses to give the information required, he may be haled into court and, on conviction, be fined $100. No man or woman, of 18 years of age or more, will escape questioning.

To begin with, the citizen will be asked to give his name and place of residence. He will state whether he lives in a rented house, or, if he owns the house, whether he has paid for it in full or mortgaged it for any amount. Sex, although the citizen is dressed like a man, must be inquired and put down, together with his color and the date of his last birthday. Is he single, married, widowed or divorced? He must answer.

If he was born in a foreign country, he will be required to give the year of his coming to the United States. "Are you a naturalized citizen or an alien?" the enumerator will ask. If he replies that he is naturalized, he must name the year when the act occurred. He will be obliged to tell whether he can read or write, the place of his father's birth and the place of his mother's birth, and what is called the native tongue of his parents and himself.

He will be questioned as to how he earns his living, whether at a trade or at a profession. If he is a clerk he will name the store at which he is employed; if a mechanic, the shop at which he works.

Enumerators who take the population census in the rural districts will at the same time take the census of agriculture. Richard Roe, let us suppose, is a farmer. Answers to the inquiries made of him will reveal all the large and small particulars concerning his land and the results of its cultivation.

He will tell who owns the land, its value, and whether it is mortgaged. He will tell the number of his horses, cattle, swine and other domestic animals; of his chickens, turkeys, geese, pigeons, guinea fowls and hives of bees; he will list his farm machinery down to the wheelbarrow.

Likewise, Richard Roe will give detailed information about his fields and crops, his orchard and its number of trees; his maple sugar grove, if he has one; his vegetables and berries and the milk that he has obtained from his cows; as well as whether it was sold, used in his family or fed to his livestock.

The expense of running the farm must be stated, and the enumerator will ask Richard Roe whether he has a telephone or free mail delivery, as well as whether he ships any of his produce by parcel post. He will be asked how many of his sons and daughters, if any, have given up the farm for the city.

A national inventory is what Samuel L. Rogers, Director of the Census, terms the approaching ordeal, and the greatest inventory since the world began. An inventory not only of the human material of the country, but of all the mills, factories, furnaces, farms, forests and oil and gas wells in the United States; an inventory of every locomotive and baby carriage, every sheep and horse, every house and field, every orchard and meadow. The wealth summed up is expected to be greater than any ever before written on paper; the figures will fill 11 huge volumes.

"On. Jan. 2, 1920," said Director Rogers in his Washington office the other day, "85,000 enumerators, portfolios in hands, will set out from 400 offices and visit every dwelling, apartment house, boarding house, hotel, tenement and farm. A little later 1500 special agents will learn all about the values and products of America's mills, factories, furnaces, mines, wells and forests. The information obtained by the enumerators will be classified and tabulated by 4000 statisticians, accountants and clerks in Washington, who will prepare the 1920 census for publication.

"The enumerators in cities will complete their work in about two weeks. A month has been allowed those who work in the country, because they have often to travel long distances from farm to farm. No cabin in the mountains, no shack on the plains or in the forests, will be missed. And while the census is being taken in 48 states, other enumerators will be at work in Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii, Guam, Samoa and the Panama Canal zone.

"We hope to begin supplying the public with bulletins about the middle of June. Large cities will then know how much they have grown since 1910, and how they rank in population. There will be the usual disputes among cities as to the number of their inhabitants. In such cases we shall say: 'Here are the names of all the men, women and children living within your boundaries, together with their addresses. If you can find any persons whom we have missed, we shall be glad to add them to our totals. But we must have their names and addresses.'

"This will be the fourteenth census since the organization of the Government, and it will cost $20,500,000. The practice of counting the American people every 10 years began in the earliest days of the republic, and was made obligatory in section 2 of the Constitution. George Washington desired to know the size of the army which could be put into the field against any enemy that might attack this country. The first census, then, was a military measure. In 1810 the United States departed from ancient methods and, while making a count of the inhabitants as formerly, also learned the occupations of the men. Each decade that followed brought other innovations and development, and the 1920 census will cover every national activity—industrial, agricultural, financial and social. Nor has it lost its value in case of war."

Rogers believes that many surprising facts will be shown by the census. For instance, the entire population of the United States has been estimated at from 102,000,000 to 110,000,000. The figures, he says, may show that the war has drained the country of far more aliens than most persons have thought probable. We have been losing to Europe ever since 1914, and few immigrants have been coming in.

The population census will enable the Government to know for a considerable time to come just how many carpenters, ironworkers, laborers, machinists, physicians, ministers, lawyers, clerks, teachers, and so on, there are in the United States; the centers of alien population will also be disclosed; the centers also of negro population.

"As heretofore," Rogers continues, "the agricultural census will continue to be of vital importance. The thirteenth census, for instance, showed that while population had increased 21 per cent, farm products had increased only 10 per cent. These figures revealed the main cause of the general rise in food prices which occurred up to the beginning of the war. If the sons and daughters of farmers, it is plain to be seen, continue to leave their rural homes and go to towns and cities, prices of food, even after conditions are again normal, will grow dearer as time goes on.

"Our experts believe that the number of farms in the United States is now approximately 7,300,000. The population will be fixed, we believe, somewhere between 102,000,000 and 110,000,000. If these figures are accurate, it will be seen that the average farm in this country has to provide the food and a part of the fuel and materials for clothing and shelter for about 15 Americans, and at the same time for an indeterminate number of persons in foreign lands.

"The census of manufacturers will cover not only a five-year period, but the calendar year of 1919, and will show what has been accomplished in the country since the end of the war. In our opinion, there are 300,000 or more manufacturing establishments in the United States, exclusive of those having a yearly output valued at less than $500. The proprietors, officers and employes of these establishments number 9,000,000, or possibly 10,000,000. Their products, yearly, have a value of from $40,000,000,000 to $50,000,000,000.

"Business men are required to be as specific in telling about their affairs as the farmers. All the information given to us is made strictly confidential by law. Farmers need have no fear that the local tax assessors will ever have access to the facts they give to the census enumerators. Business men may be sure that their competitors will never learn from us anything with respect to their investments, debts, creditors, customers or methods."

"Do you think," Director Rogers was asked, "that you will find an increase in the foreign-born population?"

"No," he replied; "probably there has been a reduction, owing to the war in Europe, which stopped immigration and took many foreigners back to their homes. Between the years 1900 and 1910 the foreign-born population increased much faster than the native population, although there were included in the latter class children born in this country of foreign parents. The proportion which foreign-born persons formed to the total population increased from 13.6 per cent in 1900 to 14.7 per cent in 1910.

"It is commonly understood, I suppose, that the character of the aliens emigrating to the United States has greatly changed in recent years. Many came here formerly from Great Britain, Ireland, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Norway and Sweden. Recently, immigration has mainly been from Eastern and Southern Europe.

"We had in 1900 a certain number of foreign-born persons in this country. Of the number, 67.8 per cent came from the first list of countries that I mentioned—Great Britain, Switzerland, Norway, Sweden, and so on—and only 17.7 per cent from countries in the eastern and southern parts of Europe.

"In 1910 the percentages had changed to 49.9 and 37.4. Northern Europe lost; Eastern and Southern Europe gained.

"Of the foreign-born whites 10 years of age and over found and counted by the census enumerators in 1900, 12.2 in each 100 were unable to speak the English language.

"The number 10 years later, that is, in 1910, who could not speak English had increased to 22.8 in each 100. I will not venture to guess what the coming census will show in this particular respect. I am afraid, however, that the figures bearing on illiteracy and ignorance of English are growing.

"If he was born in a foreign country, he will be required to give the year of his coming to the United States. 'Are you a naturalized citizen or an alien?' the enumerator will ask. If John Doe says that he was naturalized, he must name the year when that act occurred.

"He will be obliged to tell whether he can read and whether he can write; the place of his birth, the place of his mother's birth and what is called the mother tongue of his parents and of himself."

"By this time," the interviewer remarked, "John Doe may be boiling mad."

"On the contrary," Mr. Rogers replied, "he will either be reconciled to the procedure, knowing that it is being conducted by the United States, and he being a sensible and patriotic man himself, or he will be rather pleased with the interest that is shown in his case.

"In the event that John Doe, if he be 18 years old or over, refuses to answer the questions of the enumerator, he will be guilty of a misdemeanor and, heard and convicted, can be fined $100. An interpreter who speaks John Doe's language, if Doe is not familiar with English, will be present to explain matters and help the enumerator in his work.

"Next, he having pretty thoroughly sketched his previous history, John Doe will be questioned as to the way he earns his living, whether at a trade or a profession. If he is a clerk, he will name the store in which he is employed; if a mechanic, the shop where he works.

"In the main, such is the examination that John Doe will undergo. Every occupant of his dwelling or boarding house or hotel will be given exactly the same inquisitorial treatment. All men and all women, of 18 and upward, will be questioned.

"Our experts believe that the number of farms has increased about 1,000,000 within the last 10 years. If their estimate is approximately accurate, there are between 7,300,000 and 7,400,000 farms in the United States.

"The population on Jan. 1, 1920, we think, will be fixed somewhere between 102,000,000 and 110,000,000. Using the two sets of figures—the one about farms and the one about population—for a little adventure in arithmetic, it will be seen that the average farm in this country has to provide the food and a part of the fuel and materials for clothing and shelter for about 15 Americans and at the same time for an indeterminate number of persons in foreign lands.

"Machinery and better farm methods are increasing the production of crops per man. Tractors, especially, now used in the East and the middle states, as well as in the West, are helping the farmer to cultivate more land than heretofore and are reducing his expenditure for labor.

"Machines, then, in part, are taking the places of the boys who are leaving the farms and going to cities and towns. But I would like to see more of the country boys stay where they are—they would be happier and better off. But that is a question I will leave to others to discuss.

"The census of manufactures will start as soon as possible after the second day of January," Mr. Rogers said. "It will cover not only a period but the calendar years 1919 and will show what has been done in the country since the close of the war.

"In our opinion, there are 300,000 or more manufacturing establishments in the United States, exclusive of those having a yearly output valued at less than $500. The proprietors, officers and employes of the 300,000 establishments number 9,000,000, at least, and, possibly, 10,000,000. The products of these establishments, yearly, have a value of from 40 to 50 billions of dollars."

Many will await with much interest the announcement of the figures showing the foreign population, in view of the reports of wholesale returns of this class of labor to their former homes, on account of the prohibition law. Thousands of Italians have, it is claimed, either left or have been seeking to get back to Italy, on account of the interdict against their red wine, which they regard as part of their daily sustenance. Several thousand have returned in the past three or four months from the Illinois coal fields, and the figures in the office of Chevalier Alessandro Broletti, Italian Consul for the St. Louis district, show that a great many received passports through his agency. Most of these expressed their disgust at a law that would deny them their vino.

Another angle of the foreign question concerns the number who went over to fight and chose to remain in their native countries. The census will furnish the answer to many inquiries that have been made along this line. Manufacturers who have been getting satisfactory results from their foreign-born workmen, especially the unskilled, will watch these returns with real interest.

PRICE OF HOPS INCREASES.

HOPS, after all, are not to die with John Barleycorn. This crop encountered an increasing number of states with laws prohibiting the manufacture and sale of brewed liquors, the national law prohibiting the interstate transportation of such liquors, the war-time prohibition, and, lastly, the amendment to the Constitution.

The area devoted to hops declined from 44,700 acres in 1915 to 27,900 acres in 1918 and 26,900 acres in 1919, and the production dropped from 53,000,000 pounds in 1915 to 20,200,000 pounds in 1918. The war, too, reduced hop exports to a low figure. One large producer of hops in California took steps, in 1918, to replace the apparently doomed crop with a large business in dehydrating vegetables.

The extremely low price of 12 cents a pound to producers was reached in December, 1916, and the December price of 1918, although 20 cents, was still low. On the contrary, in the autumn of 1919, a market of unprecedented buoyancy was created, mostly by British buyers, who, according to commercial reports, paid very high prices for the new crop and were glad to get the old hops. The average price to producers, Sept. 15, reported by the Bureau of Crop Estimates of the United States Department of Agriculture, was 56.6 cents. Nearly all of the crop is raised in New York, Washington, Oregon and California.

a valuable fox skin. They were trying to compel him to take flour and supplies from them at prices far in excess of those at which he could purchase goods in St. Johns via the mail steamer.

"When asked to act as a Justice of the Peace for the colony, I had thought it my duty to accept the responsibility. Already it had led me into a good deal of trouble. But that I should be forced to seize the large store of a company and threaten an auction of goods for payment, without even a policeman to back me up, had never entered my mind. It was, however, exactly what I now felt called upon to do. To my intense surprise and satisfaction the trader immediately turned round and said: 'You are quite right. The money shall be paid at once.' The truck system is a mistaken policy, and loses us many customers.' It was Saturday night. We had decided to have a service for fishermen the next day, but had no place in which to gather. Therefore, after we had settled the business, I took my pluck in my hands and said:

"It's Sunday tomorrow. Would you lend us your big room for prayers in the morning?' "

"'Why, certainly,' he replied; and he was present himself and sang as heartily as any man in the meeting. Nor did he lose a good customer on account of his open-mindedness."

Superstition among the natives is deep-rooted and, according to the Grenfell narrative, is very hard to dissipate. He relates a number of interesting anecdotes illustrative of this passion, not only among the natives, but the sealers who come from afar, as well.

"Once while stripping a patient for examination," he writes, "I noticed that he removed from his neck what appeared to be a very large scapular. I asked him what it could be. It was a haddock fish bone—a charm against rheumatism. The peculiarity of the fin consists in the fact that the fish must be taken from the water and the fin cut out before it touches anything whatever, especially the boat. Anyone who has seen a trawl hauled knows what a difficult task this would be, with the jumping, squirming fish to cope with.

"In a certain village one is confidently told of a cure for asthma as simple as it is infallible. It consists merely of taking the tips of all one's finger nails, carefully allowed to grow long, and cutting them off with a sharp scissors. In another section a powder known as 'dragon's blood' is very generally used. It appears quite inert and harmless. A little further along the coast is a baby suffering with ophthalmia. The doctor has only been called in because blowing sugar in its eyes has failed to cure it.

"A colleague of mine was visiting on his winter rounds in a delightful village some 40 miles south of St. Anthony Hospital. The 'swiles' (seals) had struck in, and all hands were out on the ice, eager to capture their share of the valuable animals. But snow blindness had incontinently attacked the men, and had rendered them utterly unable to profit by their good fortune. The doctor's clinic was long and busy that night. The following morning he was, however, amazed to see many of his erstwhile patients wending their way seawards, each with one eye treated on his prescription, but the other (for safety's sake) doctored after the long-accepted methods of the village—tansy poultice and sugar being the acknowledged favorites. The consensus of opinion obviously was that the stakes were too high for a man to offer up both eyes on the altar of modern medicine."

The hospitality of the people of Labrador is given liberal treatment in the Grenfell book. This the author describes as being unstinted and beautiful. They will give up their only bed on a cold night to a stranger and offer him their last crust of bread, without ever expecting or asking for a penny in return. Very often there is destitution and actual starvation among those who cannot be reached with supplies and many incidents under this head are described.

The big adventure every year is the seal hunt, which by law is regulated to start on March 14, at 2 p. m. No seals can be killed before that time, but the sealing ships of the stoutest construction, prepared to fight their way through floes and even between icebergs, get away from St. Johns harbor, Newfoundland, four days in advance, for the run to the Labrador banks. The excitement of the hunt, the dangers of the voyage and the accidents that befall many of the vessels and crews in the dense ice pans are vividly described in this interesting work.

Dr. Grenfell tells of his meetings with the personnel of the various expeditions that stopped at Labrador either going to or returning from the North Pole lure. He tells of his meeting with Commodore Peary and Dr. Cook. Harry Whitney, who stopped on his way back, he says, left the impression that Cook was very certain he had achieved the goal at last. It was after this that the long-drawn-out controversy ensued which resulted in a decided change of sentiment regarding the claims of Dr. Cook and it also led to the coining of the phrase: "Go tell it to the Danes."

Without going into the merits of the controversy Dr. Grenfell dismisses the subject with this observation:

"For our part, we were glad that someone had found the pole, for it has been a costly quest in both fine men and valuable time, energy and money. It has caused lots of trouble and sorrow, and so far, at least, its practical issues have been few."

Among some of the more personal references in his autobiography, Dr. Grenfell tells of the decided impression that was made on his mind by his attendance at one of the Moody and Sankey revivals held in London during his college days, and he often refers to the invaluable benefits he gathered in his knockabout life in Labrador, from the football and all-round athletic training he received at his prep schools, and later at Oxford, where he was a member of its rugby team.

La-May Face Powder
Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. MOLTEN INTERIOR OF THE EARTH

How power from the interior of the earth is drawn and utilized in an Italian town. Scientists showing renewed interest in plans to tap and make use of this vast energy which asserts itself at times in earthquakes and volcanic outbursts.

Sir Charles Parsons, noted English engineer, ready to demonstrate that Camille Flammarion's theory, often classed as a "dream," is feasible and practical—How Prince Giorni-Conti has been making use of volcanic heat and energy at Larderello — World's limited supply of coal urged as an incentive for thorough experimentation :-: :-: :-: :-:

IT WAS M. Camille Flammarion, the distinguised French scientist, who once suggested boring a hole five miles down into the bowels of the earth, just to see what happened. Nothing happened, because the bore never was made. Drawing on his great imagination and some actual knowledge of the composition and density of the earth's crust, Flammarion pictured the possibility of an excavation one-quarter of a mile in diameter, with gigantic cranes, elevators, steam shovels and an army of workmen drilling and blasting day and night, to increase the depth of that hole, until it became so warm down there that further excavation was impossible.

Given unlimited labor, time, machinery and money, how far down do you suppose Flammarion's army could have gone in that hole? Certainly not five miles. Possibly not more than one mile, on account of the terrific heat. For the first hundred feet or so, as boring tests have shown, the earth's outer crust is delightfully cool and gives no intimation of being merely the casing of something which, for lack of a better expression, may be regarded as a large round thermos bottle filled with boiling water, or coffee, or tea. Below the depth of 100 feet the earth begins to get warm and the deeper you dig the hotter it gets. Borings have shown that for every 66 feet of descent below the first 100 feet the temperature of the earth increases one degree Fahrenheit, or 80 degrees Fahrenheit per mile. Add this to the original 52 degrees of average normal heat encountered at the first 100-foot level and you will get a temperature of 132 degrees Fahrenheit one mile down; or 452 degrees at a depth of five miles. Water boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit. If you dropped a tin can down a five-mile hole in the earth it would simply melt away before reaching the bottom.

From these observations it may be inferred that by merely puncturing the earth's outer crust future generations can tap an almost unlimited supply of heat. They will need it, because someday, possibly 150 years from now, the last of the coal barons is going out of business. There will be no more coal.

The harnessing of Niagara and other enormous waterfalls, the tides, and even the sun's rays, has been offered as a solution to the heat and power problem of the future. While the practicability of all such engineering feats has been demonstrated, the question of being able by these means to furnish sufficient energy to meet all the enormous demands of the future remains to be considered.

Sir Charles Parsons, the great English engineer, announced a few days ago that mother earth is able to take care of all these future demands for heat and power. All that has to be done, comparatively speaking, is to stick a pin through the earth's crust and get all the steam heat you want. By a mere pin prick Sir Charles means sinking a shaft four or five miles down and tapping nature's own heat supply. To the British Association, composed of eminent scientists and engineers, of which he is president, Inventor Parsons explained that Flammarion's old idea of digging five miles down in to the earth was worthy of being classed with the remarkable forecasts of Jules Verne. The scientific romances of Verne are the realities of today.

"The world is running short of energy," said Sir Charles. "Sooner or later the coal supplies of the earth will be exhausted. We know very little of the earth's interior, but we know that there is a tremendous amount of energy stowed away in its depths. Witness the intensive energy escaping from volcanic eruptions. To harness the water supply of the world would cost $40,000,000,000. By boring a hole several miles in depth through the earth's crust sufficient energy can be tapped to furnish all the motive power of the world. The estimated cost of sinking the shaft would be $25,000,000—the cost to Great Britain of one day's war in the recent struggle."

Holes one mile or more in depth have been bored into the earth for scientific and engineering purposes. Capt. Huyssen, a German engineer, made a test bore for coal and went down one mile and 117 yards before he gave up on account of the ever-increasing heat, which took the temper out of his bits and made drilling extremely tedious and difficult. A still deeper hole was bored in Upper Silesia. Before the engineers gave up they went down 2190 yards. That may sound like a very deep hole, but it really is only a pinprick in the earth's crust, for you would have to drill nearly 4000 times that far before reaching the center of the earth.

Lord Kelvin once showed that if the rocks in the earth's interior are as bad conductors of heat as the surface rocks, the earth's core will retain almost all its original heat for a thousand millions years. Prof. J. D. Everett estimated that the amount of heat leaking away from the earth every year through volcanic eruptions, hot springs and earthquakes would suffice to melt a shell of ice one inch thick over the whole surface of the globe. But it is reasonably safe to assume, however, that the earth still hoards a huge store of the tremendous nebular heat with which it is oelieved to have started; sufficient to meet the requirements of future generations for countless years following the complete exhaustion of the coal supply.

The first practical steps toward tapping the interior of the earth for a future supply of heat and power have been taken already. At Larderello, Italy, volcanic heat and energy have been utilized for furnishing light and power in enormous quantities. Prince Giorni-Conti first undertook to utilize the natural steam vents of Larderello to drive a motor. He actually succeded in running a small rotary motor with piped volcanic steam and soon afterward fed volcanic steam into a reciprocating steam engine attached to a dynamo, from which sufficient electric energy was generated to light the borax works of which Prince Giorni-Conti is president. Since then a 40-horsepower steam engine has been driven with this volcanic steam.

It was noticed that this steam, being highly charged with boric acid, sulphuretted hydrogen and sulphuric acid, seriously corroded the iron parts of the engine. So the steam was diverted into an ordinary multitubular boiler and used as fuel. In this indirect way it served to drive a 300-horsepower condensing steam turbine engine actuating a three-phase electric generator which supplies not only the borax works but the villages near Larderello as well.

More recently still, Prince Giorni-Conti has been driving bore holes lined with iron pipes down to depth of from 300 to 500 feet in the earth's crust in the vicinity of the steam vents. The bore holes are from 12 to 20 inches in diameter and the steam comes hissing through them at pressure of from two to as much as five atmospheres and at temperatures ranging from 300 to 375 degrees Fahrenheit. And this steam has been harnessed to three great groups of condensing turbo generators, each of 3000 kilowatts, generating current at 5400 volts, stepped up by transformers to 36,000 volts and transmitted by cable to many surrounding towns and villages for light, heat and power.

That which has been accomplished at Larderello can be duplicated in other parts of the world where volcanoes exist. In the United States Mount Lassen, Mount Tacoma, Mount Hood and Mount Shasta, although inactive, are believed by many scientists to contain in their roots tremendous thermal energy, which needs nothing more than tapping and harnessing to furnish the future fuel.

There are boiling springs in many parts of the United States which are suggestive of underlying latent energy of incalculable power. Beneath the steaming flow at Hit Springs, Ark., and Yellowstone Park, for instance, there is a force that would supply more thermal units than the output of some of the greatest and richest coal mines, and those of scientific bent have wondered why it was not harnessed.

me," he added, impressively, "almost 33 years old!"

"My!" exclaimed the Widow, opening her violet eyes and regarding him with mock admiration. "What a big boy it's getting to be! But it will come in and help me unwrap the parcels, won't it?" she cooed, as the car drew up before her door.

"It will," agreed the Bachelor, with assumed indifference, gathering up his burdens and following her docilely.

"Why—why, what in the world is this?" cried the Widow, gingerly picking up a huge, bulky parcel, as the Bachelor flung the last of his load on the rug before the fire. "I didn't order an—an animal!" and she drew forth a spotted horse and gaily painted wagon from its wrappings.

"That?" The Bachelor tried to look innocent. "Oh, that is just a little thing I bought all by my loney-loney—when you weren't looking. See! If you wind it up, it GOES!" and he knelt incontinently down on the rug and began tinkering with the toy.

"And here's an airplane!" exclaimed the Widow, in blank astonishment. "And a train of cars, and—WHERE did you get all this trash, Mr. Cutting?"

"Trash!" repeated the Bachelor in an injured tone. "That isn't trash. It's a train of cars for—for a little boy!"

"For whose—for what little boy?" stammered the Widow.

"Oh, for a nice little boy—for your washerwoman's little boy—for any little boy, who will let me wind it up and show him how to play with it," explained the Bachelor lamely.

"Bobby!" The Widow's eyes grew misty, and she choked with something between a sob and a laugh. "Oh, Bobby! You beautiful heart of a Christmas child!" And she leaned over and dropped an airy kiss on top of the Bachelor's curly brown head, then sank down on the rug beside him and began to help set up the train of cars.

WIDOW-CISMS.

There are more ways of killing love than by stifling it to death with devotion, gassing it with jealousy or choking it with suspicion—but these seem to be the three customary ones.

The moment a man discovers that he is falling in love, he begins to pity himself for being "tied for life"—without even stopping to find out whether or not the girl reciprocates.

Nowadays, most love affairs, like most automobiles, seem to be built for speed, rather than for endurance.

You may admire a person whom you do not love—but you couldn't possibly love a person who doesn't admire you, if you're a normal woman.

A woman runs away from temptation, but a man merely crawls away from it, with the cheerful hope that it will overtake him.

England's Biggest Employer

during the five years' war developed a remarkably instructive fact—the bulk of successful work was greater when the workers were working short instead of long shifts. Lord Leverhulme had known this before the war, but it took the war to demonstrate his theory to the nation. The essence of his idea is: "Sweat the machinery, not labor!" Two shifts a day will therefore be in operation at Port Sunlight before the year is out. His workers get the same wage for the now shorter shift as they do for the old longer shift. Working six hours a day released two hours a day from the former eight—one to be devoted to education and one to physical development. This will answer the half-century complaint of English operatives that they had no leisure for development nor education.

The sharer of his worries and his triumphs was not forgotten by this wonderful road maker when it came to the title he was to carry on his elevation to the peerage. Her maiden name was Miss Hulme—so when it came to the cognomen befitting the new station, the wife's name was just consolidated with the road maker's surname, producing the combination Leverhulme. And all England, and pretty much all the rest of the world, is taking a very deep interest these days in the activities, reforms and road-making plans of the first Lord of this name.

The Twenty-Six Clues

back and, stripping the body of the track-walker, dressed it in his own things, even to the jewelry, and dumped it into the river. He tied a stone to the dead man's clothes—I guess he'd been pretty badly mussed up by the train—and dropped them in after him. Then he dressed himself in what he had taken from the line and started off barefoot with what money he'd thought it prudent to keep out of the roll the dead man was floating downstream with.

"He is silent about what happened to him during the next 10 years and how he discovered the girl again in Mrs. Jarvis, while about the blackmailing he merely says that we doped it out right. He claims that he really loved Miss Norwood and meant to marry her honestly, as his first and legal wife was dead, but that is merely a play to the gallery. How did you find out so much about his actions after he became Vivaseur, Mac?"

"Through Jim Shane, that used to be on the force, too. He's running a private detective agency now and I put him on the job before we ever started for New Orleans. It was clever of Hoyos to fix up that grand English name and accent and family tree for himself and sport around on the money he blackmailed Mrs. Jarvis out of with that swell Long Island bunch where Miss Norwood was visiting." McCarty paused and his face clouded. "That was almost the dirtiest part of the whole job I had to do; to kill that girl's faith and bring misery to her."

"It's not half the misery she'd have had if she'd married," Dennis remarked.

"I know. She told me after that he had wanted her to elope with him. That was because he didn't dare face Mrs. Jarvis, you see, until he'd got the girl for himself. She says that he suddenly changed his mind the very day she brought him back and introduced him to her uncle; and good reason, too. He'd gone back to town overnight and murdered the woman who might have stood in his way, so he'd nothing to fear except a too curious search of his record, and old Norwood was not the man for that." McCarty paused to light a fresh cigar from the stump of the old one, and continued: "When Norwood wrote his niece about buying the Hoyos letters she told Vivaseur, of course, and he determined to get them. He stole her latchkey from her, so that he could get in the house, and he must have been watching it closely that Friday afternoon to have seen Norwood go out and figured that the coast was clear. I'll bet he was a surprised man that day to walk into the museum and find Mrs. Jarvis waiting for him!"

The Inspector nodded.

"He only killed her when he was convinced that she would spoil his game with Miss Norwood," he said. "If it hadn't been for you, Mac, he would have gotten off scot free, for I was on the wrong track entirely. I was a stubborn fool not to listen to you in the first place, and I don't mind admitting that before Riordan here. I never felt so low-down in my life as when I had to sit there in your rooms with Terhune and that crowd and hear you give me the credit for what you had pulled off all alone, while I laughed at you! You had your revenge that night, and you saved my official head. I've not forgotten it."

"Well, sir, you had your notion of the case and I had mine," McCarty said simply. "I was just as stubborn as you, and 'twas just by accident that my notion happened to be the lucky one. It's strange, with all the clues we had, that we didn't hit the truth sooner."

"There were a lot of minor indications, of course," the Inspector admitted. "But there were just seven real clues. Did that ever strike you?"

"Seven?" McCarty looked up. "You mean that cake marked 'Noel,' the three warnings in macaroni paste, the two poor bits of notes in the wallet and the statement of Capt. Marchal? Sure, there were more clues than that, sir; there were 26."

"Twenty-six clues!" the Inspector echoed. "What are you getting at, Mac? I never heard of the others."

"Indeed, and you did! They were the first things ever you learned in your life and the clues you mention are all part of them!"

Then as Inspector Druet still looked his mystification McCarty explained naively: "All seven of the clues were made up of them, sir—the letters of the whole damned alphabet!"

England's Biggest Employer and the Amazing Labor Theories He Brings to This Country

Lord Leverhulme who rose from errand boy in a grocery to control of a half-billion industry and then created "Port Sunlight," has now proclaimed a 6-hour day for his army of employes—Believes in sweating the machinery rather than the men and women—Profit sharing in preference to bonuses—Why he bought some of the Hebrides Islands :: :: ::

AS a captain of industry, William Hesketh Lever, or Lord Leverhulme, as he is better known, is placed in a class pretty much to himself, by most Englishmen. His amazing success in his enterprises, chiefly in the output and sale of soap, a most necessary product in England as elsewhere, and his advanced notions in handling and dealing with his employes, have served to focus upon this self-made genius the attention of the entire civilized world, and this within a comparatively short while. Since his arrival in this country during the past two weeks, he has been acclaimed a wonder and compared to such wealth-accumulating Americans as Rockefeller, Henry Ford, Carnegie and others who scored signal success in their industrial undertakings. The Wizard of Port Sunlight, the man of big ideas and esthetic tastes and the father of the six-hour day for working people is, despite his lordly title and his near-Midas rank in worldly riches, a most humanly human person and those who have been in his company since his recent arrival in Boston say that he is a living, unalloyed personification of Simon-pure democracy. He is even more. He fairly radiates optimism and can see good where others, more cautious, might be suspicious, even alarmed.

The first Baron Leverhulme, who is unquestionably the leading commercial genius of his country, is every inch an Englishman, as there is no blood of any other strain to be found in his composition, no matter how far back the investigator might go. When the Romans, Normans, Saxons and other forbears of the English race as it is today got the strain satisfactorily Anglicized there were Levers in the finished product, and they have been there ever since. According to this most interesting disciple of commerce, he is just a "road maker," and he enjoys that characterization more than anything else. He demonstrated his marvelous capacity in this regard when he began a roadway in his early youth that led him from the post of errand boy in a grocery to the vast establishment of the Lever Bros., and once he got the early part of the pathway beaten, his going was rapid indeed. On the subject of roads, which is so dear to this great merchant and manufacturer, he has said something, and repeated it many times over. It is:

"I love making roads. The road maker is the best anonymous servant of humanity. He drives a great broad thoroughfare from town to town and for generations men travel over the road, with all their hopes and fears, with all their cares and joys, never once asking who it was that made their way easier for them. A roadmaker's life is full of rich solitude and invisible rewards."

His life has been one consistent purpose. He intended to make a great business success founded on straightforward dealing. Straightforward dealing to his mind did not and does not comprise only quality of product at a reasonable price. It means to him necessarily first, honesty and liberality in dealing with labor. Honesty here translates prosperity—sharing for all employes; liberality—the care of their minds and bodies. Material fortune naturally follows as well as contentment and delight in the work. In all his enterprises Lord Leverhulme has never known a strike.

Many often wonder how great road makers make their way to fortune. They all had the same urge as Lord Leverhulme, whose life is a passion—the passion of creation. His business today is the astounding demonstration of this passion. It began as all great original things do, in a small venture. One day when he was 25 years old and had been married three years, he was at Hindley, his work for the day finished. It was 3 p. m. He had two hours to utilize before going to Bolton. What should he do with it? He decided to explore Wigan, a town he had never been in. His all-seeing eyes took a fancy to the exterior of a wholesale grocery, which proved when he entered it, to be for sale. Carefully he prospected the plant and its potentialities. Finding them sound, he bought. As a wholesale grocer he decided there was a good opportunity to push the small soap tablet which he had introduced in a small way in 1874. His capital was $20,000 and he was venturing against soap makers of established fame and millions. But W. H. Lever was a road builder. By 1891 he was making an income of $250,000—despite rival soap magnates. He rented the house he lived in at an annual outlay of $165. Every farthing he could scrape together went back into the business. He hated to borrow money; he could not invite friends to invest in a hazardous enterprise, hazardous because of the power, jealousy and wealth of his competitors in the making of soap. His bankers provided overdrafts, but overdrafts preyed on his mind to such a degree that he thought for one moment of selling out. At this juncture arrived an offer from a company promoter, who offered to float his business in an organization with $3,000,000 capital. Was it just, was it right to ask the public for three millions when at any moment his little business might be knocked on the head? The promoter answered: "What the devil does it matter to you what happens afterwards, so long as you get your money?" That answer killed the deal.

William Hesketh Lever, First Lord Leverhulme.

He then decided he would trust to himself, he would fight his own battle. Was he not a road maker? Win or lose, his hands would be clean at the end of the struggle. And they were when the end came in 1894. The road maker had won. The firm, able to hold its own against the competition of the whole world, became a limited liability company which today has an authorized capital of $500,000,000.

Though he is by no means a young man, as the records back in the little church in Bolton, Lancashire, England, show that he was born in 1851, he is still surcharged with a sort of dynamic force that keeps him stirring. He became one of the largest land owners in England in March, 1918, when he bought the Scotch islands of Lewis and Harris of the outer Hebrides group. They have an area of 440,000 acres and a population of more than 35,000 people. The main town is Stornoway, with its excellent harbor and its 4000 people. There was great wonderment expressed when this purchase was made, but as England was accustomed to the big things and the big doings of Lord Leverhulme, it was readily understood that he had some card of large caliber in hand. It has since developed that he had his eye on the fishery business, as Stornoway is a very important place on the fishing map and most of its townspeople make their living in this industry. An enormous fish-canning industry is to rise there, and the food products of this plant will reach all parts of the world, since the plan of this aggressive road maker calls for ships to distribute these Stornoway brands. In platting out this road his survey took him to sea and he is pushing his new enterprise with all the enthusiasm that characterized some of his earlier roadways. Besides inspecting his American interests at Cambridge during his present visit, he has found time to look at some canning establishments where fish are preserved.

His factories at Port Sunlight and the town he has built there are among the outstanding show places of England. The place is just full of wonderful things. Of all the new ideas introduced by Lord Leverhulme the copartnership is considered first. He had to arrange a prosperity sharing which avoided the disastrous working of the bonus system. The bonus system, where attempted in England, has seldom lasted in any plant for over five years, because the workers considered the bonus a fixed sum to be paid every year, no matter what was the fortune and profit of the business in any year. The Port Sunlight solution is simple. In 1909 Lever Bros. began to give workers a share in the profts. Partnership certificates are issued to employes after a "trying out"—in proportion to the salary or wages each year—the allotment being based on value of service. The slacker and ne'er-do-well receives nothing, the apathetic from 5 to 10 per cent, and the enthusiastic, appreciative and responsive above 10 per cent—with special allotment for special services and helpful suggestions. Appeal is allowed even up to the founder—Lord Leverhulme—if any employe feels he is overlooked or unfairly dealt with. In applying for a certificate the applicant signs a pledge "not to waste time, labor, materials or money in discharging of my duties, but will loyally and faithfully further the interests of Lever Bros." A faithful, energetic, resourceful employe may in time accumulate an unlimited amount of the copartner certificates—it depends on service. When dividends are declared the preference shares come first naturally. Then a dividend is declared on the ordinary shares, then one on the copartners' shares. The ordinary shares are his lordships. Last year the copartners received per par share 2 1-2 per cent more than did the ordinary shares!

On. Jan. 1 this year the nominal value of partnership certificates totaled $4,644,165 in the possession of 6068 employes. In the 10 completed years of the copartnership there has been distributed for the benefit of employes, in copartnership dividends and prosperity sharing, $3,528,225. The granting of these certificates does not in any way interfere with the old-age pensions under the Lever Bros. Employes' Benefit Fund. The certificates are canceled in case of neglect of duty, dishonesty, intemperance, immorality, willful misconduct, flagrant inefficiency, disloyalty or breach of the recipient's undertaking not to waste time, labor, materials or money in the discharge of his duties. The pledge signed by the employes when they enter this great soap plant is considered binding in every way and is never to be regarded as a "scrap of paper."

The first problem presented to this lordly soap maker when he laid out his Port Sunlight was to provide proper homes for his great army of workers. He might have built a soapery in the slums of a great city, as was then usually the case. Believing the health of his workers is an asset to the business he found a site—on tidewater opposite Liverpool—in the fields of Cheshire. He named it Port Sunlight. It is today a fascinating model of humanitarian ideas and idealistic conditions. For his soap and money makers he built schools, churches, a theater, a free library, a girls' club, a copartners' club called "Get-together Club," a splendid art gallery containing a collection of art better than can be found in many a large city. There is a charming, practical hospital and a fine ambulance brigade. He laid out parks, ponds and groves. His people live in Elizabethan cottages, they have little gardens in front, larger ones behind if they choose. Port Sunlight in this respect is as different from the common manufacturing village as health is from sickness; a thistle from a rose.

These houses for his copartners at Port Sunlight are a genuine delight. His lordship, discussing housing at Port Sunlight, said on one occasion: "A few sprays of ivy and a greensward in front of a house, a shrub here and there and the plainest and most economical cottage architecturally, becomes more beautiful than a more costly and elaborate one built on the edge of the footpath, without any intervening fringe of green."

His greensward and the few sprays of ivy are in front of every home at Port Sunlight, and the firm takes care of them, lest moth and rust should creep in.

No account, however, of his lordship's activities can omit his great solution of an English labor problem, a great and thorny question—how many hours shall constitute a day's labor? He has said: "Of all welfare work in factories, a proper apportionment of time is the one that will yield best results." Following this creed Lord Leverhulme has declared, preached and is soon to practice a six-hour day, as being best adapted to English conditions in certain industries which are in many respects different from conditions here. The American worker receives the highest pay of any worker in the world and turns out three times as much as his British colleague on a similar job. The American worker is on the average better educated, having had more time for education. The work of British workers

AMERICAN PLAYS AND PLAYERS FROM AN ORIENTAL VIEWPOINT

Shoyo Matsui, Japan's foremost dramatist and theatrical promoter, speaks his mind freely about the good, bad and the worst—Finds fault with the Far Eastern characterizations and tells why the Mikado is impossible over there but all right elsewhere — Says the shimmy is a very old Japanese dance

By KARL K. KITCHEN.

THE chief fault of the American theater is also the chief fault of the theater in Japan. The personalities of your performers are more important than your plays.

Shoyo Matsui, one of the most prominent dramatists of Japan, who has been spending several weeks in New York visiting our playhouses, considered my question for fully a minute before he answered it. After a long chat about the drama both here in New York and his native land, I asked him what he considered the chief fault of our theater as he found it.

I had expected the question to be a poser for the little Japanese dramatist and I sat in silence across the luncheon table while he wrinkled his brows, nodded his head and gave other indications of undergoing a deep mental process.

"You exploit the personalities of your actors, you sacrifice everything for them," he added, after he had come directly to the point. "The same thing is true in my own country. So perhaps it is not fair to blame the dramatists or the actors. It is really the fault of the theater-going public. In America as well as Japan they go to the theater to see who are in the plays, not for the plays themselves.

"Naturally, there are a few exceptions," he went on. "Your 'John Ferguson,' I understand, was a great success. I enjoyed it immensely. But the most popular offerings in New York, which I have seen, simply exploit the personalities of your favorite players."

'For instance?" I asked, to lead him on.

"Take 'The Jest,'" he replied. "It is not at all remarkable as a drama, but it enables your two Barrymores to do the best acting I have seen anywhere. And that is why 'The Jest,' if acted by the Brothers Barrymore, would be a success in Japan. Our theatergoers would not care about the play, but they would flock to it because of the opportunity it gives the leading players to display their art."

Doubtless many critics of the drama will disagree with Shoyo Matsui and his views on the American theater, but before rejecting them it might be well to consider his fitness to make them. As director of the literary department of the Shochiku Dramatic Company, which controls more than a score of the leading theaters of Japan, he is in touch with the theaters of all the great capitals of the world. In the twenty-odd years of his career as a dramatist he has produced 70 or more plays, and in the month of November, last year, not less than six new plays from his pen were produced on the stage simultanously in all the theaters of Tokio and Osaka. From which it will be seen that he knows something about the Japanese theater. And as he has translated the works of Shakspeare, Moliere, Hoffmanstahl, Shaw and other noted dramatists into Japanese, visting London, Paris, Berlin, Vienna and New York every few years, it must be conceded that he is in a position to make comparisons, if nothing else.

Shoyo Matsuit is a dapper little chap, who doesn't begin to look his 50 years. In his braided frock coat, silk topper and spats he makes an impressive appearance. But more important than that, he has a real sense of humor and an infectious laugh. He can—and does—take the theater seriously at times. But he is alive to its shortcomings and doesn't hesitate to say so.

"Yes, the acting of the Brothers Barrymore is the finest of its kind I have ever seen," he repeated. "And the stage decorations of Robert Edmund Jones are incomparable. But you have so many wonderful men in that line. Your theater excels only in the revue. You produce revues better than anwhere else in the world. Your Ziegfeld Follies, for instance, is simply marvelous for its color and beauty. But it simply bears out what I have said. The Follies amount to nothing as a play. It simply exploits the chorus girl and the scenic artist."

"You do not make much of a feature of the chorus girl in Japan?" I asked.

"I am happy to say that we do not. The chorus girl as you have her is one of the so-called refinements of your civilization that we are better off without. The musical play as you know it has not yet arrived in Japan. I hope we will have an opportunity to hear grand opera, but I think we can dispense with the revue.

"The modern theater in Japan is only 10 or 12 years old," continued the author of "Tatatoki," perhaps his greatest success, in which Ennosuke Ichikawa won undying fame. "We modeled it after the German and Russian theater. Our first plays were nearly all translations of German and Russian successes from the playhouses of Max Reinhardt and Stanislausky of the Moscow Art Theater, you know. But during the last few years we have come to admire the theater of London and New York—the English-speaking theater, I might say. And at the present time the influence of your theater is very great. The plays of Shakspeare, which I have translated into Japanese, have been very popular. So have been the plays of Oscar Wilde, also translated by me And the popularity of the German and Russian dramatists is on the wane.

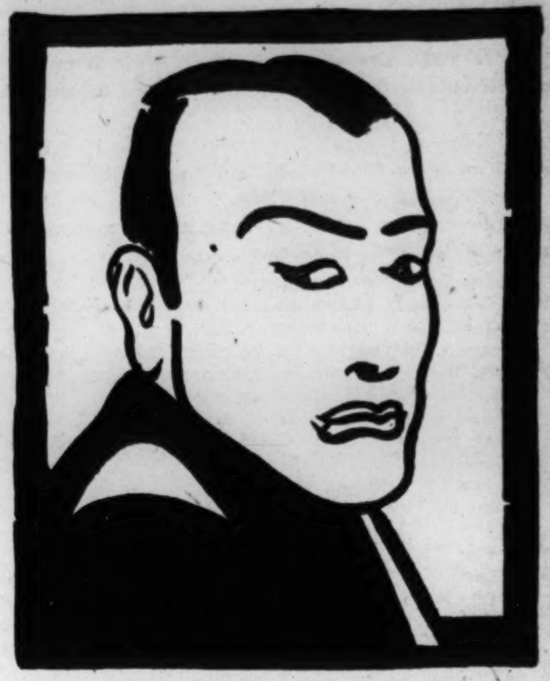
"But as I said before, the theater-going public in Japan is more interested in its favorite players than in their plays. Our leading actors have great followings and receive large salaries. Ten thousand yen is not an unusual weekly salary for a leading player, and while that is only $500 in American money, its purchasing power is many times that."

"Do your players ever indulge in strikes?" was asked.

"It is beneath their dignity to resort to such methods," replied Matsui. "Our actors are a proud lot. Most of them are reared for the stage from infancy and have 10, 15 and even 20 generations of stage traditions behind them. They are very well paid, and very well contented."

"Are the actresses sought after by wealthy men, as is too often the case in America?"

"No, we have no patrons of the arts in Japan, I am happy to say. Our theater has been the theater of the masses, rather than the classes. We have no court subsidies. And our wealthy men have never supplied funds for building theaters, starring actresses or anything like that. Our theater has had a natural, healthy growth. Of course it is in infancy. Our theater-goers are not as numerous as yours. For instance, even our greatest successes rarely run more than 30 nights in Tokio. But they are always legitimate successes. We have no such institutions as ticket speculators, who buy seats in advance whether the offerings are worthy or unworthy.



"It is beneath the dignity of our actors to strike. They are a proud lot."

"On the other hand, we are very far behind you musically. We have no music of our own. I myself am trying to develop a school of Japanese music, but it will be years before we will be able to accomplish much. I hope to devise an entertainment similar to the Russian ballet productions, with Japanese stage decorations, costumes, music and plot and, of course, with Japenese dancers. I have made a study of the Russian ballet abroad for that very purpose and some day I hope to bring a real Japanese ballet to New York. In the meantime I am trying to induce an opera company to come to Japan and give us a season of grand opera. I am sure my countrymen would like grand opera. Already my translations of 'Aida' and 'Pagliacci' in dramatic form has been very popular. The great need of our theater in Japan is the encouragement of grand opera We have excellent actors and the best of the English plays, but musically we do not exist.

"You have told me about the best plays you have seen here; now tell me about the worst," I interrupted. 'What was the poorest thing you've seen in our theater?"

"A play called 'East Is West,'" he replied. "It is too absurd for words. I am used to seeing my people caricatured, but the caricatures of the Chinese in this play are the most ridiculous I've ever seen. Now, 'Chu Chin Chow,' for instance, has no relation to real life, but it has poetry and color, and its performers are subordinated to the play as a whole. But 'East Is West' is an insult to the intelligence of the average schoolboy."

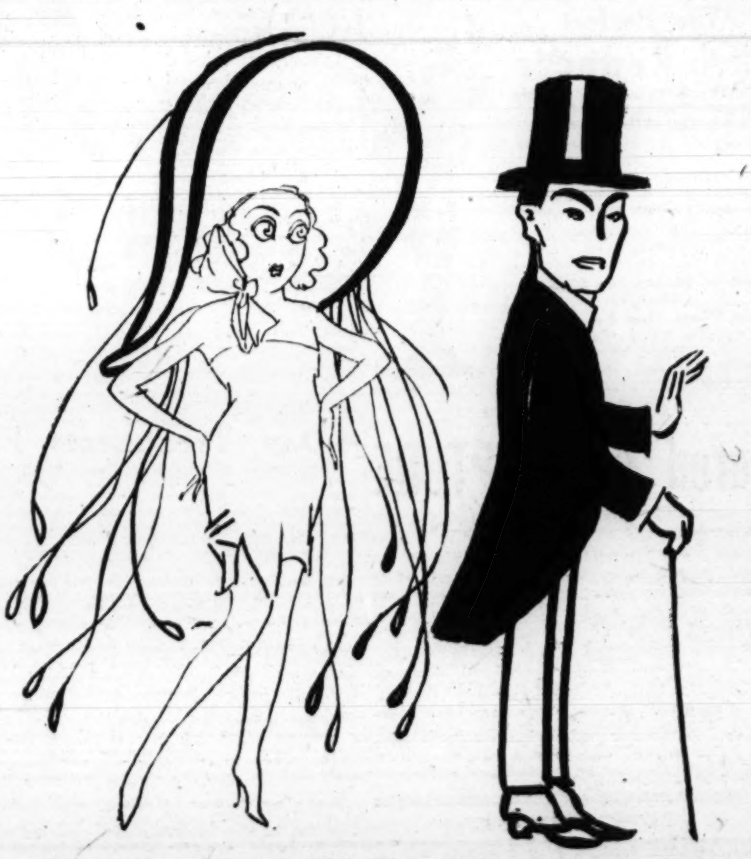
"What about 'The Mikado?'" I asked. "Do you disapprove of it?"

"'The Mikado' is an unpleasant caricature of my people. It has never been given in Japan and never will be played there. But I do not believe that it should be placed under the ban, as it has been in England. In fact, when its performance was forbidden some years ago I was in London at the same time and I wrote to the editors of the leading papers stating that it was a ridiculous move to prevent its performance. I do not like 'The Mikado,' but I recognize the fact that it is one of your classics, and that is sufficient reason why no one should interfere with its production."

"And what do you think about our shimmy dancers?" I asked as a parting shot.

"I enjoyed the shimmy very much. But it is not a new dance, as I have read in your newspapers. I recognized it as an old Japanese dance. But I wonder if it is really art? In Japan we do not think so.

"If we can adopt the best features of your drama without being obliged to import its drawbacks I will be very happy. We want your best plays in Japan. We would like to have the Follies come for a month's visit in Tokio."



"The chorus girl as you have her is one of the so-called refinements of your civilization that we are better off without."

A True "Bottle Romance" on the Mississippi

Wherein is related the story of how a Belleville Miss, from the Free Bridge, threw into the river's current a catsup bottle containing her address; how it was by chance picked up on a Government barge, 70 miles downstream, and the subsequent courtship and marriage of the finder and sender -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

LET those gloomy ones who find pleasure in dark forebodings and who so freely predicted that the free bridge would never accomplish any good, follow this recital and acknowledge themselves confounded. Here is unfolded a true story of a bottled note and its romance, which, without the part played by the city's great free highway would never have been written. Neither, perhaps, would there have been such a happy denouement, had the northeastern, southwestern or some of the other plans, been substituted for the official consummation of the project which represents such a substantial investment to the taxpaying public of St. Louis. Built as it was, it filled most admirably the role it played in the development of the remarkable meeting, courtship and marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker of Claryville, Mo., a pretty little waterside town down in Perry County, Mo.

In the latter part of July Miss Frances Stief of 109 South Second street, Belleville, took a vacation and went to the home of her aunt, Mrs. Charles Hasenstab, in East St. Louis, which happens to be quite convenient to the roadway leading to the upper deck of the municipal utility. She was accompanied by her younger sister and there were girl cousins at the Hasenstab home to make the visit enjoyable in every way.

One day they decided to take a trip to St. Louis to see what the big department stores had to show in the way of new summer frocks. Being averse to paying for the privilege of walking across the Eads Bridge, even though it would land them closer to the shopping district, they showed their contempt for arbitraries by using the highway that was as free as the air itself.

As they were about to make their start, Miss Stief picked up an empty catsup bottle which happened to be on the dining-room table and washed out the inside very carefully. Her eldest cousin's curiosity was aroused. Miss Stief was subjected to some interrogation, which she blushingly sidestepped. When they reached the middle of the bridge she produced the bottle she had concealed in her handbag and with very little ceremony tossed it over the railing. Then she disclosed her little secret. She had placed her name and address on the inside, corked the container airtight and committed it to fate, destiny or any other mysterious agency that there may be.

"Who knows," she asked demurely, "whether some sure-enough Prince Charming, such as we read about in the storybooks, may not pick up this bottle, find the name on the inside and rush up to Belleville to claim his bride and live happily with her ever afterwards?"

All the other girls laughed heartily and sought to dispel what they thought was just a playful daydream. They even admonished the Belleville girl to wake up, and assured her that she was living in a very prosaic period, where fairies, princes and such institutions have no place. Her cousin, close to her own age, predicted that a catfish might swallow the bottle, while another was equally confident that some hobo would fish it out of the river between St. Louis and the Gulf of Mexico, and utilize it for his bootleg stock.

Nobody excepting Miss Stief seemed to regard it as anything but a little midsummer folly, and when they reached the shopping district on this side and began studying the styles in the store windows, they all seemingly forgot about the catsup bottle and the little card that was so carefully inclosed. They had, however, watched the bottle bobbing up and down on the waves, and Theresa, younger sister of the heroine of the adventure, thought she saw it disappear under a power boat that was coming up noisily against the current.

Two days later the Stief girl and her sister went back to Belleville and nothing more was said of the catsup bottle until four or five days later. Then a letter postmarked "Claryville, Mo.," was left at her door by the postman.

It was with a fluttering sensation that Miss Stief opened the letter, as something told her that Claryville was on the Mississippi River, although she had never before heard of such a place. There, inclosed, was the note she had placed in the bottle with her own hands less than a week before, and there was the fruit born of the episode. It announced very briefly that the bottle had been taken out of the river at Ste. Genevieve, where the finder happened to be working at the time with the corps of engineers and mechanics in charge of a Government boat making river improvements. He added that he would be happy to meet the young lady of the bottle, and gave a few facts of a personal nature to let her and her family know something of his character and standing.

There was a cautious answer to this note, and then followed other little messages, with a gradual disappearance of the strictly formal character of the first exchange. The first of these reached Miss Stief Aug. 1, and on Sept. 13 a tall, bronzed young man, walking quite erect and wearing a strictly up-to-date air, rang the bell of the little cottage in Belleville. Though it was their first meeting, it seemed to Tucker and the girl he had come to meet as if they had known each other a very long while. There were other calls, and before September had wound out its career the couple of the bottle meetings were engaged. The man from Claryville did not believe in protracted engagements, and his plea for an early wedding was granted. The marriage took place last month in St. Peter's Cathedral in Belleville. All of the girls who were present when the bottle was thrown over the side of the bridge were there, and at the conclusion of the reception the bride twitted them about their shattered prophecies.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker, now living in Claryville, Mo., the principals in a real "bottle romance" of the river.

How the bottle was found, as narrated by the groom, gives color to the belief of the couple that they were certainly intended the one for the other from the very beginning. It happened that when an eddy carried the bottle to the Ste. Genevieve shore the boat on which Tucker was engaged had just anchored from a point further downstream. As the current was running very strong, a large quantity of drift was piling up under the boat, and Richard Young, one of the crew, called to Tucker to look below. It was while they were watching the swirling waters that the two young men happened to notice the bottle at the same instant. Both reached for it, but Young was the victor in the grab, and, holding it up to his companion's view, showed him the card, which was visible through the glass.

Then he broke the top and handed the name and address of the future Mrs. Tucker to his friend. He carried it to his room that same night, and before another sun had set he had a letter in the mail addressed to the girl at Belleville.

He was not so sure at first that he would ever hear from Miss Stief, as he had heard before of girls doing this very same thing just for the fun of it. When he got his answer he became very deeply interested, and all his plans were then laid with an eye single to the capture of the girl of the bottle and the free bridge. And as the marriage register at the Belleville Cathedral and the Recorder's office in St. Clair County, Ill., attest, his campaign was a complete success.

Tucker has spent the greater part of his life at Claryville, Mo., where his parents, Mr and Mrs. G. L. Tucker, conduct the West Chester Hotel. The couple are making their home at the hotel and the bride has scored a decided hit with her parents-in-law. As her husband's employment keeps him on the river a very large part of his time, she finds plenty of employment and recreation with his parents.

Mrs. Tucker says she hardly knows how she happened to think of the bottle and the note on the day she set out with the other girls for the hike across the free bridge to St. Louis. She had often heard before of girls throwing bottles containing notes into streams, but she was never very much impressed by these recitals. She was sure of one thing, and that was that no girl of her acquaintance had ever met her husband in that romantic way. Still when she saw the bottle on the table that morning last July, the thought suddenly occurred to her that as she was going to walk across the bridge anyway, she would just have some fun with the girls and predict that the man who would find the bottle would come and carry her away as it happened in the fairy tales.

Mrs. Tucker is an attractive looking young woman in her early twenties and has lived in Belleville all her life. She was brought up almost under the shadow of St. Peter's Cathedral and attended the parish school there for years with her sister. When the day came for the marriage, all of her old schoolmates were in the church for the ceremony, and, of course, the bottle was frequently mentioned.

Though the bottle and many things that usually go into bottles are almost in the anathema class these days, Tucker says that he will never willingly join in any such hue and cry, no matter how clamorous may become the demands of the Anti-Saloon League and its various adjuncts. As he tells it, he would not be on earth, let alone happily married, if it had not been for bottles of various kinds.

"To begin with," he says, "I was reared on a bottle, and in November last year I was saved by what was in a bottle. I had the influenza very badly and was going from bad to worse, when a friend sent me a bottle of whisky, which started me getting better right away. Now, to complete my store of happiness, I get my wife from a bottle; because if it hadn't been for that we never would have been brought together. Under the circumstances, I think I can well say good luck to the bottle. It brought me through babyhood, pulled me out of the worst spell of sickness I ever had and then, keeping up its good work, gave me a wife that I have every reason to be proud of; so, long live the bottle!"

The Twenty-Six Clues

as well as the rest. 'Twas a clever stunt he pulled, but he didn't do it quite in time."

The shaft went home and the criminalist turned angrily upon Inspector Druet, who sat apart, his face a study.

"Inspector, is McCarty speaking by your authority? Do you, too, hold to this ridiculous assertion?"

For a moment the Inspector's eyes searched his self-constituted spokesman's face, and what he read there evidently satisfied him, for he replied with a ring of finality in his tones:

"I do. Mac knows what he's about, Mr. Terhune; just give him the floor, please."

The others subsided and McCarty explained:

"You see, the poor young lad betrayed himself; he showed his suspicions too plainly before he was convinced enough to act on them, and Hoyos—we'll call him that still, though now I could put another name to him—got to him there in the library when he was all alone. There was a struggle, and Marchal managed to get the drawer of the desk open and pull out his pistol to defend himself with, but Hoyos wrested it out of his hand. Marchal must have broke away from his grasp then and ran from him, for when Hoyos shot him the first time 'twas from a distance of several feet. He fell, and then the bright idea came to Hoyos.

"He knew that everyone else in the house was out and he'd have all the time in the world to do what he wanted to. He extracted the second cartridge shell from the pistol and picking up this pair of shears from the table, he cut off the top of the shell with the blades of it and took out the bullet. Then he clamped the two pieces of the cartridge together again, using the heavy bronze handles of the shears like a pair of pincers, and putting it back in the pistol he went up close to where Marchal was lying and fired a second shot—a blank one—directly into the wound, scattering powder all over it.

"He put the empty shell of one cartridge at the feet of the corpse, dropped the pistol by his hand, pocketed the other shell and the second bullet, and pulled the furniture around like a barricade to make people think exactly what they did; then he went away, greatly pleased with himself and the job, I've no doubt, but he'd forgot just three things. There's not much blood comes from a direct heart wound and he was too long about fixing up that blank cartridge; the sprinkling of powder from the second shot stayed on the top of the bloodstains, almost dry, as the Inspector and I found later. We found something else, too,; the marks of lead on the blades of the shears where he'd cut the cartridge, and the grains of powder he'd let fall on the polished top of the library table."

Amid a silence as profound as before the recent interruption, McCarty handed the shears to the dazed Inspector, and produced the envelope from which he shook out upon his palm the particles of powder and held them out for all to see.

"He thought he'd rid himself of the last danger of discovery and all was plain sailing ahead of him," McCarty continued, carefully dusting the powder back into the envelope and tendering it also to the Inspector, "but he'd come on Marchal just an hour too late.

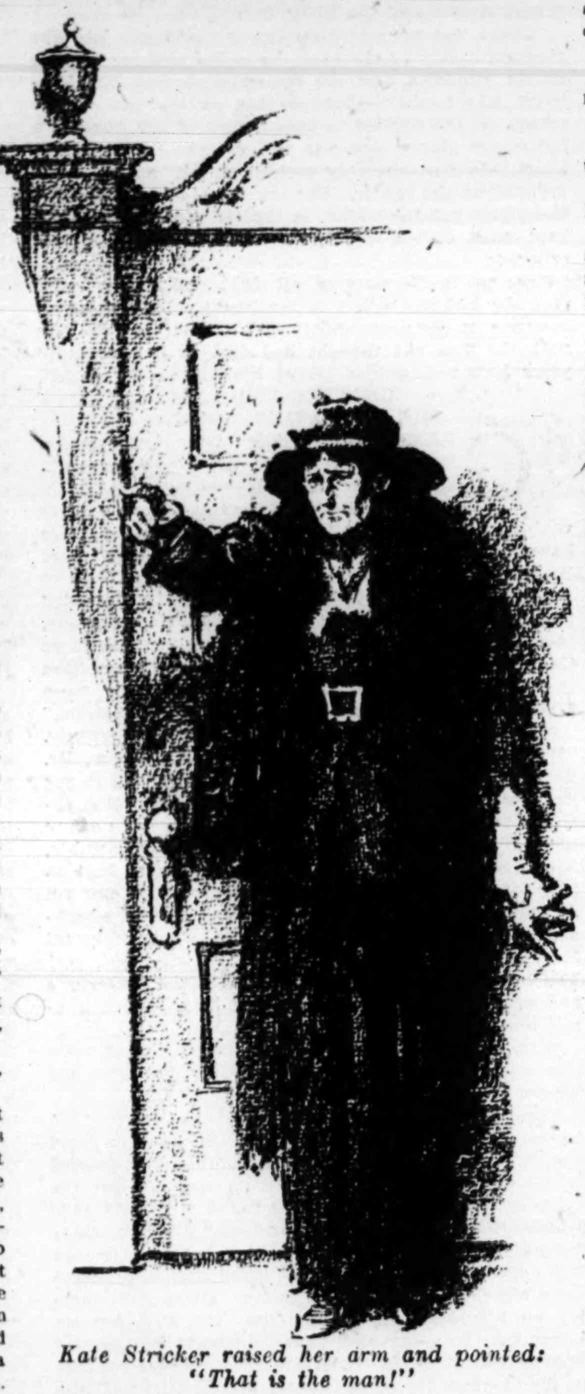
"There's the powder and the shears to prove it, and here I've something else that caps it all!

"They say that people who lose their eyesight get sharper in other ways, that they can sense things quicker than them that can see. Certain it is that Marchal not only suspected the owner of the voice that was so like the one he had heard in the museum, but he got it that the fellow was afraid he knew, somehow, and a warning came to him that he'd be done to death the same as Mrs. Jarvis was. Anyhow, that Wednesday afternoon he made up his mind to write out a statement of what he'd heard and suspected in case anything happened to him, and when he found himself all alone in the house I think a kind of a hunch came to him, what they call a premonition. He was in deadly fear for his own life from that minute—not that he was afraid of death, but that it would come on him before he had a chance to denounce the murderer of Mrs. Jarvis.

"He'd followed some of them to the door, maybe, and then made a rush for his typewriter, and in blundering around, knocked it off the table. The crash of it was the last straw to his frazzled nerves, and a kind of panic seized him, a frenzied determination to get that statement written, as if every minute was going to be his last. He couldn't lift the typewriter because of an injury to his arm and shoulder which he got in the war, but he grabbed a sheet of paper and squatted down on the floor and wrote out his message. Then he found a pen, signed it, and put it in the desk where 'twould be the first thing seen when the drawer was opened. He never knew that the ribbon on the typewriter was broken by the fall and that no writing appeared on the paper at all but just his signature.

"There was something else in that drawer, too, a photograph of Mrs. Jarvis' finger-print records, that she'd let Mr. Norwood take long ago, and that Marchal had got out of the museum and hid the morning after the murder, to shield her if she'd left any marks and anyone suspected what had brought her there.

"I've said there was nothing on that sheet of paper except his signature, and that's all that did show to the naked eye. Now I've turned up my nose at microscopes and such as playthings for the amateur and little I thought I'd ever come to one myself, the sight that God gave me being plenty for my needs in the past, thanks be! But when the Inspector and I gave that paper the once over we found little dents in it, and put it under a magnifying glass. Then we saw that it had been put through the typewriter, and knowing the ink ribbon of it had been broken when it crashed to the floor, we put two and two together. The dents on the paper had been made by the keys striking directly on it instead of against the ribbon that wasn't there. I borrowed the typewriter from Mr. Norwood and we tested it, with and without the ribbon, till we'd doped out the message. Here it is and I'm going to read you the notes we made from it."



Kate Stricker raised her arm and pointed: "That is the man!"

The stillness was broken now by a wordless stir which ran around the semi-circle as McCarty took from his pocket the folded blank sheet and another covered with laboriously scrawled writing. The first he passed to Inspector Druet, while from the second he read:

"'I know who killed Madame Jarvis. He knows that I know and he will kill me also. I heard them there in the museum and the voice of her murderer is the voice of him who calls himself Eric Vivaseur!'"

"It's a lie!" Vivaseur's voice rose to a snarling scream as he leaped from his chair, his once stolid, good-natured face distorted to a mask of demoniac fury. "That poor, crazed fool never wrote those words! You've made it up between you, damn you, to get up a case! It's a lie! A lie!"

He checked himself suddenly, as though a hand had been laid across his writhing lips, and with eyes starting from their sockets he crumpled back into his chair.

A tall, dark woman, robed in black, had appeared in the door leading to the inner room. Her face was as white as chalk, but her tones were firm and steady as she spoke:

"I'm Kate Stricker. I was stewardess on the Muette and I sold the letters to Mr. Norwood." Slowly, inexorably, she raised her arm and pointed to the cowering, cringing figure before her. "Leon Hoyos' hair was black then and he was younger by 10 years, but that is the man!"

CHAPTER XXIV.

THE TWENTY-SIX CLUES.

IT WAS a soft, still night in early June and Dennis and McCarty sat side by side with their chairs tilted comfortably back against the wall of the firehouse, smoking in silence.

Their conversation had been desultory and flagging, for their thoughts were busied with a subject neither of them broached. The distant whine of a handorgan, the honk of motor cars, voices of children and the grating syncopation of a phonograph from an open window across the way alike fell on deaf ears.

At length Dennis took the plunge.

I see by the papers that Hoyos went to the chair this morning."

McCarty nodded solemnly.

"He got his, and if ever a man deserved the trip through the little green door, he did."

"There's a hint that he made a confession at the last," Dennis observed.

"I would not put it past him." McCarty spoke with all the policeman's contempt for a squealer. "The coward that would strangle a woman and shoot a blind man would be apt to spill his soul when the end came."

"True for you." Dennis sucked at his pipe. "You told me once—it was the night when you showed him up—that 'twas me first put you on the track of him. How did I?"

A slow grin widened McCarty's lips.

When I first told you about Miss Joan bringing him home you said he had a name like a dime novel. It did seem too high-sounding to be the real thing. You gave me another tip, too, later on. When I described how I doped it out that Mrs. Jarvis was not killed in her own home, but went across to the Norwood house alive and well, you said that she sneaked over 'like a thief.' And that's just what she had done, Denny, for she went to steal that wallet with the letters."

"What became of it, anyway?" Dennis asked.

"'Twas found in Vivaseur's rooms at the hotel; Hoyos, I mean."

"Well, there's one thing!" Dennis knocked the ashes from his pipe and ground out the live embers with a capacious boot. "Your seance beat anything Terhune ever got up, with all his little machines! Man, 'twas grand when that Stricker woman stood up in the doorway and called Hoyos out of his name! But I don't see how you ever got her to come across with the admission that she'd sold the letters."

"She knew 'twould come out anyway, and it was satisfaction to the soul of her to denounce him. When I had that first talk with her on the pier at Atlantic City I knew if I could once convince her that he was alive and she could help punish him for a crime she would talk quick enough. She's a good, strong hater, that Kate!"

"Who's this coming?" Dennis squinted down the street, where from the corner a tall figure was approaching with a firm, familiar tread.

"'Tis the Inspector, no less!" McCarty rose eagerly. "Good evening to you, sir! What brings you walking our beat?"

"I was passing by and stopped at your rooms," Inspector Druet smiled. "When you weren't there I knew where I would find you! 'Evening, Riordan. Don't disturb yourself."

"There's another chair just inside the door." Dennis swung it out with a long arm. "There! We was just talking about the Hoyos case, sir, seeing as he was electrocuted this morning. Was it true that he made a confession before they turned on the juice?"

"Yes. We have it down at headquarters now. He told a good bit about his life, but a lot of it is colored to put him in as good a light as possible. There are parts that ring true, however. His father was a baker in Vienna, his mother a seamstress from Greece."

"That accounts for the cake, the macaroni paste and the Greek name, Leonidas," McCarty nodded. "He flew high from the bakeshop, didn't he?"

"Yes. He was the manager of a gambling casino at a resort on the French coast before he came to this country. He doesn't say much about those early years here or where he got the money to start his Wall street speculations which enabled him to buy that yacht he had down on the Mississippi. He tells, though, how he found and palmed off that body as his after the affair of the Muette; seems quite proud of it as a smart trick. The girl shot him through the shoulder, you know, not seriously, and he easily swam ashore. Alongside the railroad which runs by the river he came on the body of a trackwalker who had evidently just been hit by a train. He walked on—it was near dawn—when he came to a little shanty with overalls and underwear flapping on a line in the yard. That gave him an idea and he took what he needed, then went

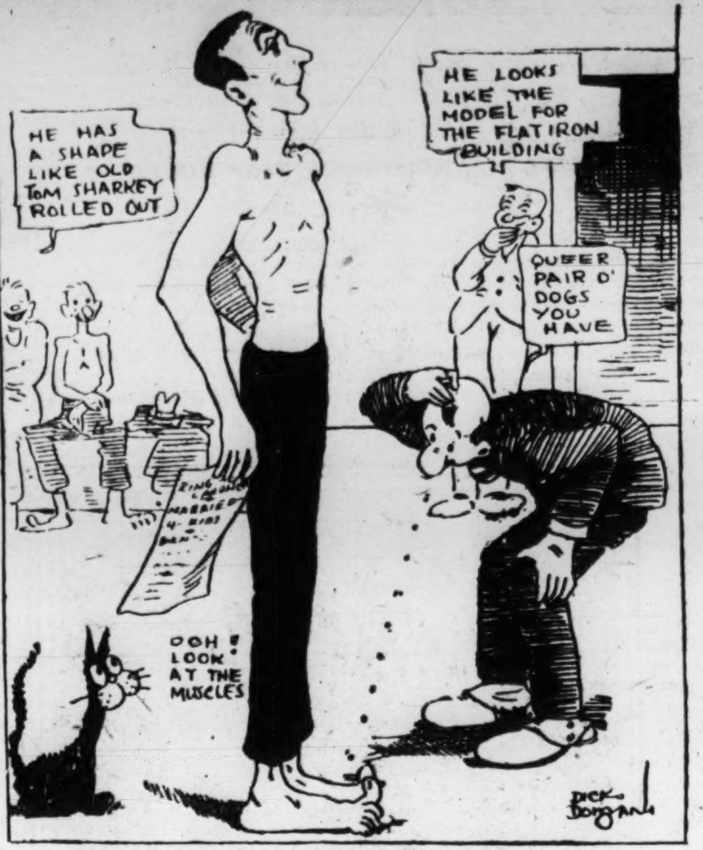
On the Scarcity of Paper For Newspapers

By RING W. LARDNER.

TO THE EDITOR:

From everywher comes the cry save white paper and in my letter last wk. I all ready mentioned about the propa. of all the big newspapers in the country held a meeting in N. Y. city and disgust the shortige and promised they wouldn't use no more of it than was nessary but from all as I can see the papers is still comeing out daily and Sun. as big as life and all the paper they been saveing wouldn't make a night gown for a cigarette and a outsider might think they had give their promise as a practical joke and without no intentions of carrying them out. But a friend of mine that knows some of the big editors personly claims they would be tickled to death to live up to the agreement only they haven't no idear in regards to how to go at it in other words they don't know what they could leave out of the papers without the subscribers getting sore.

Maybe the genial editor of this paper is in the same pretty pass and would welcome a few suggestions from a person like I who has give the matter a good deal of thought and have got my finger on the public pulse at all times you might say.



HE HAS A SHAPE LIKE OLD TOM SHARKEY ROLLED OUT
HE LOOKS LIKE THE MODEL FOR THE FLATIRON BUILDING
QUEER PAIR O' DOGS YOU HAVE OOH! LOOK AT THE MUSCLES
RING LARDNER MARRIED 4 KIDS
DICK BORGANS

I could of kept it a secret about having 4 vertical children and 2 flat feet.

In the 1st. place gents I would cut out the news from foreign countrys. They's a paper laying here along side of me which has got a 1-2 a col. on Page 1 about Egypt being give a Constitution and another 1-2 a col. about 115 million gals. of whiskey being released from bondige and throwed on the market in England. Well if the item about Egypt had of been left out the most of us would of thought that Egypt always did have a constitution but even the few that knowed better could of stood it a few more months to go on thinking Egypt didn't have no constitution at lease till the white paper shortiges is over. As for the other item it is like rubbing salt in a raw wound and if the papers wants to spend a 1-2 col. lacerating their readers on a exposed nerve, why they can holler their heads off about the paper famine and not get no sympathy from thinking men.

I don't know of no case where printing the news from acrost the old pond ever done any good where as they's plenty of times it has caused a lot of trouble like back in 1914 for inst. when the papers all come out 1 day and said the Belgiums had started a big war and all the big Europe countrys was messed up in it and they kept printing about it till finely we got into it ourselfs where as if the news had of been suppressed in the 1st. place we wouldn't of knew they was a war or where to go to get into it. And if we hadn't of got into it I could have kept it a secret about having 4 vertical children and 2 flat feet.

2. You can pick up the paper every day and find where President Wilson is mentioned in it about a average of 10 times. Well, it looks to me like most of your subscribers knows by this time that the President's last name is Wilson and they's no sense following up the word President with the word Wilson every time you got to mention him and as they's suppose to be 1200 words in a col. why every paper could save a col. in 120 days by just saying President done so and so or President said this and that and the other thing in stead of President Wilson said it or done it and etc.

3. Cut out the death notices. When a man dies their family usualy finds out about it without looking in no paper and as for his friends why I don't know of nobody that reads the death notices every day to find out if any of their friends has died on them, but if they got a friend that they think they's any chance of him dying on short notice why they will give his house a ring a couple of times a day and say is So and So still alive or dead or neutral. People that dies suddenly or without help usually eats up a couple of paragraphs in the news section so all and all the mortician col. could be cut out bodly and everyone have just as a good a time.

4. Pretty near every paper now days has got a page or 2 of comical pictures that they call them strips which is suppose to make their peal to the reader's risibles and cheer them up. The strips the way they have got them now is divided up in panels usualy 4 or 5 of them in 1 strip. But as far as I can see all the cackles is crammed into the last panel so why not cut out the other 3 or 4 and just leave the comical one where Pat beans Abie with a crow bar and says Bam.

5. Finely gents I would cut out the advertising cols. You can't never make me believe that a person don't know when they need something without waiting till they see it in the ads. Or you can't make me believe that when I need a certain thing the ads is going to make me buy something else. For inst. what do I do when I need a hair cut why I go to a barber shop and make my wants known either by word or token to the nearest vacant barber and they won't no amt. of advertising make me go in a animal store and buy a pet wolf for my children instead of go in a barber shop and buy a haircut for myself. Or taken when a female subscriber needs a new shoe why her toes knows without her seeing the word mentioned in the advertising cols. and if she is a stranger in the city why she can find out where to get one by walking up to a policemen and saying where can I get a new shoe. Or if its a pt. of gin she wants instead of a shoe why she can substitute the word pt. of gin for the word shoe and say were can I get a pt. of gin.

The advertising cols. crowd out more live news such as "Jack Dempsey took a footbath last night" than any other 1 feature in a newspaper and personly I have penned many a comical line that never seen print because it had to make way for a eulogy of somebody's embalming fluid that nobody will ever know if all they claim for it is true or not.

Cut out the ads gents anl all so the other items which I have mentioned and 1st. thing you know people will be throwing white paper around like it was 200 proof Scotch. RING W. LARDNER.

Through the Widow's Lorgnette.

By HELEN ROWLAND.

"ISN'T it fascinating—to be young and foolish?"

The Widow hurried out of the glittering shop, her eyes dancing like Christmas stars, cheeks like holly berries, and both arms hugging a dozen variegated parcels. The Bachelor followed her, a veritable Santa Claus, laden with holiday boxes.

"There!" she exclaimed, flinging her plunder helter-skelter into the tonneau of the car. "Take me straight home! I'm as tired as a charlady on Saturday night!" and she flopped back amongst the cushions, with a delicious little sigh.

"It serves you right," scolded the Bachelor, leaning over to tuck the rugs around her ridiculous, silk-clad ankles. "You're old enough to know better than to turn a holiday into hard labor and a sacrament into a sacrifice."

"I'm NOT!" declared the Widow, with prompt defiance. "I'm younger than youth itself! I was positively the youngest thing in the whole toy department!"

"What!"

"The children are so blase, nowadays," she sighed. "The little child there was bored by anything less than a moveing picture machine or a $60 airplane, while I was perfectly delighted to chat with 'Santa Claus' and to play with an open-and-shut-eye kewpie dolly. It's YOU who are getting wrinkles on the soul and bald on top of your illusions, my dear boy!"

The Bachelor regarded her with hurt surprise.

"I thought," he remarked chillily, "that it was you who so bitterly denounced all this rush and crush and flub-dub, at Christmas time—all this shopping and extravagance and stuffing and dissipating and 'temporary insanity.' I thought it was YOU who so passionately defended the 'Spugs' only a few seasons ago—and excoriated me for bringing you a wrist watch instead of a vacuum cleaner."

"Oh that!" The Widow dismissed the accusation with a shrug and a wave of her muff. "That was before the WAR! The world was getting old and gray and cynical. It was a bachelors' world. But THIS—this is a brand-new world, a rejuvenated world, a gay young world—and nobody with a mental bald spot has any place in it. This is a playboy's world—and Christmas is the time for everybody to learn to play, again!"

"Aha!" cried the Bachelor blithely, as he turned the car up the avenue. "Back to the tops and toys and kissing games! Let's cultivate the gentle art of being foolish! Well, what shall we do? Drive to a tearoom and play tit-tat-toe on the tablecloth?"

"No," laughed the Widow. "We'll go straight home and look at all the junk and things I've bought. That will be foolish enough for one day. I'm afraid I've been awfully reckless. Do you think Aunt Prunella will like a pink chiffon boudoir cap and a silver vanity case?"

"What!" The Bachelor stared at her for a full half-minute, then exploded into violent laughter. "Your Aunt Prunella—in a pink chiffon boudoir cap! Ye gods!"

"She can use the vanity case for her pepsin tablets, anyway," concluded the Widow cheerfully. "And I've bought some English sporting prints and a Russian humidor for dear old Uncle Abner, the anti-tobacco crusader; and a gold filigree fan for mother, and some embroidered blue silk pajamas for the cook, and"——

"Stop! stop!" commanded the Bachelor. "If you value my life—don't say another word! Have you taken a foolish powder?"

The Widow nodded tranquilly.

"Yes," she admitted. "It's the young and foolish season—and I'm determined to make everybody around me feel as young and foolish as possible. It IS an art, you know—being foolish. I suppose I OUGHT to have gotten useful presents, but"——

Cut out the ads gents and all so the other items elor. "That's why you didn't—being a woman. But, this year of all years!"

"This year of all years, everybody needs to be shaken out of the glooms!" declared the Widow stoutly. "This year of all years, everybody needs a tonic for the jaded spirits, and a stimulant for the tired heart. A ton of coal MIGHT have done Aunt Prunella more material good than a pink boudoir cap, but think of the spiritual exhilaration she'll get out of something pretty and riotously young! A pair of mittens MIGHT have been more appropriate for the washerwoman's little boy than a pair of skates, but he wouldn't admit it. A pair of shoes might have been more useful to the cook than embroidered blue silk pajamas, but think of her soul!"

"Her soul!" The Bachelor gasped. "Oh, yes, of course—her soul!"

"And it's people's souls we want to feed at Christmas time," resumed the Widow, ignoring the flippancy. "It's the CHILD in every human being, that we want to bring gifts to—as the Wise Men brought gifts to the Child, of old!" And she gazed mystically out of the window, through the purple and gold twilight. "Everybody has the soul of a child, somewhere in him," she continued, after a little pause, "even you, Mr. Methuselah—if you'll only try to find it!"

"Hm! I don't have to try!" the Bachelor retorted. "I know it, every time I let you drag me out Christmas shopping and lure me into to stores, and inveigle me into helping you trim Christmas trees! And three of them, under as many different names, and she had no more legal claim on him than a stranger.

"The girl screamed once and then was quiet and the stewardess thought she must have fainted. After a time she heard Hoyos advising the girl in a cold, sneering way to go back where she came from and not stir up a scandal that would only bring disgrace on herself. All of a sudden he stopped in the middle of a sentence, there was a scuffle and the crack of a revolver.

"The stewardess nearly fainted, herself, outside the door, but the next thing she heard was a kind of choking cry from Hoyos and two heavy splashes in the water."

He paused as Oliver Jarvis, with a groan, buried his face in his hands. Norwood clutched the arms of his chair, and even Vivaseur's ruddy face had paled slightly, while a frown of discomfiture had gathered on Wade Terhune's brow.

"If you remember the Hoyos case you all know what happened; how weeks later a mutilated body was fished out of the river and identified as Hoyos' through his clothes and the jewelry with his initials on it. The girl was supposed to have been drowned, for no trace was found of her and no one knew who she was.

"Because she hated Hoyos so and sympathized with the girl, the stewardess never told what she'd overheard, and right after the shooting she remembered a wallet with a couple of letters in it that was in a desk in his cabin. She'd taken a peep at them and was afraid they might help in the girl's conviction if she was caught, so before the police boat came she took the wallet and hid it among her things.

"The girl wasn't drowned, however; she got safe ashore, and although the Inspector hasn't been able to prove it yet, he's an idea how it happened, for it is on the records at Hoboken that about that time a barge captain was arrested for trying to dispose of a ruby ring worth thousands. He swore that it had been given to his wife by an old woman, richly dressed, that they pulled out of the river on the night of June 1, and that in return they provided her with dry clothes and money for a railway journey. The police couldn't prove him a liar, for he and his wife and the crew had the description of the old lady down so pat they never suspected 'twas the girl from the Muette that was being shielded, nor that the date of the rescue had been changed.

"She got back to New Orleans and after a terrible, long sickness she shut herself up in her guardian's house like a hermit for a matter of two or three years. But she was young and the horror of it wore off and after a while she began to care for somebody else, a rich New Yorker that was down there on a visit. To be fair with her, she wanted to tell him the truth, but her guardian forbade it—she'd sworn to him that Hoguet was dead, but told him no more—and she married the Northerner without saying a word of the past.

"You all know whom I'm talking about, but I'll have to use names now to keep from balling up the story, though I don't like to. Last Christmas Mrs. Jarvis received a gift of a big cake with 'Noel' on it in sugar; she didn't know who sent it but she nearly passed away, for she knew that someone from out of the past had spotted her and her secret would never be safe again. Three months afterward she received an unsigned note made by spelling out words in macaroni letters pasted on paper, saying: "All is known. Pay or I tell. First warning."

"She got $20,000 of her own money from her husband and waited, and around the beginning of the last week in May she got another note that told her to put $5000 under the rose bush in the yard on the night of the twenty-sixth, calling attention to the date. It was the anniversary of that night on the Muette. I guess she must have done it, for two weeks later she got the third and last of the macaroni warnings. It ordered her to put $1000 under the bush on the twenty-sixth of each month or everything would be told.

"I don't know—I mean the Inspector hasn't found out yet—how it came about, but the blackmailing must have stopped along in October, for only nine thousand is gone out of the twenty, and Mrs. Jarvis planning to go abroad looks as though she thought herself out of danger."

McCarty paused again, but not a sound broke the tense stillness of the listening group, and after a moment he went on in a change of tone:

"I've got to go back now to the stewardess. She had kept the wallet with those letters in it all these years; in fact, it had been in a storage warehouse in a trunk with a lot of other old stuff belonging to her, and she'd almost forgotten that she had them until about a month ago. Then she came across them just when she was out of a job and in desperate straits for money. She had heard of Mr. Norwood and his museum, and that he paid big prices for relics of crime, and the idea came to her to sell him the letters. She didn't think after so many years had passed the identity of the young girl could be proved from them, and she'd not be hurting anybody.

"Mr. Norwood bought them from her three days before the murder and told all about them at the dinner at Mr. Jarvis' house on Wednesday night. Mrs. Jarvis was near crazy, for she knew that at any time Mr. Norwood might discover by accident that they were in her handwriting and it would be all up with her. She made up her mind that she'd have to get those letters and on the Friday afternoon she got rid of all her servants, put on the little dark dress with the veil around her head, and started out through the yards for the museum. She would have a clear field, for she had persuaded Mr. Norwood to visit his friend the professor and he'd told her the butler would be out. I guess she didn't figure much on Capt. Marchal disturbing her, on account of his blindness, and the cook and housemaid wouldn't see her, with the kitchen shades drawn and the lights turned on.

"There was no way Mrs. Jarvis could get into the museum except by climbing the ladder and forcing one of the windows, and she remembered that Mr. Norwood was a shark—begging his pardon!—on finger prints, so she decided to take a pair of her husband's old motor gloves with her and put them on. In her hurry, however, she only grabbed up one and that she dropped on the ladder. She knew where Mr. Norwood had likely put the wallet, in the tall cabinet where he kept most of his papers and documents relating to crime.

"She got in the museum, all right, and it's my belief that she had the wallet in her hands when she heard someone at the door, and turned to come face to face with the man she thought had died by her hands 10 years before—Leonidas Hoyos himself, in the flesh!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE BETRAYING VOICE.

"GREAT GOD!" Oliver Jarvis sprang to his feet. "Where is he? Have you got him? Take me to him, say"——

"Easy now, Mr. Jarvis! There's more you've got to hear first," McCarty remonstrated "We haven't got him yet, but we will soon, don't fear! You'll only have to have a little more patience."

"Really, McCarty, your self-confidence is intended to be highly reassuring, no doubt," drawled Terhune, "but I fear that my client will have to exercise more than a little patience before your laudatory ambition is achieved, and we will have to hear a few more tangible facts before we can share your enthusiasm."

"You'll hear them!! McCarty promised grimly. "When I sat in the dark in your consulting room, Mr. Terhune, with a tennis ball on a wire squeezed in my hand and your little Fourth of July illumination inside the clock registering the sweat of me, 'twas a fine little flight of fancy I listened to, if you remember, with never a complaint. I've no phonographs here to play for you, nor borrowed skeletons to rattle, nor yet an assistant to prance up and down and work the backstage effects; but I'll give you plain, straightforward facts enough before I'm through, so sit tight, sir! You've had your little show, but this is the Inspector's and mine. I'm going to prove that 'twas Hoyos himself that faced Mrs. Jarvis there."

"Can—can this be true?" Calvin Norwood's shaking lips could scarcely frame the words. "But how did he get in the museum?"

"I'm coming to that," responded McCarty. "We haven't found out yet how he got out of the river years ago, nor where the body came from that was dressed in his clothes and with his jewelry and all, but the Inspector can prove that Hoyos found it mighty convenient to disappear just then and start all over again; not only on account of the girl, but because his luck had gone against him in Wall street and he'd forged some big checks to cover his losses. We're still working on his record during the past 10 years, but we know that he's traveled under different names and been in a lot of shady transactions. It's a safe bet that he didn't know the little convent girl he'd tricked into marriage was an heiress, or he would have stuck to her till he'd got her fortune away from her. He must have been a surprised man when somehow, a year ago, he found out that she had become the wealthy and prominent Mrs. Oliver Jarvis.

"He sent her the cake in order to get the word 'Noel' to her notice in such a fashion that no one except her would guess what it meant, and to pave the way for the blackmail later."

Wade Terhune laughed sneeringly.

"He evidently did not count upon your phenomenal guessing powers, my dear McCarty! To the merely scientific and I may add uninspired mind it would seem a far cry from Leonidas Hoyos to a frosted Christmas cake, but I have no doubt that you can supply the connection?"

McCarty's face reddened at the taunting tone, but he replied quietly.

"Perhaps I can, sir. You've heard, I dare say, of nicknames, and the like. You'd hardly think, perhaps that a man like Hoyos would be called pet names"——

"What utter rot!" Terhune's coolness was deserting him. "It is only a certain type of man whose personality invites nicknames, and your Hoyos is not of that breed. Are you trying to show that the man was called 'Noel'?"

"Not trying to, Mr. Terhune; I am showing it." McCarty drew himself up. "Now, if you'd been saddled with a name like 'Leonidas' it stands to reason that your friends wouldn't be twisting their tongues over it except on special occasions. They'd be cutting it short and calling you 'Leon,' most likely. Supposing the girl that loved you found out by accident that those four letters turned backward spelled 'Noel,' which means Christmas, and decided for a reason to call you that, 'twould not be such a far cry after all."

"Preposterous!" Terhune exclaimed. "That is the most ridiculous, far-fetched thing you've tried to insult our intelligence with tonight. You surely cannot expect us to accept it!"

"'Far-fetched' is right," McCarty smiled. "For it's from New Orleans I fetched it, sir, from the lady who was Evelyn Beaudet's best friend when they were girls together at the convent."

"Loretta Sawtelle!" exclaimed Oliver Jarvis.

"The same, sir. She'd helped the elopement along and 'twas she told me how the pet name of 'Noel' came about. When the girl he married found that his name spelled a word meaning 'Christmas' she called him that because Christmas was also her birthday, and a fine birthday present she got in him; but no matter!

"You see, when he sent her the cake last year, the whole point was that she must think he was dead and that she had killed him, and somebody else who knew was threatening to squeal on her for murder. It worked, too, only along about October he must have found bigger game and decided to let up on blackmailing her; maybe he put a message in macaroni paste under the bush telling her so, but that's only another guess, Mr. Terhune. Anyway, if he learned that she was planning to go abroad he must have been just as well pleased to get her out of the way, for the new scheme he had in mind would have brought him in touch with her world.

"Those macaroni paste letters were masterpieces, at that, for they took in the whole alphabet from 'a' to 'z' He was thorough, that Hoyos, I'll say that for him! Thorough, but in one thing just an hour too late! However, I'm coming to that.

"He quit blackmailing her, and then he, too, heard about those letters being still in existence and that Mr. Norwood had bought them for his collection. He wanted to get them as badly as Mrs. Jarvis did, for they would be absolute proof to hold over her head in case he ever needed in the future to use his power over her. He managed to get possession of a key to the Norwood house, but the door to the museum itself he opened with a spider.

"What happened when the two of them met there we don't have to guess entirely, for, unknown to either of them at the time there was a witness, a third party, who listened in on the scene long enough to hear about the secret Mrs. Jarvis had kept all those years. He crept away, kind of stunned with the news, his only thought being to keep her from ever suspecting that he knew. Then that night her murdered body was discovered and he was nearly out of his head with self-reproach, thinking how he might have prevented her death if only he hadn't gone away and left them there in the museum together. He had one clue to the man; the sound of his voice, which was forever ringing in his ears, and all that next week he kept thinking he heard it again and blaming his brain for the tricks it was playing on him."

McCarty paused as his glance traveled along the semi circle of tense, set faces. Only the sound of a sharply drawn breath broke the stillness until he spoke again with deep solemnity.

"Capt. Marchal did not kill himself. He was murdered, shot down in cold blood by the same hand that had strangled Mrs. Jarvis."

With his last word the tension which had held the others in leash snapped like a tautly-strung wire, and instantly the room was in confusion. Calvin Norwood, Oliver Jarvis and Wade Terhune had all three sprung to their feet and the former cried excitedly:

"I knew it! I knew Victor was neither insane nor a coward! He'd made too gallant a record in the war, too brave a fight afterward to go under and take his own life just because a whippersnapper of a detective tried to fasten the responsibility for the crime on him rather than admit his own failure to find the real murderer!"

He turned and glared with savage exultation upon Wade Terhune, who ignored him in cold disdain and advanced sneeringly to McCarty.

"I've listened very patiently to your ingenious though highly fanciful tale, my dear McCarty, but this is a little too much! Marchal was a suicide; the powder marks about the wound alone showed that, for the position of the furniture in the room precluded the possibility of anyone having approached him closely enough to have fired the shot."

"That's just what the murderer figured on making everyone believe, Mr. Terhune, and he took you in 32 Years as a Soldier of Humanity . . in Frozen Labrador . .

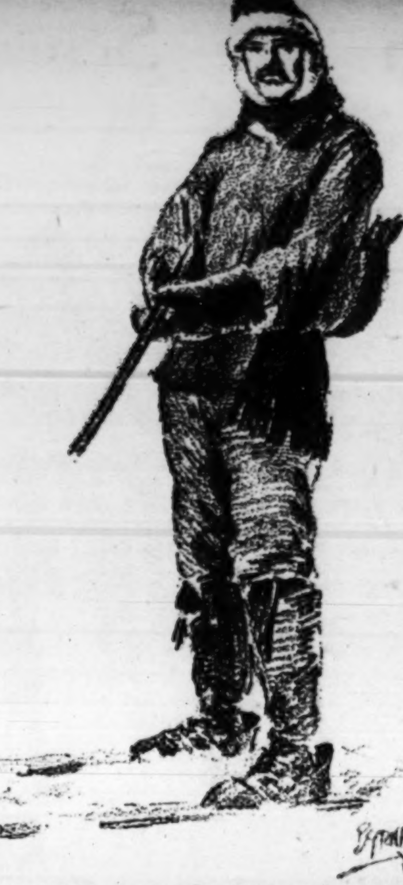
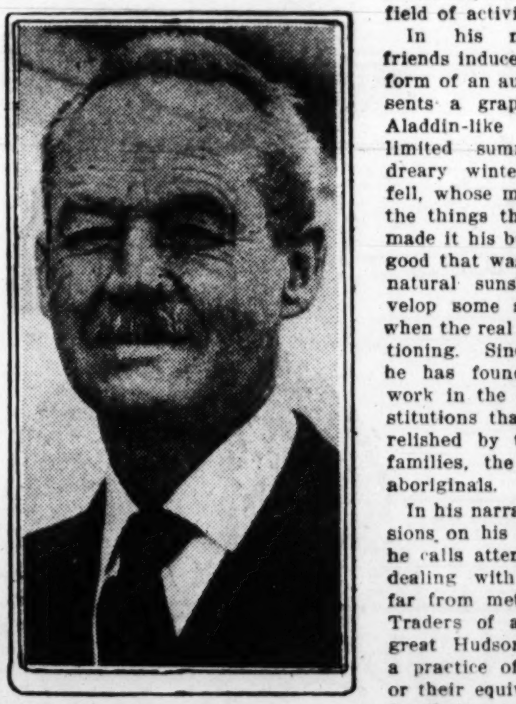
Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell, in his autobiography, tells why this bleak country holds such a fascination for him — How he reformed some trading methods—Many lovable traits in the primitive settlers, whose sustenance is derived from the seas and ice pans -o- -o- -o-



Labrador's icy breath holds no terrors for the Missionary-Doctor, who, with gun and dogs, has explored the wildest places in this rocky, snow-covered stretch of wilds.

WHEN Labrador is mentioned in almost any company, the name of Grenfell quite naturally comes to mind, since it is to Dr. Wilfred Thomason Grenfell that the reading world is indebted for its dependable data of this great peninsula of the far North Atlantic, where the best of seals and the largest of icebergs form the principal crops. This great frozen empire of a half-million square miles, with its countless fiords, inlets, islands, gigantic ice pans; its regular and transitory inhabitants, their sorrows, sufferings and joys, have all been discovered and rediscovered by the missionary-doctor who has spent his entire life, since leaving Oxford University, 32 years ago, in a labor of love among the deep-sea fishermen in the chilling blasts of the Far North.



Dr. Wilfred Thomason Grenfell.

No traveler who has visited Labrador, no matter how long his stay, has ever explored this great stretch of territory as it has been done by Grenfell. In his mission as doctor and consoler of the afflicted of all kinds he has covered the wide expanse from its fiftieth to its sixty-third degree of north latitude. He has gone into its wildest and most forbidding nooks and corners and has had innumerable escapes from disaster.

In his latest Labrador book, entitled "A Labrador Doctor" (Houghton-Mifflin Co.) he has given what he chooses to call "An Open-Air Autobiography." This covers his entire life and tells how he happened to decide upon the life work that he has pursued with such genuine enthusiasm for so many years.

When Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell decided, more than 30 years ago, to give up his comfortable hospital work in London and the prospect of a settled life in an up-to-the-minute civilization, with a lucrative professional practice, to devote his life to the deep-sea fishermen of the far northern lands and seas he had some very disagreeable impressions forced upon him when he began reading up his subject. One of the first pieces that engaged his study was a map prepared by an old-time cartographer, who made this observation on the reverse side:

"Labrador was discovered by the English. There is nothing in it of any value."

This was rather calculated to chill enthusiasm, but it was real cheer in comparison with the next addition to his store of advance information. This historian dismissed the half-million square miles north of Newfoundland in this terse manner, carrying with it the suggestion that the writer considered it a very undesirable place for any class of settlers. 'Twas thus he registered his disgust:

"God made the world in five days, made Labrador on the sixth and spent the seventh throwing stones at it."

But the uninviting aspects thus suggested did not deter Grenfell a particle in his purpose to go to the North and execute the program he had definitely sketched out in his mind. He figured that there was useful employment for him in such places and with his medical and surgical skill, his faith in God and his willingness to serve mankind's most ill-favored, he was ready to sacrifice comforts and rough it to any extent that was necessary. Such was the determination of the London doctor, who began his service in the North Sea with the first hospital ship fitted out exclusively for fishermen, and who established stations and comforts for them from the Bay of Biscay to Iceland. It was in 1892 that he stepped ashore, or rather on ice, at Labrador, and there has been his field of activity ever since.

In his newest book, which friends induced him to issue in the form of an autobiography, he presents a graphic picture of this Aladdin-like land, through the limited summer and the long, dreary winters. But Dr. Grenfell, whose mission was to dispel the things that suggested gloom, made it his business to get all the good that was possible out of the natural sunshine and then develop some sort of a substitute when the real article was not functioning. Since his arrival there he has found an abundance of work in the establishment of institutions that have been greatly relished by the fishermen, their families, the Eskimo and other aboriginals.

In his narrative of early impressions on his arrival in Labrador, he calls attention to a system of dealing with the natives which far from met with his approval. Traders of all kinds, even the great Hudson Bay Co., made it a practice of giving store goods or their equivalent to the natives for their catches, instead of money, and thus managed to keep many of these poor people practically enslaved to these dealers. Commenting on this method of dealing with the natives, he writes:

"All the length and breadth of the coast, the poorer people would show me their 'settling up,' as they called their accounts, though many never got as far as having any 'settling up' given them—so they lived and died in debt to their merchant. They never knew the independence of a dollar in their pockets and the consequent incentive and value of thrift. It was incredible to me that even large concerns like the Hudson Bay Co. would not pay in cash for valuable furs, and that so many dealers in the necessities of life should be still able to hold free men in economic bondage. It seemed a veritable chapter from 'Through a Looking Glass to hear the 'grocer' and 'haberdasher' talking of 'my people,' meaning their patrons, and holding over them the whip of refusal to sell them necessities in their hour of need if at any time they dealt with outsiders, however much to their advantage such a course might be.

"A few years later a man brought a silver fox skin aboard my ship, just such a one as I had been requested by an English lady to secure for her. As fulfilling such a request would involve me in hostilities (which, however, I do not think were useless), I asked the man, who was wretchedly poor, if he owed the skin to the trader.

"'I am in debt,' he replied, 'but they will only allow me $8 off my account for this skin, and I want to buy some food.'

"'Very well,' I answered. 'If you will promise to go at once and pay $8 off your debt, I will give you eight gold sovereigns for this skin.'

"To this he agreed, and faithfully carried out the agreement—while the English lady scored a bargain, and I a very black mark in the books of my friend the trader."

Dr. Grenfell found the same fault with the Moravian Mission, which had been maintaining its stations in charge of the Moravian Brethren long before his coming to Labrador. On this subject he wrote:

"The Moravian Mission is a trading mission. This trading policy is in some respects in its favor. It is unquestionably part of a message of real love to a brother to put within his reach at reasonable rates those adjuncts of civilized life that help to make less onerous his hard lot. * * * Trade, however, is always a difficult form of charity, and the barter system, common to this coast, being in vogue at the Moravian Missions stations also, practically every Eskimo was in debt to them. In reality this caused a vicious circle, for it encouraged directly the outstanding fault of the Eskimo, his readiness to leave the morrow to care for itself, so long as he does not starve today. Like a race of children, they need the stimulus of necessity to make them get out and do their best while the opportunity exists. In the past 26 years I have made many voyages to one and another of the stations of the Brethren, and have learned to love them all very sincerely as individuals, though their mission policies are their own and not mine."

It was the trading methods in use that led Dr. Grenfell, after some experimentation, to start stores by way of discouraging the practice. Of this experience he writes:

"It was experiments like this which led me in later years to start the small co-operative distributive stores, in spite of the knowledge of the opposition and criticism it would involve. How can one preach the gospel of love to hungry people by sermons, or a gospel of healing to underfed children by pills, while one feels that practical teaching in home economics is what one would most wish if in their position? The more broad-minded critics themselves privately acknowledged this to me. One day a Northern furrier, an excellent and more intelligent man than ordinary, came to me as a Magistrate to insist that a trading company keep its bargain by paying him in cash for

A NEW, INTENSIVE, DETECTIVE STORY

BY ISABEL OSTRANDER,

Author of "The Clue in the Air," "At 1:30," Etc.

THE STORY FROM THE START.

The beautiful Mrs. Oliver Jarvis has been mysteriously murdered. Police Inspector Druet and Wade Terhune, an unofficial criminologist, aided by the practical ex-Roundsman McCarty and his fireman friend, Dennis Riordan, found the body of the victim strangely hidden in a grewsome private museum of crime kept as a hobby by the elderly Calvin Norwood. These five men, with Oliver Jarvis, husband of the murdered woman, are engaged in systematically working out a number of contradictory clews, which point alternately to various likely and unlikely persons, only to end in futile entanglement. One of these clues, however, McCarty and his friend Dennis have succeeded in linking up with positive evidence that blackmail had preceded the crime of murder, and this evidently in connection with the bygone case of the notorious Hoyos, who disappeared under sinister circumstances 10 years before.

McCarty has now staged a dramatic denouement in his final solution of the murder mystery.

CHAPTER XXII.

McCARTY'S SEANCE.

THE bachelor quarters over the antique shop presented a strange and unwonted aspect that evening. The sooty hearth had been scrubbed until it shone, cigar boxes, stray matches, newspapers and the usual litter to be found in the wake of the undomesticated male had miraculously disappeared, and an unnatural and self-conscious state of cleanliness and order prevailed.

McCarty, too, seemed abnormally solemn as he greeted Inspector Druet and ushered his two assistants into the small inner bedroom.

"You'll wait here, boys," he announced. "No smoking, mind, for there'll be a lady present, and besides I don't want the rest of them that's coming to know you're here till I give the word, but when I do, look sharp!"

"You've got everything arranged?" the Inspector asked in a hurried undertone.

McCarty nodded.

"There'll be no hitch. I'm only asking one thing of you, sir; don't interrupt me, no matter what I say, and for the love of God, don't contradict me! I'll be using your name pretty free, but you'll see in the end that 'twas right and proper I should, if you've only the patience to wait for it."

"I'll give you your head, Mac," promised the Inspector. "I wish you would put me wise as to what is coming off, but I'll have to take your word for it that you know what you're about. Are you sure the man we're after will show up?"

A knock upon the door prevented McCarty's immediate reply and he ushered in a tall woman, dressed in black, whose features were all but concealed by a heavy veil.

"Good-evening, ma'am." There was an exaggeration of deference in McCarty's manner as he motioned toward the inner room. "I'll ask you to sit in here, please, with these two gentlemen. You've got it all straight about your part of it?"

He added the last in a lowered tone, and the woman nodded and throwing back her veil revealed a face unknown to the Inspector; a face wherein bold, black eyes snapped resolutely and grim lines about the compressed lips left no doubt as to the stern import of her errand.

Martin and Yost rose respectfully as she entered the inner room, but she ignored their presence and seated herself just beyond the range of vision from the doorway.

"Who is she, Mac?" the Inspector urged. "You'll tell me that much, at least!"

"Whist, now!" McCarty cautioned. "There's someone else coming up the stairs."

The door leading to the hall opened slowly and Dennis Riordan craned his neck through the aperture.

"Is it all right?" he demanded in a sepulchral whisper.

"Sure! Come in, Denny." McCarty bustled forward. "Sit you down over there by the window and mind you don't let a peep out of you, no matter what happens."

"But where is she?" Dennis gazed about him in bewilderment. "I could have sworn I saw a woman coming in here; a woman with a long, black veil!"

"You'll be seeing more than that before the night's over!" retorted McCarty impatiently.

The arrival of Vivaseur and Calvin Norwood, the former frankly curious, the latter laboring under an agitation which he strove in vain to conceal, precluded further talk, and Dennis subsided. The newcomers were scarcely seated when Wade Terhune, accompanied by his client, Oliver Jarvis, appeared upon the scene.

McCarty had arranged the chairs so that they formed a rough semi-circle facing the bedroom door and now he stepped before it and cleared his throat.

"You all know that I've no longer any regular connection with the Police Department," he began, "but now and again when Inspector Druet needs me I go back as a special officer on his staff. I've been working on this investigation with him and he wants me to tell you what progress we've made. That's right, isn't it, sir?"

He appealed to the Inspector and the latter nodded speechlessly in confirmation.

"To do that I'll have to go back a good bit and I'll ask you to bear with me, for it's all a part of the story.

"A matter of 11 years ago, in 1906, in a convent away down South of the Mississippi River, there was a young girl of 16 or thereabouts who fell in love with a dark, handsome fellow calling himself Leon Hoguet and he'd come ashore from a grand yacht anchored just off the bank. One night the girl ran away and married him, but he turned out to be a roystering blackguard and deserted her in less than three months."

Oliver Jarvis uttered a sharp exclamation beneath his breath and the others stared spellbound, but McCarty continued as though unconscious of the impression his opening words had created.

"The girl went back heartbroken to her guardian in New Orleans and he took her in and hid the scandal of it. He tried, unsuccessfully, to find the scoundrel, but the girl must have known where to reach him, for between then and spring she wrote him at least two letters. The first was a poor, pitiful cry to him to come back to the little wife he had deserted, but she must have learned something of his true character in the meantime, for the second letter threatened that if he had deceived her she would follow him to the ends of the earth, and she kept her word.

"Leon Hoguet had sold his yacht to a wealthy planter and skipped, but up in New York that spring a man named Leonidas Hoyos bought another one and went in for some gay times."

It was the Inspector's turn to start, but McCarty paid him no heed.

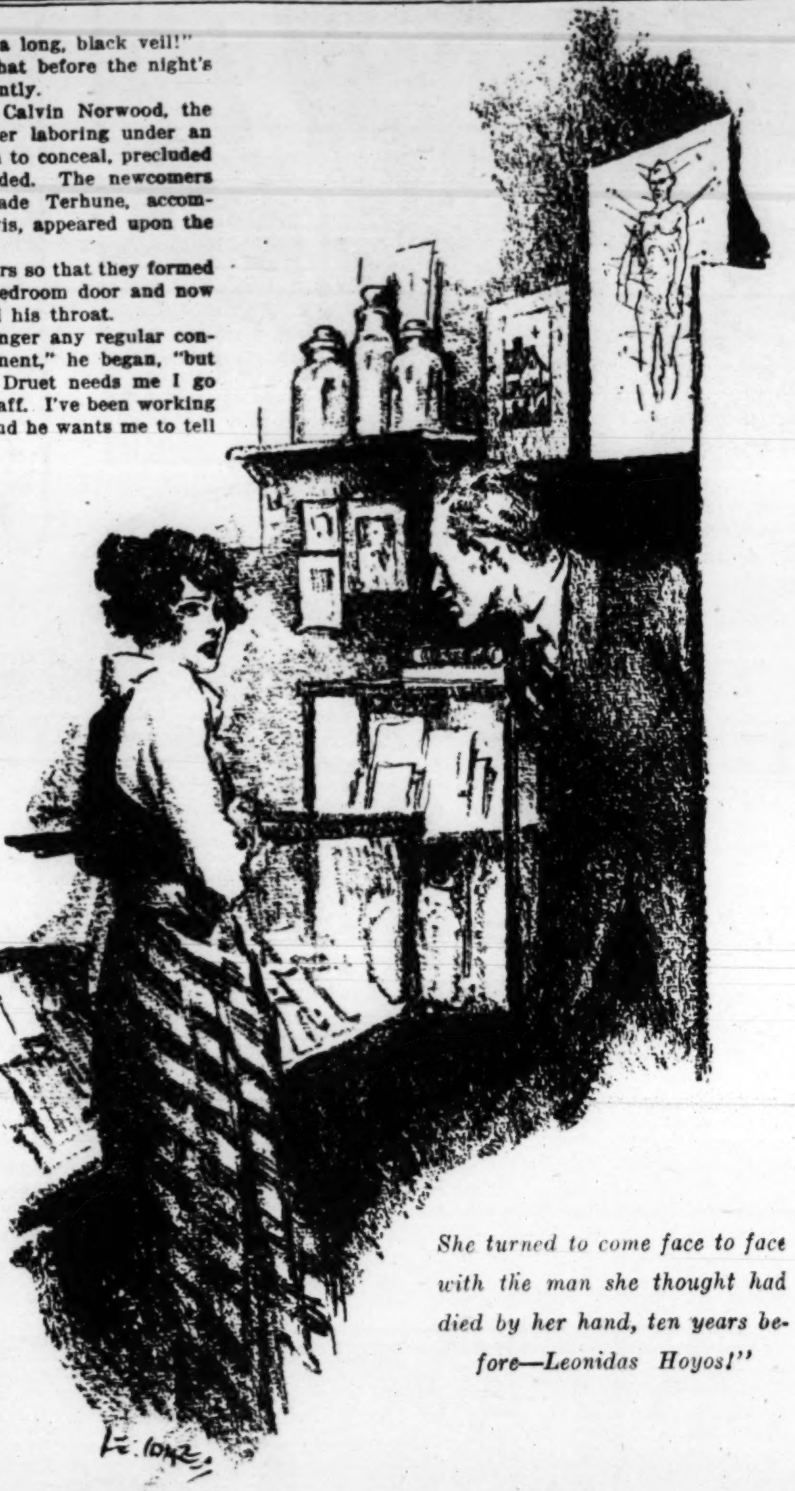
"Now, this Hoyos had appeared first in New York the summer before from nobody knew where, and making a killing in Wall street, he cut quite a swath. During the month that Hoguet was courting the little convent girl Hoyos was absent from the city, and for the next three months he showed up only on flying trips, but after that he came back for good.

"I don't know how the girl down South found out that Hoyos and Hoguet were the same, but I suspect it was through a discharged valet he'd beaten up; the stewardess on the second yacht, the Muette, heard him swear to get even. Anyhow, one night in May—the twenty-sixth it was—when the Muette was lying off in the Hudson, the girl came on board. Hoyos was evidently expecting to see someone else entirely, for when he came into the saloon where he'd directed his guest was to be shown and found out who it was he took good care that none of the crew or the help should get a sight of her face.

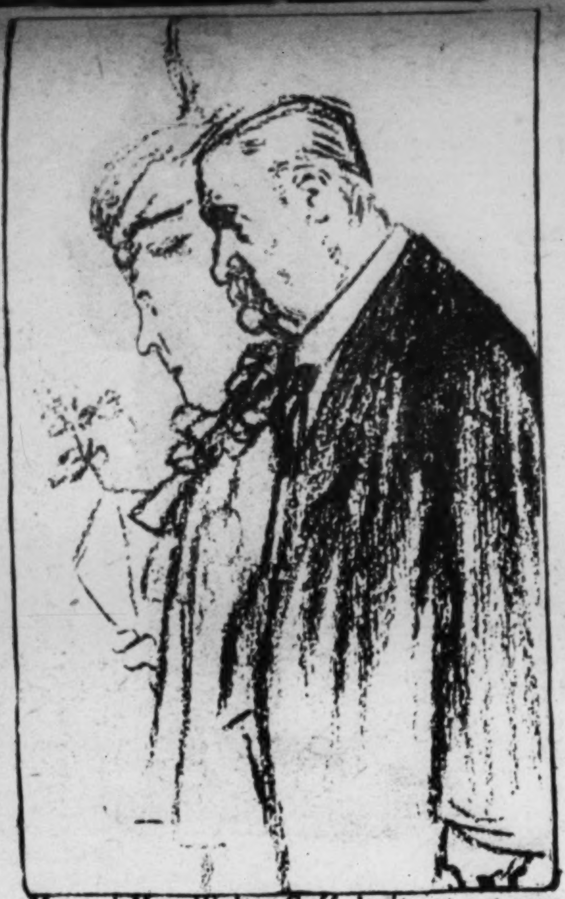
"They had high words, but no one could hear what was said then. They stayed shut up in the saloon and they never touched the food that had been laid out for them, but from the empty bottles scattered around Hoyos must have tanked up on enough champagne to float the whole boat. Later, going on toward midnight, the quarrel broke out again louder than before, the girl crying fit to kill herself and the man shouting and swearing like the brute he was.

"The stewardess on board had her own reasons for hating Hoyos, and when she heard the girl's sobs she felt sorry for her, and crept up and listened at the door.

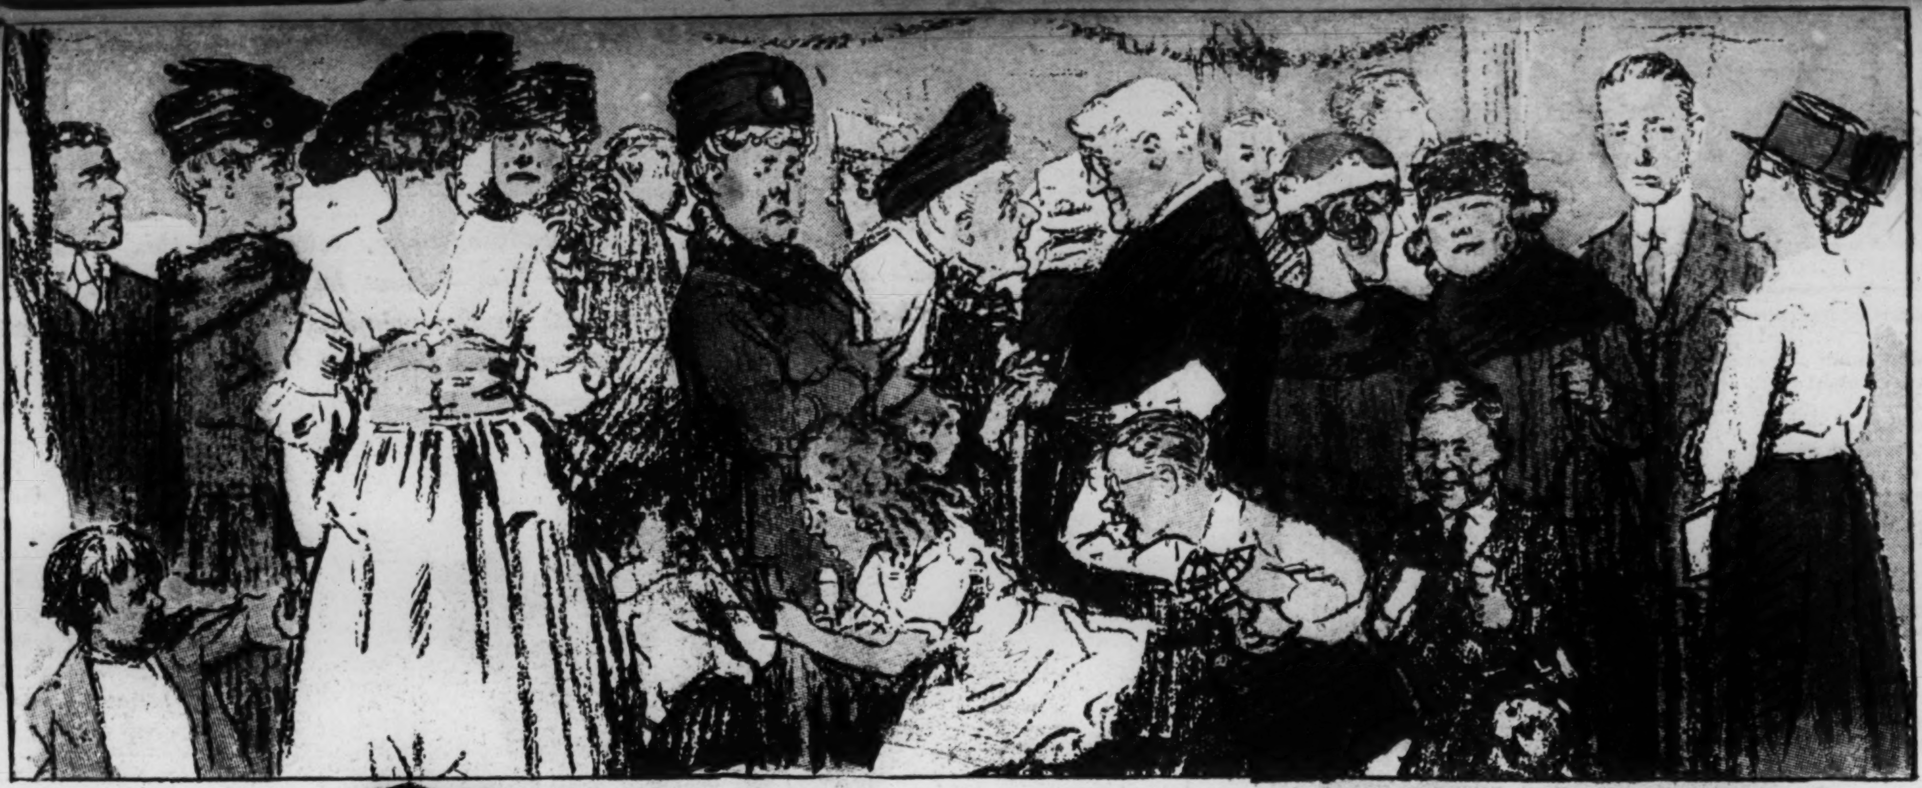
"The girl was pleading first to be taken back, and the stewardess said 'twould have moved the heart of a stone, but he just sneered at her and cursed and finally she demanded her rights as his wife. Then he up and told her were she got off, the blackhearted devil! He'd married other women before her, two or



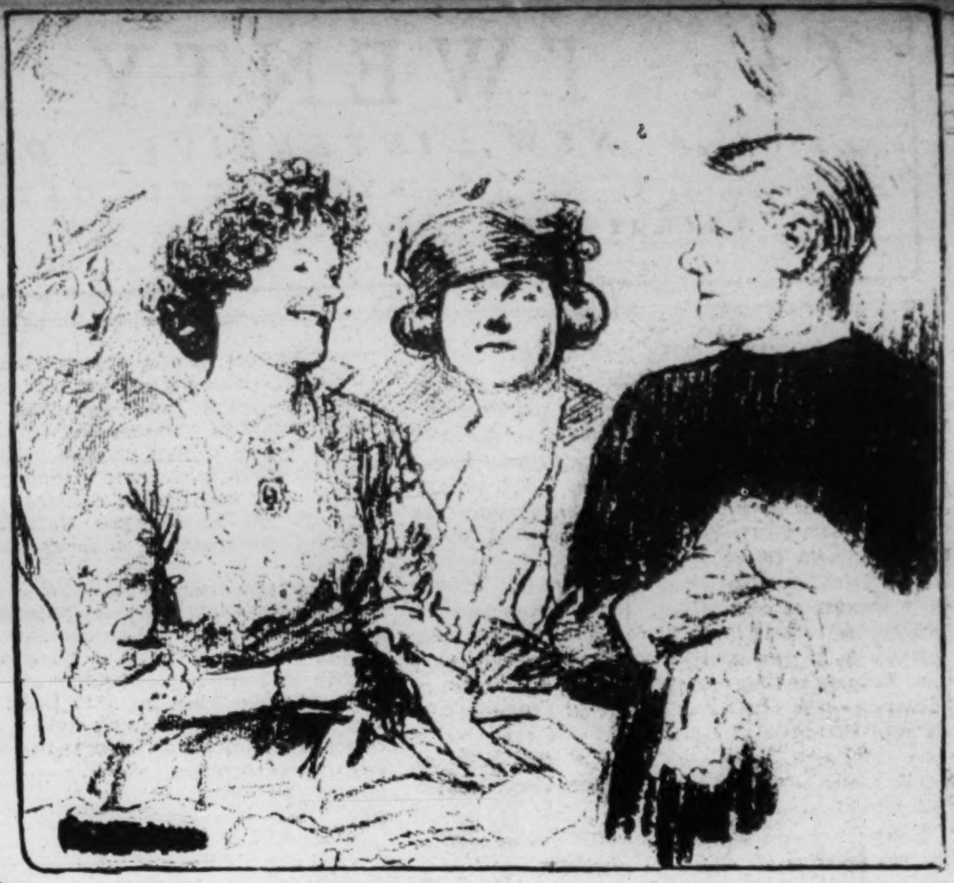
She turned to come face to face with the man she thought had died by her hand, ten years before—Leonidas Hoyos!"



Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cuff don't get out very often, and this is a great treat for them. Really, Mrs. Cuff doesn't remember having had such an outing since the minister died and she saw the funeral ceremony.



The fair in the cellar of the Sunday School, showing the younger set, led by Willie Bruce, very much in evidence. In the center, old Mrs. Speare is telling the rector what a huge success everything is.



An unmarried curate has to be awfully wary if he wants to stay single. Mr. Widge, feeling the safety of numbers, is cutting up and carrying on, as Miss May Belle Meager expresses it, "something awful." He is pretending to run away with something all trimmed with pink rosebuds from the "Vanity Booth."

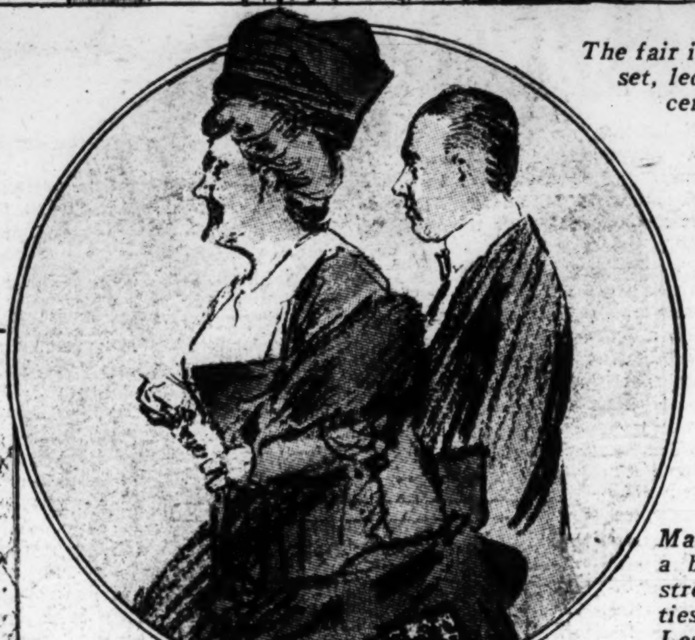
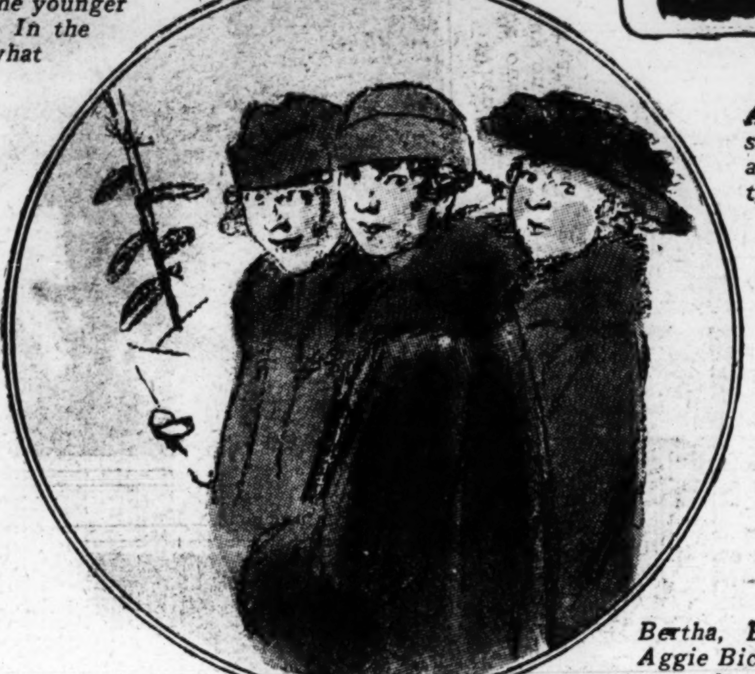
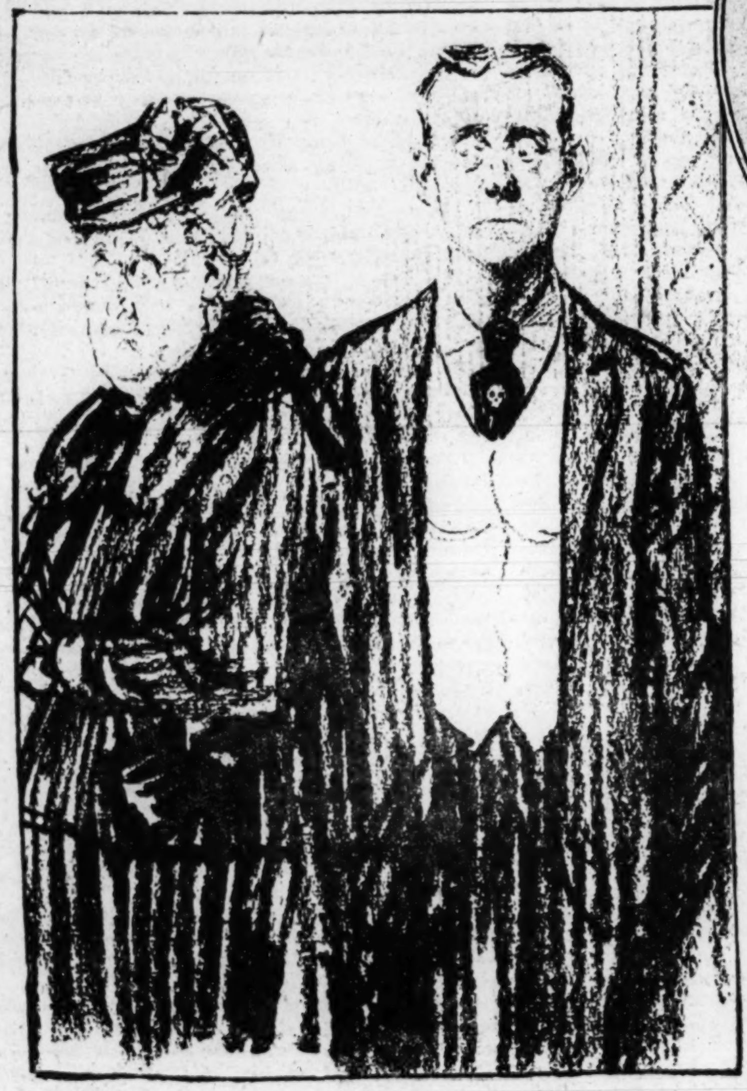
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



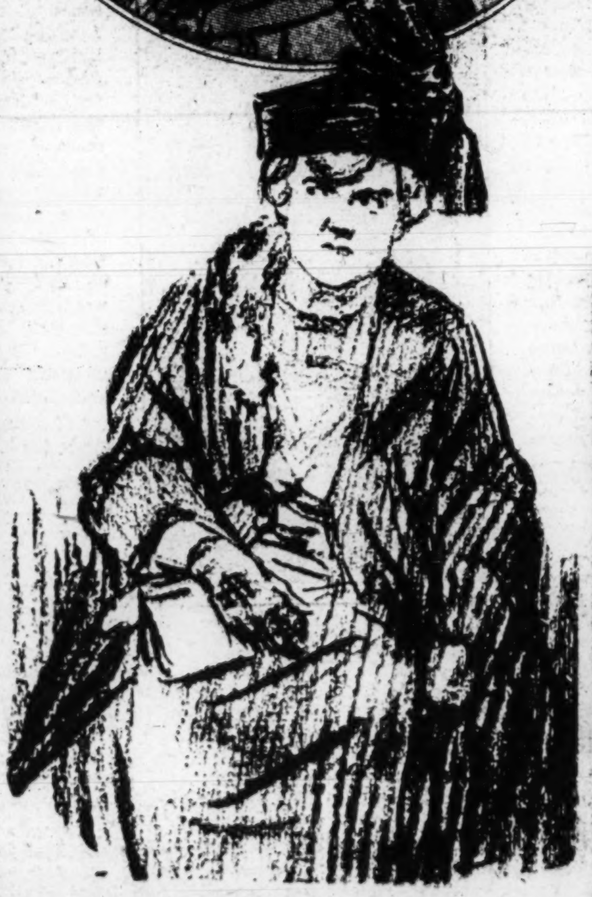
Marshall had just decided to make a break for the movie down the street where the "Bathing Beauties" were showing, when Mrs. Lester Jewell (who was going to make everybody have a good time or know why) swooped down and dragged him off to meet "three lovely girls—who have been sitting all by themselves in a corner all evening—you'll just be crazy about them! Not pretty, you know, but awfully nice girls."



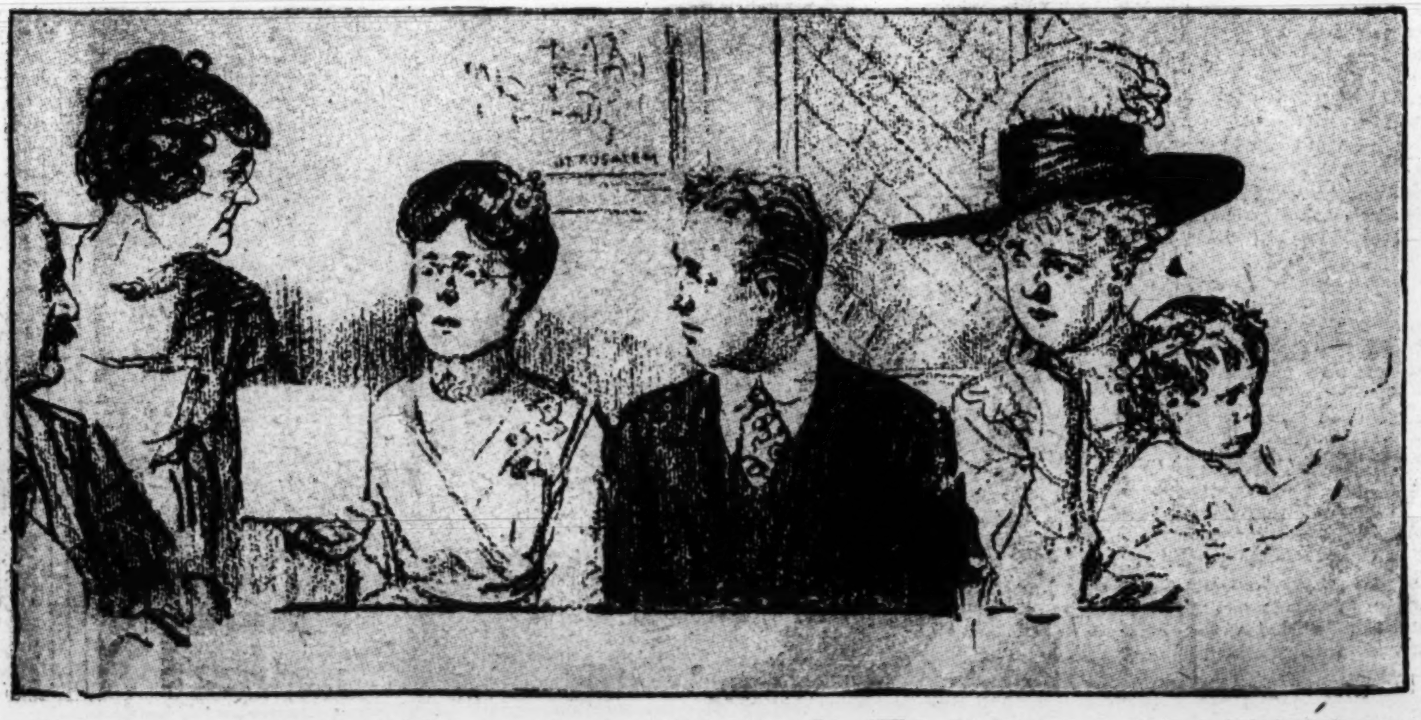
Bertha, Billie and Aggie Bick, who always do everything in unison, are getting ready to bow to some fortunate youth.



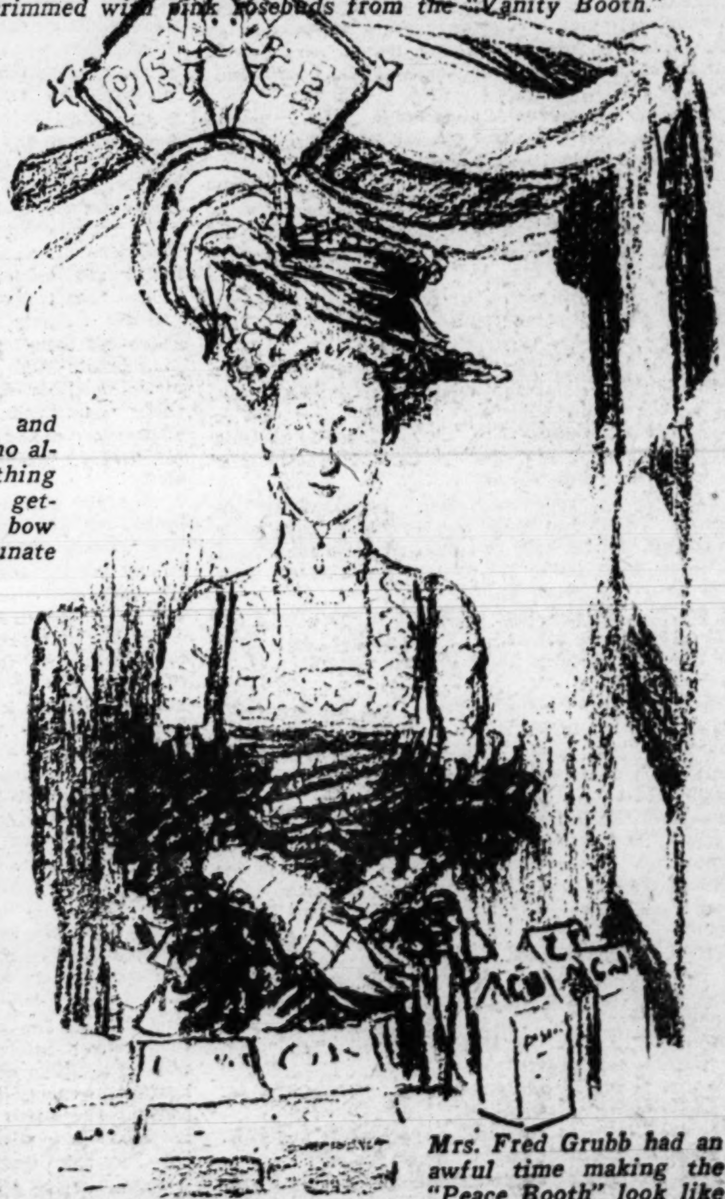
The sexton (who does undertaking and embalming at odd moments) is really awfully good company and almost never talks shop, so they say. But old Mrs. Tripp, who is going on ninety, doesn't know what a jovial soul the sexton is, and doesn't like the way he stares at her. It is Mrs. Tripp's opinion that the sexton is a mercenary man who is always on the lookout for business opportunities.



Mrs. Jones' new slippers hurt her, so she slipped them off. Now she can't get them back on again.



The turkey supper in the parish house. The turkey has just given out, but there's a choice of baked beans or cold tongue.



Mrs. Fred Grubb had an awful time making the "Peace Booth" look like anything. To begin with, the corner florist absolutely refused to lend the dove of peace for the decoration, and little Edna's kewpie had to do instead. And how can you arrange your counter tastefully when all you have to do with are boxes of crackerjack and packages of disinfectant? At least, that's practically all Mrs. Grubb could induce the merchants to donate.

FOR CHRISTMAS AND FOR A LIFETIME

This boy has had THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE in his home for a year and he can explain to you interestingly and correctly all the familiar things which he sees around him. His teacher will tell you that when she wants a quick and intelligent answer from her class, this boy always answers first. He understands many subjects of interest in the papers and magazines and in the conversation of his elders. He has made "a long start in the race for knowledge."

Answers Every Question a Child Can Ask

Why do we grow old?
Who made the first electric light?
How did the days get their names?
Why is a river always running?
Why does lightning strike some things and not others?
Where does the wind begin?
Why does the kettle sing?
Where do thoughts come from?
What makes coal burn?
Why has a star five points?
What is it like at the bottom of the sea?
Why are tears salt?

The Book of Knowledge

The Children's Encyclopedia

10,000 Educational Pictures In Five Languages English French Spanish Italian Portuguese 350 Colored Plates

CURIOSITY—the Great Teacher

CURIOSITY is the beginning of all knowledge. Do you know any subject about which your child has not asked you a dozen questions? Let him ask as many as he likes, and be sure to answer them correctly. That is the parent's most important and most easily neglected duty. If you discourage your child's curiosity you will injure his mind, and the bright boy or girl becomes stupid or indifferent. Through curiosity Columbus discovered America. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is the simplest and most natural method of helping the child to educate himself. IT ANSWERS EVERY QUESTION A CHILD CAN ASK IN PLAIN AND SIMPLE LANGUAGE. So captivating is this great original work to the mind of a child that he absorbs with little effort the profound truths and great facts of the world of knowledge, while reading its delightful pages and looking at the thousands of striking educational pictures.

THE MOST VALUABLE GIFT

The most valuable and most delightful gift for the children this Christmas is THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE, The Children's Encyclopedia, because it is everything rolled into one great, big, beautiful gift. It appeals with an almost equal fascination to every member of the family, with its 10,000 striking educational pictures, many in colors. The 16 Great Departments, Nature, Science, History, Biography, Astronomy, Physiology, Art, Poetry, Literature and Educational Occupations, give the child or adult a working knowledge of the world, the earth, the air, the sea, and the works of men. The whole wonderful world is brought within the reach of the mind of a child. Make this Christmas memorable by adding THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE to the life of the HOME.

YOUR CHILD'S CHANCE

In round numbers, what is your child's chance to become successful? If uneducated, he has one chance out of 150,000; with a common school education, 4 chances; with a high school education, 87 chances; with a college education, 800 chances; WITH THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE in the home, every chance. It is not a luxury, it is an absolute necessity. It is an INVESTMENT in your child's future which will pay dividends as long as he lives. In over 600,000 homes today the children are being educated with THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE. Give your child his chance to compete with them.

Built around a Park

You can live out of doors the year 'round in the blue and gold of ocean, bay and sunshine at San Diego, California.

This is the city of perpetual Spring—with its miles of vine-clad homes and lawns surrounding the third largest park in America, always gorgeous with flowers.

There's health and happiness for everyone, with sunshine more than 350 days each year, and the zest of every recreation on land or water.

Games in the great stadium overlooking bay and ocean, and the daily open-air pipe organ recital where seats are provided free for thousands among flowers and birds, are among the community recreations in January.

In beauty, climate and diversion you will find here the ideal location for your permanent home.

Every day is an adventure in happiness at

San Diego California

Through Pullman service between San Diego and Chicago on the new San Diego & Arizona Railway, in connection with the Rock Island and Southern Pacific, commences December 10th, 1919. A delightful trip in Winter months through mild climate and new and interesting country.

The United States Government is spending more than twenty million dollars in San Diego in permanent stations for its air, land and sea forces, because official tests have proved the advantages, in comfort and efficiency, of its equable climate and continuous sunshine.

The new rifle outfit for boys

EVERY American boy ought to know how to shoot—and here's a shooting outfit that makes it easy for every boy to learn.

Everything a boy could possibly need for rifle shooting, all packed in a trim, handsome carrying case—that's the new W. J. R. C. Range Kit.

A .22 caliber bolt action rifle—a real Winchester, with all the famous Winchester strength and accuracy—is the big thing in the kit. Then there's a cartridge belt, a gun case, plenty of ammunition and targets, and a complete cleaning outfit.

The new Range Kit is the official outfit of the Winchester Junior Rifle Corps. With this equipment any boy can compete for the famous Winchester trophies, the Marksman, Sharpshooter and Expert Rifleman medals. Thousands of American boys are now winning these rewards for skill.

Each outfit contains a copy of the W. J. R. C. Rule Book, which tells how to handle a rifle safely, and describes all the fine points of shooting. It also gives complete instructions for laying out a safe rifle range, either indoors or outdoors.

What fun a boy can have with a real Winchester rifle! He can spend hours of wonderful sport on the target range—he can go out and bag rabbits and squirrels—he can shoot rats, hawks, weasels and other marauding pests.

The W. J. R. C. Range Kit makes an ideal Christmas present for any boy.

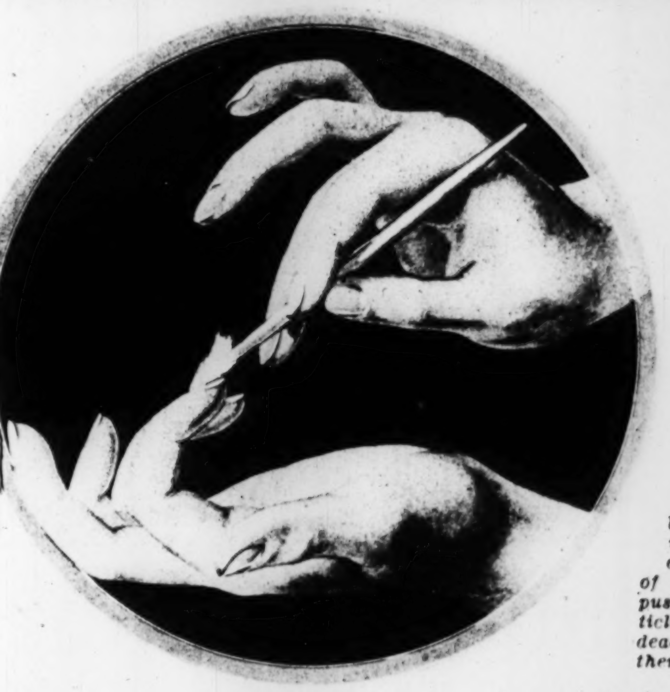
CUTEX
CUTEX

Never cut the cuticle. Cutting makes rough, ragged edges and causes hangnails a few days after manicuring.



Wrap a little absorbent cotton around the end of an orange stick and dip it into the bottle. Carefully work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pushing back the cuticle. Wipe off the dead surplus cuticle, then wash the hands.

Every day your nails can look well-kept

It is not a difficult matter to have your nails look exquisitely well groomed all the time. It is simply a matter of knowing how.

First, remember not to cut the cuticle. When the cuticle is trimmed or cut, the skin around the base of the nail soon becomes dry and ragged. It roughs up, forms hangnails and makes your whole hand unattractive.

All specialists agree that in caring for the nails, your effort should be to keep the cuticle unbroken.

You can have shapely, symmetrical nails without clipping or cutting. Cutex is absolutely harmless. The moment you use it you realize you have at last found the one simple, successful way to take care of the cuticle—a way that will keep it trim.

People who have been cutting the cuticle find that no matter how much they have abused it, Cutex soon smooths away the rough skin around the base of the nails and quickly makes it even and firm.

By following the directions given under the illustrations, you can always keep your nails in the most perfect condition. Do this regularly as you file or cut your nails, and you will always in future be proud of your nails.

CUTEX NAIL WHITE
CUTEX

Apply Cutex Nail White underneath the nails directly from tube.

Cutex Cake Polish gives the nails a brilliant water-proof finish.

Cutex, the cuticle remover, comes in 35c and 65c bottles. Cutex Nail White, Cutex Nail Polish, in cake, paste, powder, liquid or stick form, and Cutex Cold Cream, are each 35c.

Sneak out the cellar window. I'll wait at the club.
WIFEY, I'M GONNA THROW SOME COAL INTO THE FURNACE. IT'S GETTING COLD.
BUT MUTT, THE MAID JUST NOW STIRRED UP THE FIRE.
I'LL SAY SHE DID
IT SEEMS VERY COZY IN HERE TO ME.
BUT WE GOTTA KEEP IT A LITTLE WARMER ON ACCOUNT OF LITTLE CICERO!
IT'S WARM ENOUGH NOW, POP.
NOW TO SLIP ON MY HAT AND COAT AND BEAT IT. SHE NEVER ALLOWS ME OUT OF THE HOUSE ANYMORE AT NIGHTS, BUT I'LL FOOL HER.
M-M-M! I WONDER? !??!!
IF POP MAKES A HOTTER FIRE I'LL HAVE TO DIG UP A FAN.
FINE! SHE ISN'T WISE TO MY GAME. NOW TO SCRAMBLE OUT OF THE WINDOW AND JOIN JEFF AT THE CLUB.
IT'S A SHAME TO FOOL THE OLD GIRL LIKE THIS BUT I'D DIE IF I HAD TO STAY IN ALL EVENING.
WHERE ARE YOU GOING, MUTT?
HUH?
TEE HEE!
NOWHERE!
MUTT'S THREE HOURS LATE. I GUESS HE WAS AFRAID TO GO OUT IN THE STORM. I'LL WAIT ANOTHER HOUR.
